In his proposed 1991 budget, President Bush acknowledged the government's 40-year legacy of environmental neglect and asked Congress for a $778 million increase in cleanup money for next year.

Overall, Bush estimated the government faced cleanup costs ranging from $140 billion to $200 billion, but the state report questioned that estimate, noting the Energy Department envisioned spending between $35 billion to $65 billion on just one facility, the Hanford nuclear reservation in Washington.

WARSAW, POLAND (FEB. 7) UPI - The leader of Poland's formerly communist dominated unions warned Wednesday that the Solidarity-led government may be toppled by striking Poles bitter over recent price hikes.

Alfred Miodowicz, a former Politburo member in the now-disbanded Communist Party and leader of the 7 million strong OPZZ labor federation, also charged Solidarity will try to usurp power in the provinces during local government elections scheduled for April.

Miodowicz said at a news conference he is not against the economic austerity measures approved by Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki to streamline an economy devastated by the communist rule.

But the union leader said prices of some consumer goods, including food, had been increased so much that demand had plummeted, causing many companies to lay off workers.

''About 20 percent of workers in the city of Lodz were told to take two-week (unpaid) vacations because stores are filled with the textile products nobody wants to buy,'' Miodowicz said.

Lodz, Poland's textile center, has a population of 160,000. The regional Solidarity leader in the city, Andrzej Slowik, confirmed five major textile factories had shut down for two weeks.

A government source said the Polish Autosan bus plant in southeastern Poland had not sold a single bus this year and farmers have stopped buying tractors because they are too expensive following the latest round of drastic hikes.

Workers in several coal mines staged a walkout last month to protest the price hikes, the first mass strike under the months-old Solidarity government, but the strikers eventually returned to their jobs.

Miodowicz predicted the spiraling price increases would spur more strikes and would lead to Solidarity's downfall.

''It may be such an element that will sweep away everything,'' he said.

At the news conference, Miodowicz said he had no intention of joining a new political party.

Miodowicz, whose unions opposed the rise of Solidarity, invited Solidarity leader Lech Walesa to participate in a television debate last year that paved the way for the Solidarity-communist government roundtable talks a year ago.

The talks resulted in the introduction of democratic reforms and the formation of the first noncommunist government in the East bloc in four decades.

Turning to elections to local councils scheduled for April, Miodowicz said Solidarity will use them to solidify its power base.

Communists remained in control of local offices after Solidarity's June 1989 landslide in parliamentary elections.

''The elections boil down to taking over power in the provinces,'' Miodowicz said.

Jerzy Regulski, who is heading Solidarity's election campaign, said they will be another difficult task for the union.

''We have not had any experience in Poland in local councils for 50 years now,'' he said.

The elections are expected to bring another triumph for Solidarity, with several thousand Solidarity councilmen expected to take over jobs from former communist officials.

DETROIT (FEB. 7) UPI - German carmaker Mercedes-Benz said Wednesday it will offer its first turbocharged diesel cars in North America since late 1987 and they are cleaner, quieter, and more responsive than earlier models.

The 300D 2.5 Turbo has been added to its midsized sedan line. It is powered by a 2.5 liter five-cylinder engine that delivers 121 horsepower and 33 mpg on the highway. Priced at $39,700, it is about $250 less than its gasoline-engined counterpart.

The 350 SDL Turbo is based on Mercedes' full-sized S-class sedan, and priced at $56,800, or the same as the gasoline version. It has a 134hp, 3.5 liter six-sylinder engine, Mercedes' largest diesel motor ever and able to return 25 mpg.

The new models, shown to journalists in Florida Thursday, will be sold in all states except California, where they are unable to meet the more stringent emission standards, despite having new technology to reduce soot levels.

Company spokesman A.B. Shuman denied that Mercedes' expanded line of diesel offerings is an effort by the company to raise its corporate average fuel economy (CAFE) ratings.

"We expect to sell only about 4,000 of the new models this year, which would raise our CAFE level by only a quarter of a mile per gallon," Shuman said. Mercedes paid $18.3 million for 1988 after missing the government-mandated standard of 26 mpg by 4.7 mpg for that model year.

Mercedes will pay fines for 1989 and 1990 as well, when the CAFE was raised to 26.5 mpg and 27.5 mpg, respectively, he said. Many of Mercedes' larger gasoline-powered sedans are subject to gas guzzler taxes ranging as high as $1,500 which buyers must pay.

Although its diesels have lower carbon dioxide levels than its gas-engined cars, Mercedes' chief concern is the nitrogen oxide standard, now set at 1.0 gram per mile, Shuman said, acknowledging that it would not be allowed to continue selling its turbo diesel cars if the NOx standard was tightened. "We are working on technologies that would allow us to meet future standards," he said. "That is the big problem."

Mercedes discontinued selling its turbo diesel cars in North America after 1987, concerned about government tailpipe emission standards and the waning popularity of diesel cars in general. However, it continued sales of its small 190D 2.5 sedan in 1988 and 1989.

"That was more for symbolic reasons because of the small sales volume," Shuman said. "It was to show Mercedes diesel owners that we intended to remain in this market."

There are currently about 400,000 Mercedes diesel owners in the United States, the company estimates. "About 50,000 or 60,000 of them are owners with cars of the right vintage that may be looking for a new car," Shuman said. "Our real motivation is satisfy that market."

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - Microchip-style fuel cells that convert a mixture of gases into electricity may offer a new, low-cost alternative to batteries and portable generators, researchers reported Wednesday.

In a study published in the journal Nature, Bell Communications Research in Morristown, N.J., said it developed an ultra-thin fuel cell employing techniques similar to those used to make semiconductors.

Although the lightweight fuel cell is still at the laboratory stage of development, Bellcore researchers said early tests show it should be possible to generate 1,000 watts of electricity from each 2.2 pounds of material.

"What we think is possible with this discovery is that a much cheaper method of converting gas to electricity should be possible," said Christopher Dyer, head of the research team.

"We might be able to come up with small power units for portable equipment soon, and ultimately, if a lot more work is done, there is the possibility of involvement with electric vehicles," he said.

One of the first uses Bellcore envisions for the new lightweight fuel cells is to replace the batteries currently used in portable telephones. "That would avoid the need to recharge," said Dyer, adding the new fuel cell could be quickly replenished by a quick dose of gas, perhaps in capsule form.

Bellcore's Tom Taylor pointed out another advantage: "It is a very lightweight electrical power source compared to a battery." The communications company is now working on scaling up the device for practical applications, as well as figuring out exactly how it works.

The Bellcore device consists of a thin gas-permeable membrane made of aluminum oxide less than 500 billionths of a meter thick sandwiched between two thin films of platinum, which act as electrodes.

Taylor said the energy-generating process appears to be electrochemical, occurring when the device converts hydrogen and oxygen into water, giving off energy in the form of electricity.

Current fuel cells are too expensive for widescale commercial use, although they are used in the space shuttle and the Japanese are using them to provide power to some hotels and small complexes, Dyer said.

One reason conventional fuel cells are costly is they cannot operate if gases are mixed - a difficulty overcome by the new thin-film device that can run on a variety of mixtures, including air plus hydrogen and air plus methanol, Dyer said. Another advantage of the Bellcore device is that it comes up to full power very quickly compared to existing cells.

"Discovery of this phenomenon could lead to a very big change in the way in which fuel cells are made," said Dyer, adding he thinks practical versions of the new device should be "one-tenth to one-hundredth" the cost of conventional cells.

Although Bellcore's most efficient device in the laboratory is powered by a mixture containing the highly flammable gas hydrogen, Dyer said the company thinks a methanol mixture would be a better, safer choice for widescale use.

NEW YORK (FEB. 7) UPI - Baseball negotiators met and recessed for five days Wednesday, with management all but saying spring training camps will not open as scheduled.

''We're not at an agreement,'' owners negotiator Chuck O'Connor said. ''The memorandum that went out to the clubs a couple of weeks ago instructed the clubs that until further advised by the PRC (Player Relations Committee) the camps were not to be open. And obviously a lack of an agreement in my view makes it probable that the camps will not be open.''

O'Connor is to brief owners Friday in Chicago. He declined to say what he would recommend, but said nothing has happened to change the memo's instructions.

Union head Donald Fehr said he will meet with players Thursday in Los Angeles and Friday in Phoenix before talks resume Monday in New York. He said he assumes the camps will not open as scheduled Feb. 15.

''Not only are the players tested each time, but each time the owners decide that they have a new basis upon which to believe that the players won't behave the way they did the last time,'' Fehr said. ''There are a number of new faces at the table during each negotiation.

''Maybe they have to see for themselves. It seems pretty silly to me, but it is what it is.''

Baseball has endured four work stoppages in the last 18 years. The first occurred in the spring of 1972 and lasted nine days into the regular season. Players struck April 1, 1980, causing the cancellation of 92 exhibition games.

In 1981, players struck for 50 days, causing a split season. And in 1985, a one-day strike took place, with former Commissioner Peter Ueberroth helping forge a settlement.

The previous labor agreement expired Dec. 31, 1989, and owners are seeking to restructure the contract with revenue sharing, pay-for-performance, and a salary cap.

In a system similar to the NBA's, the owners propose to give the players 48 percent of their revenue from ticket sales and television contracts. That accounts for about 80 percent of management's income.

The players have not rejected the concept but object to a payroll cap and pay-for-performance, a system that would rate the players and determine salary. Players also ask why the current system must be changed.

Accompanying Fehr were assistants Gene Orza and Mark Belanger, plus Matt Young, Danny Jackson and Phil Bradley.

CUPERTINO, CA (FEB. 7) UPI - A senior executive at Apple Computer Inc. is about to leave the beleaguered computer manufacturer, the Wall Street Journal reported Wednesday.

Jean-Louis Gassee, 46, whose role as director of Apple's new product strategy had been curtailed in a management shakeup last week, indicated he will resign in the coming weeks, the business daily newspaper said. Also last week, Allan Loren, head of sales and marketing, resigned in the face of mounting criticism of the company's domestic sales strategy.

In the ensuing shakeup, Gassee, president of Apple Products, was forced to relinquish control of product marketing and manufacturing, two areas he had overseen since August 1988. Michael Spindler, the company's newly appointed chief operating officer, is now in charge of product developments. Apple had no comment about Gassee's reported departure, and the executive was not available to confirm the story.

In a separate development, the company said the decision to award a $164 million Air Force contract to Apple could be reversed, following an unfavorable General Accounting Office ruling that the Apple Macintosh computers do not meet Air Force specifications.

Apple's new laptop Macintosh has been criticized as too bulky and slow, and has suffered from production delays. "I think (Gassee's resignation) is a good thing for Apple," said Paul Gillin, executive editor of the trade weekly Computerworld. "You've got to have some fresh blood in there."

(FEB. 7) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev scored a stunning victory today when the Soviet Communist Party voted to give up its constitutional monopoly on power. A Soviet source says the party's Central Committee voted to remove Article Six of the Soviet constitution- the party's guarantee on power. The move opens the way for a multi-party system, which President Gorbachev pushed for in a reform package proposed on Monday.

Secretary of State Baker arrived in Moscow today for a three-day visit that's to include talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. The talks are to lay the groundwork for a U-S-Soviet summit in June in Washington. Baker flew to Moscow from Prague, where he spoke earlier today at Charles University and outlined several U-S initiatives to Czechoslovakia. Among them was a promise to ease U-S trade restrictions.

West Germany took steps today aimed at restoring confidence in the East German economy. An aide to West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl says Bonn agreed to start immediate negotiations with East Germany on setting up a monetary union between the two countries. Kohl says that such a move might help slow down the daily migration of East Germans to West Germany.

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 7) UPI - Three former McMartin Pre-School defendants filed a slander suit Wednesday against the parent of a child allegedly molested at the school, charging that he has defamed them in national talk show interviews.

The Superior Court suit against Robert Currie was filed by the founder of the preschool, Virginia McMartin, her daughter, Peggy McMartin Buckey and her granddaughter, Peggy Anne Buckey.

The suit was filed in response to remarks Currie made on a number of television talk shows following the Jan. 18 acquittals of Peggy McMartin Buckey, 63, and her son, Ray Buckey, 31, on 52 molestation counts stemming from the alleged sexual abuse of pupils at the pre-school from 1978-83.

The verdicts climaxed a nearly three-year, $13 million trial, the longest, costliest criminal trial in U.S. history.

The suit claims that despite the acquittals, Currie has continued to state his belief that all the defendants in the case are guilty.

''One would have thought that the end of the trial would have brought the end of the slander,'' attorney James H. Davis told a news conference at the county courthouse. ''Instead, the defendant has toured every major talk show and repeated them. We now have trial by television.''

''We have to make people responsible for what they say,'' he added.

The suit seeks unspecified punitive damages that will be determined by a jury.

Currie, characterized by Davis as ''the most vocal preschool parent'' who ''has made a career of pursuing this case,'' was not immediately available for comment.

Neither Currie nor his son were ever witnesses in the criminal trial.

Davis said Currie has made ''disgusting and obscene remarks ... to an audience of millions over television'' in order to ''inflame the populous and mold events.''

The lawyer said Currie appeared on talk shows hosted by Sally Jesse Raphael, Geraldo Rivera and Stephanie Edwards, and made such comments as ''that lady in the wheelchair (Virginia McMartin) has dropped her blouse to her waist'' and ''Peggy Buckey raised her mumu to her waist'' and ''all seven of the defendants are guilty.''

Davis also cited one particularly ''scurrilous'' remark Currie made that Virginia McMartin had abused a child with a carrot.

''Don't you think it's reckless to say a child was abused by a carrot without actually witnessing that?'' Davis said.

Davis said that even though Currie has made such remarks from the time the case was filed in 1984, he is being sued only for statements made after the acquittals.

That is because under California law, Currie was immune from being hit by a slander suit by the former defendants as long as criminal proceedings were pending against them, Davis said.

He said he decided to file the suit after Peggy McMartin Buckey telephoned him last Thursday, upset after having watched Currie on one of the talk shows.

''She was absolutely reduced to tears,'' Davis said. ''Peggy Buckey has no desire to be a public figure now that the trial is over.''

Charges against Virginia McMartin, 82, and Peggy Ann Buckey, 33, were dismissed in 1986 for insufficient evidence. Raymond Buckey faces re-trial Mar. 9 on as many as 13 counts on which jurors deadlocked.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (FEB. 7) UPI - The Rev. Jesse Jackson, making his first trip to South Africa since 1979, called apartheid a sin and warned the South African government Wednesday it faces ''chaos'' if it backtracks on reforms.

Jackson, in remarks to reporters at Johannesburg airport, also said the world waited with ''bated breath'' for the white minority government to free imprisoned black leader Nelson Mandela.

''We must encourage the president of this country to seize this moment to rise above political circumstances in the name of history and conscience and the value of a new South Africa,'' Jackson said in response to reforms announced by President Frederik de Klerk on Friday.

''This is a moment in South African history and world history that must be seized. As walls come down in Europe, as there is the early morning of a new Soviet Union, those winds of freedom must blow and make for a new South Africa,'' Jackson said.

Jackson, on a 10-day tour of the country as a guest of the South African Council of Churches, was accompanied by his wife. Greeting him were World Alliance of Reformed Churches President Allan Boesak, General-Secretary of the South African Council of Churches Frank Chikane and two veteran activists and comrades-in-arms of Mandela, Walter and Albertina Sisulu.

Calling Jackson ''a campaigner, a comrade in the struggle, a statesman in his own right,'' Boesak said it was especially exciting to welcome him in the current circumstances and urged him to help in keeping South Africa on the international agenda.

''We are living in exciting times in this country, times of great change, where we may even find ourselves on the verge of a historic breakthrough in the political situation,'' Boesak said, as he embraced Jackson and called him his brother.

Jackson, whose only other trip to South Africa was in 1979, said, ''I have come here with this invitation to observe and to share and to get a first-hand view on the ground of South Africa.''

He called for unity among blacks and a coalition with those whites, ''who care to do justice and love mercy.''

''Apartheid must go because it is a sin. It is morally wrong, and if it is morally wrong, it cannot be politically right,'' Jackson said.

He urged de Klerk to proceed with reform policies.

''If the government goes backward, there will be chaos,'' he said. ''If it stands still, there will be tension. If it goes forward, there will be a new and free and democratic South Africa.''

''The world waits with bated breath for the day South Africa will be free and Mandela will be free,'' Jackson said, adding that Mandela was not a common criminal but a political prisoner whose demands of the white minority government were reasonable.

''He seeks negotiation over confrontation ... democracy over apartheid ... a multi-racial society over a racial one ... an open rather than a closed country, that is reasonable,'' Jackson said.

Asked whether he hoped to visit Mandela in prison, Jackson said he hoped to see him free walking down the streets of Johannesburg, but added he had received no commitment from the government he would be able to visit Mandela ''in his present status.''

Jackson would not comment on whether he had applied for official permission to see Mandela, and refused to answer repeated questions regarding statements made by Foreign Minister Roelof ''Pik'' Botha on Tuesday.

Botha accused Jackson of taking both sides on the issue of economic and cultural boycotts of South Africa, and said the timing of his visit was poor, fueling speculation the government is unlikely to release Mandela while Jackson is in the country.

In talks with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in London Monday, Jackson advocated continued sanctions against South Africa despite Friday's reforms. Botha said that contradicted statements made by Jackson to the South African ambassador in Washington.

Anti-apartheid activists planning a demonstration against a boycott-breaking English cricket team in Johannesburg Thursday had hoped Jackson would join them in their protest, for which the Johannesburg town clerk has refused permission.

But the South African Council of Churches said that, due to Jackson's ''schedule and the thrust of his visit,'' he would be unable to join the protest.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - The names of 2.6 million parents who owe child support have been sent to the IRS so that any federal tax refunds that may be due can be used for their unpaid obligations, the government announced Wednesday.

A total of $452 million in child support was collected last year by garnishing tax refunds from parents whose names were forwarded to federal officials by state enforcement agencies.

The government can granish refunds from parents who owe more $500 or more of child support, or who owe at least $150 of child support and have children receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

''We fully expect to set a new record of collections this year,'' said Eunice Thomas, acting director of the Office of Child Support Enforcement, part of the Health and Human Services Department.

''Too many children are not getting the child support they are due. The tax offset system is a cost-effective way to obtain some of that money,'' she said.

''For an average investment of only $4.54 per case, the most recent average tax intercept was $654 for non-AFDC cases. The average collectin for AFDC cases was $562 per case.''

The 2.6 million people on the list sent to the IRS will be notified in writing of the amount that will be withheld, officials said.

Parents can have their names deleting from the list by paying the amount due or, if state officials allow, by setting up a plan to make periodic payments.

In non-AFDC cases, the taxes garnished are sent to families. When welfare is being paid, the money collected goes to states to help pay the cost of AFDC.

SAN FRANCISCO (FEB. 7) UPI - About 1,000 protesters representing many political causes encircled a downtown hotel Wednesday where President Bush was addressing civic, business and political leaders.

The demonstrators tried to prevent Commonwealth Club of California members and guests from entering the San Francisco Hilton, but police managed to clear the way.

The protesters linked arms to form lines, but there was no violence. Police blocked traffic on the streets around the hotel. Some people burned paper U.S. flags at nearby intersections.

Signs read, ''First Panama, Next Nicaragua,'' ''U.S. Out of El Salvador'' and ''Stop Calcutta USA.''

Others said, ''Burn Flags Not Villages,'' ''Protect the Environment Not Big Business,'' ''Don't Tax Me to Kill the Poor'' and ''Nerd.''

One protester was ''Wavy Gravy,'' who gained notoriety as a street entertainer during the hippie era of the 1960s. He wore a ''Nobody For President'' T-shirt and carried a sign which said: ''Bush, CIA guilty of Dope.'' He said the sign referred to the president's ties to ousted Panama strongman Manuel Noriega.

There were no immediate arrests.

Protesters also demonstrated on issues such as offshore oil drilling, abortion, homosexuality and the environment.

Bush arrived at the Hilton after a morning tour at the Lawrence Livermore Lab across San Francisco Bay. He toured the high-tech defense facility and addressed employees there.

Some 200 placard-waving protesters stood outside an 8-foot chain-link fence at the lab, shouting ''Shame, Shame, Shame'' as Bush alit from a Marine helicopter at a nearby parking lot.

They carried signs that read ''We Are the Evil Empire,'' ''From Hiroshima to Star Wars'' and ''When Bush Comes to Shove, He's No Environmentalist.''

Greenpeace spokeswoman Karen Topakian, using a megaphone, shouted: ''Mr. Bush outside the gates of Lawrence Livemore Lab are small children. What kind of legacy are you leaving them?''

Roman Morkowski, 77, shoved a wheelbarrow piled high with petitions containing what he said were 10,000 signatures from Livermore area residents who want the area to be made a nuclear-free zone.

Morkowski, a retired precision tool salesman, said, ''I used to sell to the radlab before I knew better.''

There were no reports of serious incidents during the hour-long demonstration.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (FEB. 7) UPI - The Bulgarian Agrarian Party, subservient ally to the communists for more than four decades, announced Wednesday it is pulling out of the coalition that has ruled the Balkan nation since 1948.

The surprise announcement came less than 24 hours before newly elected Prime Minister Andrei Lukanov was scheduled to introduce his list of Cabinet nominees, presumably including Agrarian party members, to Parliament.

In a statement following a meeting of the party's ruling council and parliamentary caucus, Agrarian Party Secretary Angel Dimitrov said party leaders had unanimously decided not to participate in Lukanov's government.

Dimitrov said the Agrarians would take part only in a broad-based ''government of national consensus'' that would include representatives from pro-democracy groups, the official BTA news agency said.

The democratic opposition, however, has rejected repeated invitations to join such a government.

The party's statement also called on the National Assembly to dissolve itself after adopting legislation clearing the way for the formation of independent political parties and free, multi-party elections.

The Agrarian party's decision to drop out of the ruling coalition will apparently force the communists into forming a one-party government, despite its efforts to present a more democratic image.

Lukanov, a pro-reform communist, had pledged to include representatives of all political factions in his Cabinet. Lukanov was elected Saturday to replace Prime Minister Georgi Atanassov, whose government resigned Thursday under criticism for mismanaging the economy.

Dimitrov said the Agrarian party also had decided to withdraw from the government's delegation to ongoing round-table talks with opposition groups, and would attend the negotiations as an independent party.

He called for separate talks on reuniting the party with the so-called Nicola Petekov faction, which broke with the Agrarian Party and went underground in the 1950s.

The Agrarian party was for decades the only legal party in Bulgaria besides the communists. Although its role as a partner to the communists was guaranteed in the 1948 constitution, the party was completely subservient to the communists throughout most of its post-war history.

Instead of drafting its own political platform, it would automatically adopt the platform of the communist party. In return for this loyalty, members of the Agrarian party were given government posts.

In the wake of the democratic reforms that have swept Bulgaria since the ouster of hard-line leader Todor Zhivkov in November, the Agrarian party in recent weeks has asserted its independence and called for the formation of broad-based provisional government to guide the country through elections.

Also Wednesday, a newspaper reported that Zhivkov, hospitalized last week, had grave health and mental problems that may prohibit him from standing trial on charges of abusing power.

Doctors and police officers were keeping constant watch over Zhivkov, 79, in his Sofia hospital room to monitor his condition and to guard against a possible suicide or assassination attempt, the Communist Party newspaper Rabotnichesko Delo reported.

''Zhivkov is at an advanced age, he suffers from diabetes, his blood pressure varies disturbingly, his brain activity has worsened,'' the newspaper said.

It said Zhivkov at times becomes ''uncommunicative'' and appears to lose touch with reality, but his ''heart is quite well.''

In a related development, the new government in Sofia issued a decree stripping Zhivkov and seven associates of all titles and medals for ''grave violations of the Bulgarian constitution,'' the official BTA news agency said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - The president's top science adviser defended rising costs for construction of the multi-billion-dollar superconducting super collider Wednesday as wary members of a House panel questioned 1991 funding for the giant Texas project.

Firing the opening shot in this year's congressional debate over the project, Rep. Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., said projections show a cost increase of between $1 billion to $2 billion.

''I just have a feeling we're going to make the Pentagon look like pikers when we see the entire cost of that project,'' Boehlert said of the huge particle accelerator slated for construction in Waxahachie, Texas.

Appearing before the House Committee on Science Space and Technology, D. Allan Bromley, science and technology adviser to President Bush, defended the anticipated cost hike as a natural part of the design process.

Bromley said the government's cost estimate of $5.9 billion in 1986 was based on conceptual design only. ''When they (project scientists) go to the actual design they're going to find changes that are essential,'' Bromley said.

Bromley, who also heads the Office of Science and Technology Policy, was appearing before the committee to detail the science agenda in Bush's budget proposal. Bush has again placed the super collider high on his list and proposed $318 million for the project in 1991.

Scientists hope the project, a 53-mile circular tunnel of supermagnets capable of smashing sub-atomic particles at mind-boggling speed, will help unlock the secrets of the smallest building blocks of the universe.

TAMPA, FL (FEB. 7) UPI - The United States should not rule out the use of military force if it is necessary to help end apartheid in South Africa, says Make Mandela, daughter of jailed Afrian National Congress leader Nelson Mandela.

Mandela told a standing-room-only crowd of more than 1,000 who attended a 45-minute speech at the University of South Florida Tuesday night that conditions have kept black South Africans in conditions of servitude for more than two generations.

''According to the South African regime, we are savages,'' she said, ''animals who don't know any decent standard of living.''

Mandela, 35, said conditions are so morally bankrupt that U.S. leaders should consider intervening with military force, just as they did in Vietnam and Nicaragua.

''Why stop using that same foreign policy in South Africa?'' she said. ''That's what I'm asking.''

Mandela did, however, say she was South African President F.W. de Klerk has decided to seek change. In a history-making speech Friday to the South African Parliament, he announced Nelson Mandela would be released as soon as possible and partially lifted the country's state of emergency.

He also lifted the ban against the ANC and 35 other political groups and said most prisoners belonging to those groups will be freed. He declared a moratorium on executions and limited many restrictions on the press.

Yet, Maki Mandela in her speech Tuesday cautioned that little has changed in her home country despite de Klerk's pronouncements. She said 13 million blacks live on only 13 percent of the nation's land, while 4.5 million whites inhabit the rest.

Blacks can't vote, hold political office or be educated in vastly superior white schools. The white government also taxes segregated black homelands and uses the money to build schools and hospitals elsewhere, she said.

The crowd interrupted Mandela 12 times with applause. Outside Cooper Hall Auditorium, students and faculty packed the hallways to watch her on television monitors.

Her speech was part of the school's celebration of Black Emphasis Month.

Mandela was 8 when her father was jailed for life after being found guilty of treason. She has said that the first time she talked to him she was 16, at a prison where he was being held.

She and her husband and their three children moved to Boston 4 1/2 years ago.

CHICAGO (FEB. 7) UPI - Attorney General Richard Thornburgh Wednesday announced the indictment of 20 Chicago-area crime syndicate figures on charges ranging from murder to loan rackets and illegal gambling.

The 42-count indictment resulted from eight years of investigation by the FBI, the Internal Revenue Service and state and local police, Thornburgh said.

Thornburgh said the long, complicated investigation shows ''our strong commitment to the fight against organized crime.''

The investigation centered on an organization called the ''Joseph Ferriola Steet Crew,'' after a top area mob leader, Thornburgh said.

He said the indictments will be prosecuted by the organized crime division of the U.S. attorney's office in trials expected to lay bare much of the inner workings of the Midwest crime syndicate.

The indictment is the latest in a string of setbacks for the local mob.

Suburban syndicate boss Albert Tocco was convicted late last year on racketeering charges after his wife agreed to provide evidence for the government. And suspected crime syndicate assassin Frank Schweihs and an associate await sentencing after an extortion conviction.

In addition, another extensive federal investigation of ties between the mob and Chicago First Ward politicians still is in simmering. That investigation included electronic eavesdropping in a downtown restaurant favored by power brokers and extensive use of informers.

Earlier, Thornburgh joined Lt. Gov. George Ryan at the State of Illinois Center to award $16.8 million in federal money to the state's battle against drugs.

''These new funds will give local law enforcement agencies a bigger stick to wield in their war aganist drugs,'' Thornburgh said.

The award is more than three times the $4.8 million Illinois received last year, and Thornburgh said it demonstrates President Bush's commitment to backing up state and local law enforcement agencies.

''Together with the leadership that he has provided in outlining this comprehensive strategy, he has sought and received from the Congress of the United States a vast increase in funding for the major components of the anti-drug effort,'' Thornburgh said.

''And I'm here this morning to evidence that commitment to put our money where our mouth is if you will, and present to the state of Illinois $16.8 million in federal funds.''

The federal grant would be matched by $22.5 million in state and local funds under the Drug Free Illinois campaign, Ryan said.

''At a time when we are the first state to receive these kinds of funds to help in the fight against drugs, some people are advocating the legalization of drugs,'' he said. ''The legalization of drugs would only lead to an Illinois of shattered dreams.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - Groups sending ''copy cat'' mailings that look like Social Security or other official documents would face fines of up to $100,000 a year under rules proposed Wednesday by the Health and Human Services Department.

Congress gave the department authority to impose civil penalties for the look-alike mailings as part of the legislation that created the ill-fated Medicare catastrophic illness insurance program.

The mailings, which usually target the elderly for money, are made to resemble those sent by the Social Security Administration or the IRS and often are stamped ''official business'' or ''important notice.''

In one such mailing, a group calling itself the Social Security Protection Bureau offered to obtain Social Security cards for the elderly at a cost of $10 - a service the government provides free, Senate investigators said.

Under the rules proposed by HHS Secretary Louis Sullivan individuals or groups could be cited for misusing the terms Social Security, Social Security account, Social Security Administration, Social Security system, Medicare and Health Care Financing Administration; the letters SSA or HCFA; or symbols or emblems associated with the Social Security Administration or HCFA.

The regulations would give the HHS inspector general authority to impose fines of up to $25,000 per violation in a misleading broadcast or telecast and up to $5,000 per printed violations. Total penalties for an individual or organization could not exceed $100,000 in a year.

Following the announcement of proposed regulations, the public has 60 days to comment before the rules become final.

NEW YORK (FEB. 7) UPI - Mexican finance officials and international bankers met in a Manhattan hotel Wednesday to sign a pact easing the Latin nation's debt burden by $7 billion while, in Washington, a senior U.S. Treasury official defended the landmark deal as representing real progress.

Representatives of about 100 of Mexico's 460 commercial bank creditors showed up to sign papers executing an agreement of about 2,000 pages, the result of a year of negotiations. It was the first concluded under a plan launched in 1989 by, and named for, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

"The Mexican debt deal that we are signing today is an extremely important milestone in contemporary financial history," Angel Gurria, undersecretary for international financial affairs of the Mexican Finance Ministry, told the gathering in a hotel ballroom.

In drafting the pact, Gurria said, "the leitmotif, the one recurring thought ... was Mexico's life after debt, Mexico's future no longer discussed in terms of the debt burden but of development opportunities."

The complex agreement reduces Mexican debt principal and interest by partial forgiveness through conversion into discounted bonds, and by the issuance of long-term, lowered-interest bonds. Principal will be paid off in 30 years with zero-coupon bonds akin to U.S. savings bonds.

A ceremonial signing was held Sunday in Mexico City, where Citibank Chairman John Reed and representatives of 14 other banks at the center of negotiations met with Brady and Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari. The New York session enabled other bankers to affix signatures.

Attention now turns to possible negotiations with Brazil, the most debt-laden developing nation in the world. Citibank negotiator William Rhodes said talks could open with Brazil after its new president takes office March 15, and Argentina could also return to the table "very shortly."

The Mexican accord directly reduces Mexico's $48.5 billion medium-term bank debt by $7 billion, lowers annual interest payments by $1.6 billion and brings in $1.5 billion in annual new loans during 1990-92. But critics say the deal doesn't reduce the debt sufficiently or fast enough.

When the instruments for reduction are issued in March the total Mexican debt will stand at $93.6 billion, down from about $100 billion. Mexico's debt to other countries and international agencies was not affected.

Gurria told journalists that the accord brings a "very considerable alleviation" of Mexico's debt burden, and opens the door to economic expansion which heavy annual obligations have restrained.

Treasury Under Secretary David Mulford told a House banking subcommittee in Washington the deal is important "because it is regarded as a turning point for Mexico." One expert told the same panel the pact leaves the Latin nation heavily indebted, if marginally less so.

But Robert A. McCormack, the Citibank vice president succeeding Rhodes at the head of the bank's Third World loan restructuring committee while the latter assumes wider international debt duties, said the Mexican deal will encourage other countries to seek an amicable debt resolution. The agreement, he said, "proves that working with the banks on a constructive basis is the way to go - and certainly the quickest."

Rhodes quoted Citicorp Chairman John Reed, who said at the ceremonial signing in Mexico city that the pact was "an end and a beginning" in the drawn-out debt crisis which sprang up in the early 1980s.

Mulford, the Treasury's debt specialist, said that without the pact

Mexico's total debt by 1992 would increase by $24 billion. With it, four percent of Mexico's gross domestic product will be freed for investment.

Mulford dismissed claims that the 30-year zero-coupon Treasury bonds to serve as Mexican collateral for the debt reduction and debt service bonds involve a $300 million subsidy to the U.S. southern neighbor.

The bonds carried a 7.925 percent interest rate, below the 8.05 percent average borrowing rate for 30-year notes as of Jan. 5. The Treasury had issued non-marketable zero-coupon bonds only twice before, Mulford said, and had few price-setting precedents to refer to.

(FEB. 7) UPI - Soviet radio says the Communist Party Central Committee finished its work today, following a historic vote in which the party gave up its monopoly on power. The vote came on the third day of a crucial Central Committee meeting that ended more than 70 years of constitutionally mandated single-party rule by the Communists.

PARIS (FEB. 7) UPI - Childhood AIDS has reached epidemic proportions in Romania, where tests on a sampling of 2,000 children showed more than 700 have been exposed to the HIV virus, a French specialist said Wednesday.

''Today one can truly talk of the first pediatric AIDS epidemic of such proportion,'' said Dr. Jacques Lebas, president of the humanitarian organization Medecins du Monde.

Lebas, who returned from Bucharest this week, said the latest results received in Paris show that 706 out of 2,184 children tested had been exposed to the HIV virus that causes the deadly disease.

He said of the 706 who tested positive, 50 had full-blown cases of AIDS and 102 suffered from AIDS Related Complex, or ARC.

The tests were performed on children living in orphanages or being treated in pediatric wards of hospitals in Bucharest and Constanza, he said.

In Geneva, the World Health Organization (WHO) said Wednesday that two of its specialists on AIDS, American and Soviet doctors, will report next week on the AIDS pediatric epidemic.

A WHO spokesman said the Romanian health ministry requested expert assistance last week "in assessing the situation and what international help is required."

Lebas said lack of hygiene and outdated health policies, including the possible use of dirty hypodermic needles, were largely to blame for the spread of the HIV virus among children.

''One can reasonably assume that the current pediatric epidemic is the result of a series of phenomena, including the repeated use of the same syringes by nurses or systematic use of intra-muscular injections to administer vitamins or gamma blobulin to children,'' he said.

He said the widespread practice of administering blood transfusions to newborns also contributed to the spread of the virus.

Lebas said he was shocked at the conditions in the pediatric wards of hospitals.

''In some cases I saw five children in the same bed,'' he said. ''All were contaminated with the AIDS virus, but at different stages. So some were in pure agony and others were not feeling very sick. They were all mixed in the same bed. It was brutal. I had never seen anything like it.''

He said Medecins du Monde was sending a million syringes to Romania next week along with antiseptics in an effort ''to provide a bare minimum of hygiene'' in hospitals.

Britain also promised to send a million disposable syringes to Romania to help stop the transmission of AIDS, which can be spread when traces of blood from an HIV infected patient is on a needle that is subsequently used on an unifected patient.

In London, Foreign Office Minister William Waldegrave told the Commons he was pleased Britain was responding to the requests for medical aid for the children.

''I think the whole House will have been moved by the terrible stories that we have been seeing emerge in the last few days,'' he said.

People from around the world had offered to adopt Romanian orphans when news reports revealed after the popular revolution in December that hundreds of abandoned children were living in state-run shelters. It was not immediately known how news of the AIDS epidemic would affect the bid by foreigners to adopt the infants.

WHO spokesman Gino Levi in Geneva said the WHO had sent two of its top epidemiologists and experts on AIDS to Romania on Monday - Dr. David Heyman, an American, and Dr. Alexander Gromyko of the Soviet Union.

Levi said the U.N. agency would not speculate on the meaning of the new test results until it receives the report from its two-member team.

At a news conference earlier this week in Bucharest, Lebas blamed the absurd policies of Romania's former dictatorship for causing the highest infant death rate in Europe - 83 deaths for every 1,000 births.

Executed dictator Nicolae Ceausescu, who wanted to increase the country's population from 23 million to 30 million by the year 2,000, outlawed sex education, birth control and abortion.

In Bucharest, Romanian Health Minister Dan Enachescu said Wednesday that Romania has only 600 condoms available nationwide, all domestically made.

Huge shipments of condoms sent to Romania by other governments have not been made available in stores.

Enachescu said the Trade Ministry was in charge of distributing the imported contraceptives but trade officials had no immediate comment on the shortage.

CAIRO, EGYPT (FEB. 7) UPI - The country's leading newspaper, the state-run

Al Akhbar, labeled Palestinian leader Ahmed Jibril a ''terrorist'' Wednesday after his organization claimed responsibility for an attack outside the capital that killed nine Israeli tourists.

Political observers said it was the first time a state-run Egyptian daily had used the word ''terrorist'' to describe a Palestinian guerrilla. The use of the word reflected official anger over the attack, which may have damaged Egyptian-Israeli ties and delayed talks to advance the peace process.

''The Egyptians are mad as hell that anything like this should happen on their soil,'' said one long-time Cairo diplomat.''

Maj. Gen. Abdel-Halim Moussa, Egypt's interior minister, said Wednesday the attack ''was committed by non-Egyptians'' and ''was planned abroad.'' A senior Interior Ministry source said Jibril's group was thought to be responsible.

''We now believe (Jibril's) Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command was responsible,'' the source said.

The Interior Ministry imposed a news blackout Wednesday on the manhunt for those involved in the attack, but earlier reports said scores of Palestinians living in Egypt had been detained for questioning.

The attack occurred Sunday when two gunmen intercepted a tour bus on the main road east of Cairo and forced it to stop. The gunmen fired into the bus with rifles and then lobbed hand grenades inside, killing nine Israeli tourists and wounding 17 other people.

''The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, General-Command, led by the terrorist Ahmed Jibril, claimed responsibility for the attack on the bus with Israeli tourists,'' said the daily Al Akhbar, Egypt's top-selling newspaper.

The newspaper said Jibril's organization claimed responsibility in a statement broadcast over a Syrian-based Palestinian radio station. The statement said a PFLP-GC unit carried out the ''quick and surprise attack on the Israeli vehicle using rifles and hand grenades,'' Al Akhbar reported.

Jibril, a former Syrian army officer, is vehemently anti-Arafat and opposes the PLO leader's efforts to make peace with Israel. Observers said if the PFLP-GC was responsible for the attack, it was probably an attempt to disrupt the ongoing peace process between Egypt, Israel and the United States.

''This is an extremely delicate stage in the peace process, and terrorists such as Jibril know this,'' one diplomat said. ''They would love to see Egypt fall out with Israel and the peace process abandoned.''

The PFLP-GC was the third group to claim responsibility for the bus attack.

A previously unknown organization calling itself the Group for Oppressed Prisoners claimed responsibility following the attack Sunday. Islamic Jihad, in a statement sent to a news agency Monday in Amman, also claimed it carried out the attack.

Authorities had previously said that the investigation suggested that Palestinians were involved in the bus attack. The use of the word ''terrorist'' by Al Akhbar indicated that officials were taking the PFLP-GC claim seriously.

Previously the Egyptian news media has referred even to Palestinian radicals such as Abu Nidal as ''guerrillas.'' Egyptian officials have said the term ''terrorist'' was too loose and could not ''be clearly defined under international law.''

But the Egyptian position has been shifting in recent years. President Hosni Mubarak considered it a personal triumph when he helped persuade PLO chief Yasser Arafat to renounce terrorism in the Cairo declaration of Nov. 17, 1985.

And a source in the Interior Ministry had no qualms about the use of the word ''terrorist'' to describe Jibril.

''Of course he's a terrorist,'' the source said. ''What do you expect us to do, tap him on the shoulder and congratulate him?''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - The Treasury Department, on the second day of its quarterly refunding, auctioned $10 billion of ten-year notes Wednesday with the yield jumping to 8.59 percent, the highest since 9.18 percent on May 10.

Buying was brisk with the ten-year notes to borrow cash to operate the government selling at an average price of $99.40, with 100 equaling the face value and one point representing $10 on each $1,000 investment. The 8.5 percent notes mature Feb. 15, 2000. November's ten-year notes yielded 7.94 percent.

The Treasury Department was scheduled to wind up its quarterly marathon Thursday by offering $10 billion in 30-year bonds to cover maturing securities and new debt. But officials have raised the possibility of offering two-year and five-year notes later in the quarter.

Traders reported strong demand Wednesday from domestic customers as well as Japaneses investors. Many analysts had feared the Japanese would ignore the auction for higher paying bonds at home and in Europe.

"It looks like the Japanese have stepped up to the plate," said analyst William Sullivan of Dean Witter Reynolds in New York. "They were a question mark earlier this week. There was good domestic demand as well."

Robert Brusca, chief economist for Nikko Securities International in New York, said, "The small investor is findings interest rates are high enough and he's investing." Bank of New York analyst James Blumenthal added: "It may augur well for the 30 year" bonds.

The Treasury Department also accepted $200 million of tenders for the ten-year notes from Federal Reserve Banks that are acting as agents for foreign institutions and governments. An additional $450 million of tenders was accepted from Federal Reserve Banks for their own accounts.

On Tuesday, the Treasury Department sold $10 billion in three-year notes yielding 8.43 percent, the yield was the highest since 9.12 percent on May 9 - and a huge increase over November's 7.77 percent.

Gobbled up by Japanese investors, the three-year notes, which mature Feb. 3, 1993, and have an interest rate of 8.375 percent, were in strong demand on the opening day of the refunding and sold at an average price of $99.857.

In Tokyo, financial sources said the Japanese investors, primarily life insurance companies, bought 30 percent of the three-year notes and were eager to buy ten-year and 30-year bonds.

"In view of a high level of Japanese investment in three-year bills Tuesday, a fairly good level of Japanese participation is expected," observed an executive at Nomura Securities Co., who requested anonymity.

"There is little possibility that U.S. interest rates will rise in the near future because the U.S. economy is in the process of a slowdown," the Nomura executive said.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (FEB. 7) UPI - A witness testified Wednesday in the trial of fired Exxon Valdez skipper Joseph Hazelwood that she saw him arrive in a bar and order vodka hours before the time his Exxon drinking companions said the boozing started.

''I know who I saw - 100 percent,'' declared Janice Delozier, identifying Hazelwood, the skipper of the tanker that grounded off southern Alaska March 24 and caused the worst oil spill in U.S. history.

She said she saw him order a vodka in the bar more than two hours before the time his companions had said they began drinking and some 12 hours before the wreck of the Exxon Valdez.

But Hazelwood's defense lawyers attacked Delozier's testimony and strongly insinuated that she fabricated her story to back up her husband - who just happened to be the chief Coast Guard investigator in the wreck.

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., is on trial for driving the Exxon Valdez while intoxicated, reckless endangerment, negligent discharge of oil and criminal mischief.

In tough questioning by defense lawyer Michael Chalos, Delozier denied that her husband prompted her to play any role in the case whatsoever and she said, ''I didn't want to be involved.

Mark Delozier, who quit the Coast Guard in November, arrived first on the scene of the wrecked tanker with other officials. When he returned from the tanker later, his wife recalled him revealing that the tanker skipper was suspected of drinking.

She testified that about five days after the March 24 wreck, she saw a picture of Hazelwood in the newspaper and recognized him as the man she had seen drinking vodka in the Pipeline Club bar starting at about 1:45 p.m. March 23 - more than two hours before the time Hazelwood's two drinking buddies testified the trio had begun a three-hour booze-and-talk session at the bar.

Janice Delozier said she clearly heard the man she identified as Hazelwood when he ordered vodka and observed him get a second drink and saw him with an unidentified companion or two.

''I heard every word he said to the bartender,'' Delozier said, asserting that she made eye contact with the skipper and was ''absolutely positive'' of his identity.

Hazelwood's lawyers have acknowledged that the skipper had a couple drinks before sailing, but they dispute the prosecution contention that Hazelwood spent nearly seven hours drinking from the time Delozier saw him until right before his tanker sailed out of Valdez and onto the rocks of Bligh Reef.

The defense was expected to present at least a partial alibi for Hazelwood showing that he was buying flowers for his wife during the afternoon that prosecutors and Delozier placed him at a Pipeline Club table drinking vodka.

But if Delozier's account is accurate, then Hazelwood had more to drink that the three or four vodkas reported by Jerzy Glowacki, chief Exxon Valdez engineer, who testified Tuesday.

Delozier was a regular at the Pipeline Club for coffee during lunch breaks as a dental assistant.

Under persistent questioning and in colorful, sometimes flamboyant, testimony that depicted small-town Valdez life and Pipeline Club trivia, Delozier stuck to her story.

Delozier said that, once she told her husband about seeing Hazelwood in the bar, she was reluctant to repeat the story to investigators from the state, the Coast Guard and the FBI because ''I thought the name Delozier and Delozier would seem kind of fishy to some people - just what you're insinuating,'' she told Chalos.

Although several other witnesses have testified they either smelled alcohol on Hazelwood's breath or went drinking with him, the same witnesses testified that Hazelwood exhibited no signs of intoxication or impairment.

A defense lawyer suggested outside of court that Hazelwood was guilty only of bad breath.

Alcohol is key to the prosecution's case. Prosecutors maintain that an alcohol-impaired skipper made a series of bad judgments, wrong decisions and incorrect actions that led to the spill and aggravated the tanker damage and spill.

The grounded tanker spilled nearly 11 million gallons of oil into pristine Prince William Sound waters, killing tens of thousands of animals, ruinng fishing and covering hundreds of miles of shore with black crude oil.

Hazelwood faces the possibility of a maximum of seven years, three months in jail and a $61,000 fine.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (FEB. 7) UPI - Christian strongman Gen. Michel Aoun said Wednesday he would halt his campaign to destroy the Christian Lebanese Forces militia if its leader agreed to oppose the agreement that led to the election of a new president opposed by Aoun.

Clerics continued efforts, meanwhile, to end the eight days of fighting for control of the Christian enclave of the divided capital, and a lull in the battles Wednesday allowed relief workers to evacuate some of the wounded.

Aoun said he would back off from his objective to crush the 10,000-strong Lebanese Forces militia of Samir Geagea if the militia leader took a clear stand against an Arab League-brokered power-sharing agreement reached in Taif, Saudi Arabia.

''No one is seeking to eliminate the Lebanese Forces,'' Aoun said at a news conference at his bunker in the Baabda district. ''I only demand a political stand from them against the Taif agreement.''

The Lebanese parliament worked out an internationally supported peace accord Oct. 23 in Taif that stipulated steps to end 15 years of violence and resulted in electing Syrian-backed President Elias Hrawi, a Christian, and Prime Minister Selim Hoss, a Moslem.

Aoun claims he is the country's legitimate leader and rebuffed the Taif accord for failing to ensure a complete and speedy withdrawal of Syria's 35,000 troops from the country, and he refused to recognize Hrawi and Hoss. Hrawi responded by firing Aoun as head of the Lebanese Army, but the general ignored the move and retained control of his forces in the Christian sector.

Geagea's militia has refrained from taking a clear stand regarding the Taif accord, but has recognized Hrawi as president.

Aoun's declaration that he would no longer insist on the destruction of the militia coincided with a lull in the war-battered Christian enclave as a result of intensive efforts by Vatican envoy Pablo Puente and local clerics.

Christian officials said the Vatican mission and clergymen arranged a meeting at an undisclosed venue grouping representatives from Aoun and Geagea to try to resolve the power struggle that developed into destructive fighting.

Aoun expressed readiness to talk after his forces drove the militiamen from the port town of Dbayeh, 3 miles north of Beirut, cutting the coastal road over which militia gunmen bring supplies to their strongholds in east Beirut from their northern bunkers.

The general's forces have also tightened the noose around a main militia barracks in the residential region of Ain Al Rummaneh in east Beirut.

Geagea, whose gunmen gained the upper hand north of Beirut during the early stages of the fighting, appealed to France late Tuesday to intervene to stop Aoun's war to break up his military strength.

Aoun and Geagea have battled with heavy arms in and outside Beirut since the general vowed publicly last week to eliminate the militias and Geagea said he would not give in. Security sources said the fighting has killed more than 300 people and wounded 1,000.

The fighting has inflicted massive damage in and around the militia-controlled areas of Ashrafiyeh, Ain Al Rummaneh and Dora.

''The situation in east Beirut reminds me of (the movie) ''Apocalypse Now.'' Black-colored bodies are scattered on streets,'' said a relief worker who requested anonymity.

Horror-shocked civilians took advantage of the lull in fighting Wednesday to crawl out of underground shelters briefly. Some people, seeking fresh food, vegetables and fruit, crossed to the western side of the city for quick shopping.

The general calm, although marred by sporadic skirmishes with light automatic guns, enabled the International Red Cross and the Lebanese Red Cross to evacuate 12 critically wounded people from east Beirut.

Under the supervision of French envoy Bernard Kouchner, the injured were sent aboard a private French jet via the airport in west Beirut to France for treatment.

The relief workers also rushed badly needed medication to the eight hospitals in east Beirut - which lacked blood, medicines, drinking water and fuel to operate electric generators.

The destruction caused by the fighting left electricity out in both east and west Beirut and drinking water has become rare.

In Washington, the State Department again blamed Aoun and his 15,000-strong force for the violence and reiterated its call for the general to step down and recognize the Hrawi government.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (FEB. 7) UPI - Launch of two high-tech ''Star Wars'' research satellites was delayed from this week to next because a technician dropped a 4-inch tool into the nose cone of a Delta rocket, officials said Wednesday.

The Delta 2 rocket, purchased commercially from McDonnell Douglas Space Systems Inc., originally was scheduled to carry the satellites aloft from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station around 11:15 a.m. EST Thursday, sources said.

But during routine pre-launch processing earlier this week, a technician dropped a tool inside the rocket's nose cone ''fairing,'' clamshell-like protective panels at the tip of the booster that are jettisoned after the spacecraft is out of the atmosphere.

While details about the launch date are classified, information about the two satellites on board and launch processing is not.

''A technician drooped a tool,'' said a spokesman for the Strategic Defense Initiative Office in Washington. ''It was called a spacecraft connector alignment tool. It's a little tool, 4 inches long.

''The fairing is connected to the rocket and there is an umbilical that pulls away when the fairing drops off and it's a little electrical check tool to check the tolerances and the distances for that. The technician dropped it, it became lodged near the satellites and so the fairing had to be removed so they could access the tool and remove it.''

The tool was removed Wednesday ''and I was told everything was fine,'' the spokesman said.

The spokesman would not discuss the new launch date or time, but sources have said a Navy Trident 2 submarine missile is scheduled for takeoff this weekend or early next week from the USS Tennessee, an Ohio-class nuclear-powered submarine.

As a result of the Trident launch, critical Air Force equipment used to track all rockets launched from the Cape Canaveral area will not available for the Delta launch until the middle of next week.

The goal of the Delta mission is to launch two satellites called LACE and RME that were built to demonstrate the feasibility of new Strategic Defense Initiative missile defense technology.

LACE, an acronym for Low-power Atmospheric Compensation Experiment, was built to study how the atmosphere distorts and weakens laser beams fired from Earth and to learn more about how those effects can be counteracted.

RME - the Relay Mirror Experiment - is a satellite equipped with a small mirror to demonstrate how such mirrors might one day be used to redirect laser beams from the ground to targets such as enemy missiles. In the RME experiment, however, a low-power laser beam fired from Hawaii will simply be bounced off the mirror and back to the ground.

ATLANTA (FEB. 7) UPI - A Chrysler Corp. official said Wednesday the Senate clean air bill now being debated in Washington could seriously affect the production of medium- and family-size cars in the United States.

Al Slechter, Chrysler's federal affairs technical director, said a provision in the bill would require U.S. manufacturers to produce cars that would average 40 miles a gallon by the year 2000, severely limiting the production of medium- and large sedans, as well as some light trucks and vans.

Another provision would set tailpipe emission standards for new cars so stringent that even government technology experts say they are not feasible. "We're concerned about where this is all going and what it is the Senate is really voting for," said Slechter.

He said the bill is under debate now in closed-door hearings between senators and members of the Bush administration. "The senators want to avoid bloodbaths on the floor of the Senate," said Slechter. "It's very touchy for members of the Senate to vote for anything that has to do with clean air legislation."

Slechter and representatives of Ford Motor Co., General Motors and the Georgia Auto Dealers Association told a news conference that the bill would hurt Georgia's economy, which is closely tied to the auto industry.

Both Ford and GM have auto plants in suburban Atlanta.

Slechter said Chrysler and the other automakers were not opposed to the clean air bill that cleared the House committee. He said cars built since 1983 are fitted with emission-control equipment that has reduced tailpipe emission by more than 90 percent compared to earlier cars.

Cars manufactured before 1983 account for about half the cars now on the road, but contribute nearly 90 percent of total tailpipe emissions. "What we want is for the Senate to moderate its position so that something reasonable can come out of the Congress," said Slechter.

Also expressing concern about the Senate version of the bill was Bob Anderson, manager of Ford's Atlanta assembly plant, which produces the Ford Taurus and Mercury Sable, and Tom Brady, manager of General Motors' Doraville plant, which produces the Oldsmobile Cutlass.

"Georgia's economy has already suffered from the slow-down in automobile production," Anderson said. "The last thing we need here is a new law from Washington that would shut us down completely."

Brady said none of the cars built by either GM or Ford in Georgia would meet the proposed federal emission standards. "With Georgia being the fourth largest producer of automobiles in the United States, this would have a negative impact on the entire country," Brady said.

NEW YORK (FEB. 7) UPI - Popular television essayist Andy Rooney was accused Wednesday of telling an interviewer that black people have ''watered down'' their genes because the less intelligent have the most children, but Rooney, through a spokesman, denied making the statement.

In an interview with The Advocate, a biweekly gay newspaper based in Los Angeles, Rooney was quoted as saying that he also believes homosexuality has ''something to do with genes.''

The newspaper's New York correspondent, Chris Bull, said Rooney, best-selling author and the drily witty commentator on CBS's ''60 Minutes '' made his remarks on blacks and homosexuals in a 20-minute phone interview in mid-January.

''I've believed all along that most people are born with equal intelligence, but blacks have watered down their genes because the less intelligent ones are the ones that have the most children,'' Rooney said, according to Bull.

''They drop out of school early, do drugs, and get pregnant,'' he reportedly said.

A CBS News spokesman, Roy Brunett, said Rooney denied ever making the statement.

''We're very concerned. Andy Rooney denies saying this,'' Brunett said.

Rooney was unavailable for comment.

CBS officials planned to meet personally with Rooney on Thursday when he was scheduled to return to New York City, Brunett said.

The Rev. Herbert Daughtry, a Brooklyn civil rights activist, called the reported comments just one more example of an uninformed person ''blaming the victim.''

''When one considers all the social disadvantages'' facing black people, Daughtry said, ''the wonder is not there are some members who are not achieving, but the wonder is that there are significant numbers of African-Americans who are still decent, making their way against tremendous odds.''

Rooney was harshly criticized by the homosexual community following comments perceived as anti-gay made during a CBS special called ''The Year with Andy Rooney'' that was broadcast Dec. 28.

On that program, Rooney said people recognized in 1989 that many self-induced ills, such as ''too much alcohol, too much food, drugs, homosexual unions, cigarettes ... are all known to lead quite often to premature death.''

Gay activists criticized Rooney for blaming homosexuals for AIDS and labeling gay relationships as a vice comparable to alcoholism or drug addiction.

Bull, who has been with the newspaper four months, said he asked Rooney whether he would broadcast similar disparaging remarks about other minority groups, such as blacks. ''Don't be so sure,'' Rooney replied before making the ''watered down'' genes statement, Bull said.

When told that his comments seemed racist, Rooney ''didn't seem to want to back down,'' Bull said.

Bull said he did not make a tape recording of the conversation.

Rooney's comments were slated to appear in the Feb. 27 issue of The Advocate, said a spokesman for the newspaper, which claims a circulation of about 100,000.

PANAMA CITY, PANAMA (FEB. 7) UPI - The man who led the paramilitary Dignity Battalions said Wednesday that ousted dictator Manuel Noriega cheated Panamanians and should have negotiated with the United States to avoid the Dec. 20 invasion.

Benjamin Colomarco, the principle leader of the now defunct pro-Noriega militia, told United Press International in an interview at Modelo Prison that Noriega was not honest with Panamanians.

''I think Noriega cheated everyone,'' Colomarco said as he stood outside his prison cell, dressed in jeans, a shirt and tennis shoes. ''He was not honest with us. He did not tell us how things were.''

Numbering about 3,000, the Dignity Battalions were formed by Noriega in 1988 and had been accused of violence and intimidation against opposition groups during Noriega's tenure.

Armed with automatic weapons, the Dignity Battalions and other paramilitary groups fought U.S. forces in the streets of Panama City for several days after the invasion that led to the ouster of Noriega, who is now being held in a Miami prison waiting trial on drug trafficking charges.

Colomarco, a 32-year-old economist and former director general of the state-run electric company, said the Dignity Battalions identified with Noriega's nationalistic and patriotic rhetoric.

But with Noriega out of power, Colomarco said he now supports the process of national reconciliation called for by new President Guillermo Endara, who was installed by the United States during the early hours of the invasion.

''What the government has to do is try to find unity to reconstruct the country,'' Colomarco said. ''I love my country. I want to participate in the reconstruction.''

Colomarco, who was captured by U.S. forces on Jan. 10 and awaits trial on a series of criminal charges stemming from his association with the Dignity Battalions, said he has committed no crimes.

''The evidence will show that I am innocent and that there were no crimes '' he said. ''To be in the Dignity Battalions is not a crime. History will absolve us.''

Colomarco said Noriega should have reached some kind of settlement with U.S. officials to avoid the invasion, which caused hundreds of deaths, the destruction of several neighborhoods caught in the crossfire and over $1 billion in property loss due to an outbreak of looting. Civilian death estimates from the invasion range from 200 to over 1,000.

''Why didn't (Noriega) negotiate?'' Colomarco asked rhetorically.

Colomarco described the Dignity Battalions as a patriotic militia acting with constitutional authority to defend the country against an invading force.

He accused the invading U.S. troops of creating anarchy leading to widespread looting in Panama City. Many Panamanians blame the Dignity Battalions for the looting and for a sharp increase in crime in the capital after the U.S. military action.

Colomarco said the invasion took him by surprise and that the resistence put up by the Dignity Battalions was spontaneous and unorganized. He said there was never any contact between the units and himself or Noriega.

''It was all isolated movements. We never had a specific plan,'' Colomarco said. ''(The resistence) was by a spontaneous, voluntary group of patriots. The Panamanian constitution says that all Panamanians have the obligation to take up arms to defend the country in case of an invasion.''

Although there were rumors that Colomarco had been killed during the invasion, he took refuge in his parents' house in Panama City until he was captured by U.S. troops.

NEW YORK (FEB. 7) UPI - New York City sued the Exxon Corp. Wednesday for $10 million plus damages, charging the energy giant with fraud and negligence in the pipeline spill of some 567,000 gallons of heating oil off Staten Island.

The state of New Jersey and the city of Elizabeth already have filed suit against Exxon because of the spill Jan. 1 and Jan. 2 in Arthur Kill, a waterway separating New Jersey and New York's Staten Island.

Mayor David Dinkins said the city took the step reluctantly but was forced to act because the oil company has refused to move voluntarily to correct the resulting environmental disaster.

''The Exxon oil spill is a disaster that could have been prevented, should never have happened. It has permanently scarred the environmental landscape,'' the mayor said.

''I, of course, continue to hope that Exxon will be a good corporate neighbor and will step forward voluntarily to restore the injured areas and to make sure that what happened earlier this year does not ever happen again,'' he said.

But Dinkins said he could no longer just take the word of company executives, who had assured him for weeks that Exxon would bear all costs related to the spill.

Exxon officials were not immediately available for reaction to the suit, which was filed in state Supreme Court in Staten Island.

The city is seeking $10 million in fines as well as a court order requiring Exxon to reimburse the city for its clean-up costs as well as to fully restore the damage done to the Arthur Kill and neighboring wetland areas.

Those actions could cost the company millions of dollars.

The suit charges that Exxon violated 13 laws.

It alleges that Exxon operated the pipeline for three years without a permit and that it submitted false reports to the city Fire Department indicating the pipeline system and its leak detection system were working properly.

On New Year's Day, the 6.7-mile Exxon pipeline that runs underneath the waterway ruptured about 150 feet from the New Jersey shore.

A pipeline alarm sounded and leak detection unit shut off the oil supply, but Exxon officials allegedly manually overrode the safety system because they assumed it was not working properly.

The delay allowedly the spill to multiply by ''over 100 times,'' the suit charges, until an estimated 567,000 gallons of heating oil were discharged.

Officials estimated the spill killed at least 400 birds. Environmentalists said they feared for migratory birds who will nest in area bird sanctuaries when they return in the spring.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The World Bank will resume some limited lending to China when it extends Thursday a $30 earthquake-relief loan, bank sources said Wednesday.

The U.N. organization suspended its lending to China last June, when the Beijing government crushed the pro-democracy movement. At the time, the bank had about $780 million in loans to China set for approval.

In its past fiscal year from July 1, 1988 to June 30, 1989, the World Bank and its affiliate, the International Development Association, loaned China $1.3 billion.

The World Bank's board is likely to approve Thursday a $30 million loan for earthquake reconstruction in China, bank sources said. The board also was to consider a $60 million loan for agriculture projects, but the matter has been postponed, they said.

The Bush administration has indicated that it was prepared to support resumption of World Bank lending to China on a limited basis, and for humanitarian purposes.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the administration believes that "it should avoid actions that would harm the Chinese people and would be prepared, on a case-by-case basis, to have the World Bank consider earthquake aid and other basic human needs loans to China." Eagleburger noted, however, "We still not support a general resumption of World Bank lending" to China.

The earthquake-relief loan will be provided by IDA, the World Bank's concessionary lending affiliate, for housing, economic assets recovery, social services and physical infrastructure reconstruction in an area devasted by the October 1989 quake in the border area between the provinces of Shanxi and Hebei, bank sources said.

(FEB. 7) UPI - The Soviet Communist Party followed Mikhail Gorbachev's lead today and voted to end its constitutional monopoly on power. A Soviet source says the party's Central Committee voted to remove Article Six of the Soviet constitution, which guaranteed the Communists single-party rule. The move paves the way for an end to more than 70 years of a one-party system.

Secretary of State Baker is in Moscow for three days of talks that will lay the groundwork for a June super-power summit in Washington. Baker will speak with Soviet President Gorbachev and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze during his stay in the Soviet capital. He also will become the first U-S official to address the Soviet Parliament when he speaks to a committee of the Supreme Soviet on Saturday.

The World Health Organization says Romania has asked for help in dealing with a reported outbreak of AIDS among children. Two World Health Organization specialists- one Soviet and one American doctor- are assessing the situation in Romania and will report their findings next week. Spokesman Gino Levi says that so far there is NO precise information about the AIDS situation. He says Romania has NOT given any figures or estimates.

A simmering dispute in Selma, Alabama, took a new twist when the white-controlled school board reinstated the black superintendent it had fired. The board asked Norward Roussell to return to work until his contract expires in June. He was fired last week because of mounting protests against the board's refusal to renew his contract. The school board also closed the city's schools indefinitely because of racial disturbances and walkouts by black students.

NEW YORK (FEB. 7) UPI - The stock market closed sharply higher Wednesday in active trading, as a rally in the technology sector showed the way and computerized program buying augmented the gains.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 16.21 Tuesday, surged 33.78 to close at 2640.09 after being down as much as 20 points in early trading.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 1.98 to 184.31 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 4.09 to 337.75. The price of an average share gained 37 cents.

Advances led declines 952-552 among the 1,938 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 186,710,000 shares, compared with 134,070,000 shares traded Tuesday.

Analysts said the technology stocks led the market's advance, sparked by International Business Machines Corp., which has had a stellar week thus far. "We've just had some good followthrough on the technology sector," said Jerry Hinkle, a trader with Sanford C. Bernstein and Co. "There's really no news involving those stocks, just that IBM has been up sharply this week and brought the focus to the technology sector," he said.

But Sidney Dorr, vice president of institutional trading at Charles Schwab and Co. in San Francisco, pointed out that high-tech stocks have "been abattered group lately and would be likely to stage an advance."

Other analysts said the prospect of renewed earnings growth may be giving IBM a much-needed shot in the arm. They say Big Blue's profits may rebound this year after a $2.4 billion restructuring charge.

They also said computerized program buying bolstered prices, as traders sold stock index futures and bought stocks to capitalize on the price differences between them. The market was also apparently satisfied with the results of the Treasury's sale Wednesday of $10 billion in ten-year notes.

Treasury issues were higher in late trading after news that the yield on the ten-year note auction was at about the expected level, 8.59 percent. The long bond was up 10/32 at 95 3/8 to yield 8.55 percent after being down as much as 5/8 point in early trading.

Even after the good news about Wednesday's auction, there were some concerns about demand in the auction of 30-year bonds Thursday. Hinkle dismissed those concerns, though. "I think the bond market has made the necessary adjustments. Yields have lifted somewhat and I don't think there's too much to worry about," he said.

"We're climbing the wall of worry," Dorr said. "Of all the people who have called (any recent rises) technical bounces and said the market shouldn't be at these levels, none produced the sell orders to bring it down."

On the trading floor, Mesa Limited Partnership was the most active NYSE issue, up 1/8 to seven. Varity followed, up 1/4 to 3 3/8. IBM was third, rallying 2 1/8 to 103 1/8.

Also active were Bank of New England, down 7/8 to 5 7/8 after Kidder Peabody reportedly raised doubts about buying interest in the company's Connecticut Bank and Trust unit. And Halliburton soared three to 45 3/8 after reporting a surge in fourth-quarter earnings.

Elsewhere in the technology sector, Digital Equipment climbed 1 7/8 to 79 1/8, Compaq Computer surged 4 3/4 to 86 1/8 and Hewlett-Packard jumped 2 3/8 to 47 5/8.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T rose 3/8 to 39 7/8, Eastman Kodak gained 1/2 to 38 3/8, Alcoa was up 3/8 to 62 and Merck jumped 2 1/8 to 72 3/4.

Airlines were strong, lifting the Dow transportation average. UAL, parent of United Airlines, jumped 4 1/2 to 139 1/4; AMR, owner of American Airlines, rose one to 55 1/2 and Delta Air Lines gained 1 1/4 to 63 3/4.

Elsewhere, DeSoto jumped two to 39 3/4. A court ruled Tuesday that the company's response to a bid from Sutton Holdings, the issuance of shareholder rights as a takeover defense, was not reasonable or made in good faith.

On the earnings front, Norton sank 4 3/8 to 48 after reporting a 35 percent drop in fourth quarter operating income.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 220,485,090 shares, compared with 163,437,680 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in moderately active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index rose 1.61 to close at 356.35. The price of an average share gained six cents. Advances led declines 334-197 among the 796 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 15,319,290 shares, compared with 16,175,260 traded Tuesday. Hillhaven led the Amex issues, unchanged at 1 1/2.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 2.80 to 426.79.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (FEB. 7) UPI - President Janez Drnovsek, in a state of the union message to Parliament, called Wednesday for a national dialogue to end the ethnic conflicts that caused a wave of violence and protest in the nation's poorest region.

Speaking to a joint session of the two-house legislature, Drnovsek, 39, warned feuding national leaders that the country had reached an ''extremely dangerous point'' and must revive normal relations among the nation's six republics and two provinces.

The president's address to the 308 deputies followed 10 days of demonstrations in Kosovo, the country's poorest region with a population of 1.7 million ethnic Albanians and 200,000 Serbs. The disturbances rocked Yugoslavia, a multinational country of 23 million people.

An estimated 80,000 ethnic Albanians participated in the demonstrations, demanding the resignation of pro-Serbian Kosovo leaders, free elections and a multiparty system to replace Yugoslavia's single-party Communist regime. Protesters also called for greater autonomy of Kosovo province from Serbia state, the largest of the six Yugoslav republics.

At least 26 ethnic Albanians were killed in armed clashes with riot police in Kosovo, and 90 more Albanians were injured. Serbian news media in the provincial capital of Pristina, 190 miles south of Belgrade, described demonstrators as ethnic ''Albanian separatists and terrorists'' who plotted to overthrow Serbia and Yugoslavia.

No Serbs or police were killed in the anti-Serb demonstrations, which began Jan. 24. The protesters, most of them young people, hurled stones at police in riot gear, who returned fire with tear gas. Authorities said 83 policemen were wounded, including three by firearms.

Serbian leaders have accused Slovenia and Croatia, the two liberal industrialized states of the northwest, of backing what they claim is an ethnic Albanian plan to secede Kosovo from Yugoslavia and attach it to neighboring Albania.

Slovenian and Croatian leaderships have supported ethnic Albanian demands for more autonomy in Kosovo.

Drnovsek, speaking on behalf of the eight-man state collective presidency, told Parliament during his televised address from the Federal Assembly that the republics must stop their feuding.

''It has reached the extemely dangerous point behind which nobody can guarantee that the current relations will not turn into most radical mutual conflicts,'' Drnovsek said.

Drnovsek said emergency regulations - including troops, tanks and police reinforcments in Kosovo - cannot solve the situation.

''A dialogue should be opened with all citizens in Kosovo who wish a peaceful solution to the problem, who wish to live together both in Kosovo and in Yugoslavia,'' he said.

Drnovsek said a plan to bring greater democracy, a multiparty system and a free market economy to Yugoslavia should help solve the Kosovo problem.

''In these conditions we should enable cooperation among all political parties and associations, providing their activities will not lead to further deepening of inter-nation conflicts and a forcible overthrow of the existing constitutional order,'' he said.

(FEB. 7) UPI - The Soviet Army caused quite a stir among people in the southeastern part of Czechoslovakia yesterday. Troops detonated some ammunition stores as part of the planned Soviet pullout, setting off a huge explosion followed by a huge mushroom-shaped orange cloud. Soviet officials say NO one was injured and NO radioactivity was measured in the incident, which came as bi-lateral talks got under way on the timing of the Soviet withdrawal.

The Army is offering mental health counseling for soldiers who fought in Panama to help troops deal with the side effects of combat stress. One counselor says that some paratroopers expressed feelings of guilt and helplessness after watching civilians hacked with machetes by members of Panama's Dignity Batallions. The army also is apologizing for NOT offering counseling to Vietnam veterans.

The jury resumed deliberations today in New York City in the assault trial of reputed Mafia boss John Gotti. Deliberations began yesterday in state Supreme Court after instructions from the judge, who told the jury that it should NOT convict Gotti unless the government had proven its case ''beyond a reasonable doubt.'' Gotti is accused of ordering the shooting and wounding of a union official... in retaliation for the trashing of a mob-linked restaurant that was built with NON-union labor.

A small earthquake jolted the Watsonville, California, area early today... but NO damages or injuries were reported. Officials say the quake registered four-point-two on the Richter Scale and possibly was another after-shock of last October's major earthquake in northern California. The Watsonville Police Department says it received only three phone calls from worried residents. A dispatcher says- ''Everyone was probably still asleep.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - The House, prompted by a speech last week by Rep. Gus Savage, D-Ill., adopted a resolution Wednesday urging the House Administration Committee to review record-keeping procedures of Congress's daily proceedings.

The resolution, introduced by Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., and adopted on a 373-30 vote, said in part that the deletion of parts of Savage's speech from the Congressional Record ''seriously threaten the integrity of the proceedings of the House.''

The Congressional Record is a written transcript of each day's proceedings.

The resolution asks that the Administration Committee report back to the full House ''as soon as practicable its recommendations with respect to deletions from the Congressional Record'' regarding Savage's speech.

Last week, Savage, a five-term black congressman from Chicago's South Side said a House ethics committee inquiry into his alleged sexual misconduct was spurred by racism in ''the white American mass media'' as well as by members of Congress.

The committee ended its investigation without disciplining Savage, but made public a report one day after Savage's speech that concluded Savage ''did, in fact, make sexual advances'' toward a female Peace Corps worker during an official trip to Zaire last March.

The committee also said it ''clearly disapproves'' of Savage's conduct, and included in the report a letter of apology that Savage sent to the woman last November.

''We have a situation here where remarks were made that were unparliamentary in nature, and where there are real questions about whether or not they should have been said on the floor,'' Walker said. ''They should not have been ... (but) we ought to have a printed record that reflects what the actual proceedings of the House said and did during the legislative day.''

In addition to the Congressional Record, Congress also keeps a videotaped record of each day's proceedings.

NEW YORK (FEB. 7) UPI - The dollar was buffeted in New York trading Wednesday as the Soviet Communist Party plenum called for a democratically elected president, which boosted the already strong West German mark.

But the impact on the dollar was limited by concern in financial markets at calls for monetary unification of the two Germanies.

The momentous resolution by the plenum that the Soviet Union's leader should be democratically elected represented a major victory for President Mikhail Gorbachev and his perestroika reform program. It also confirmed market faith in investments in West Germany and Eastern Europe.

''It was a real blizzard of news out there,'' said Andrew Hodge, vice president for corporate trading with Bank Brussels Lambert. The mark also rose on news that West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl will be in Moscow Saturday at the end of a visit by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker.

But Hodge said the effect of the Moscow news was counterbalanced by a decline in West German bonds and equities, a reaction to inflation fears and the West German cabinet's endorsement of Kohl's call this week for negotiations to be opened on monetary unification of East and West Germany.

Late in the New York session the dollar was quoted at 1.6565 German marks, off marginally from 1.6573 the day before. The U.S. currency was changing hands at 145.41 Japanes yen, up from 145.29.

''Initially the foreign exchange market was trying to trade that as a further plus for the mark,'' Hodge explained, ''but the late reaction for the German bond market was a bloodbath.'' The head of the Deutsche Bundesbank, the central bank of West Germany, has opposed the proposal.

Trader Keith Raphael of Chase Manhattan Bank said the strain on West Germany of East German immigration at a rate of 60,000 a month has roused fears of higher interest rates. This could brake the economic expansion that is drawing global capital and reinforcing the mark.

Despite deutsche mark dominance, Raphael noted, the dollar is holding its own against most other key currencies. ''The dollar itself is not dramatically weaker, it's the strength of the mark,'' he said.

In New York the British pound fell to $1.6970 from $1.7015.

Other dollar rates: 1.4875 Swiss francs, up from 1.4760; 5.6390 French francs, off from 5.6405; and 1,235.75 Italian lire, up from 1,234.25.

SAN FRANCISCO (FEB. 7) UPI - President Bush said Wednesday he would rather be ''cautious than ... reckless'' in the face of change in Europe and the Soviet Union, and he pressed his case for a strong U.S. defense posture against those who bank on ''unfulfilled hopes for the future.''

Addressing his $307 billion military blueprint for fiscal 1991, Bush also defended one of the first administration efforts to pare defense spending by closing bases, 10 of them in California.

''Many speak of the peace dividend. Few discuss the short-term cost of peace,'' Bush said in a speech to the Commonwealth Club. ''There will be costs as we cross the bridge to a better future - for dislocated industries and workers, for communities - painful, personal adjustments to be made. But America has always been willing to pay the price of peace.''

Bush's comments on the base closings were the first since he proposed that 35 military installations be closed as part of his effort to slash military spending next year.

He pledged assistance to those affected and railed at members of Congress scrambling to protect installations in their districts.

''There is something just a little ironic about certain members of Congress whose philosophy seems to be 'make deep cuts, but be sure to cut in somebody else's state,''' Bush said.

And sounding again the theme of his three-day campaign of caution in the face of reduced tensions in Europe and the Soviet Union, the president mentioned only in passing Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and his successful efforts this week at Communist Party reform.

''Some would have me predicate the defense of our people on promising, but as yet unfulfilled, hopes for the future,'' he said.

''I will not. I am determined to seek with the Soviets the collateral to implement a new peace. In international terms, collateral means soldiers discharged, tanks dismantled, nuclear missiles demolished, and chemical weapons banned.

''... Now we must not let impatience, born of euphoria, jeopardize all that we hope to achieve.''

In a question-and-answer session after the speech in which he also assured listeners of his safety on an upcoming trip to Colombia, Bush again praised Gorbachev's tolerance of peaceful change in the Eastern bloc but added, ''I want to be very careful about picking winners or losers or saying how they ought to do things.''

On Wednesday's decision in the Soviet Union to break the Communist Party's 70-year lock on power, he added, ''I'm not here to try to annoint or try to shape the deliberations of the central committee in the Soviet Union this very day. ... But I do think there is an awful lot to be hopeful about there.''

Bush's remarks capped two days of high-profile tours of defense-related facilities in California, visiting the Lawrence Livermore nuclear weapons laboratory to tout continuing research into the ''Star Wars'' anti-missile defense, and a day of overseeing mock war games at Fort Irwin, Calif.

While Bush delivered his speech inside the San Francisco Hilton, about 1,000 people demonstrated outside for many political causes. The protesters linked arms to form lines around the hotel. By the end of Bush's appearance a fire had been set in a street, and the Secret Service dispatched a decoy motorcade as Bush left in his limosine in the other direction for Air Force One.

Bush then departed for Omaha, Neb., where he will visit on Thursday the headquarters of the Strategic Air Command. He was to return to Washington on Thursday after a stop in Columbus, Ohio.

While hailing the changes in Eastern bloc nations where communism has crumbled with amazing rapidity, Bush said that even his daily morning briefings - ''the best information available to any world leader today'' - could not keep up with the breathtaking change.

''The world is simply moving too fast to forecast with absolute certainty what will happen next,'' Bush said. ''When it comes to the security of this country, I would rather be called cautious than ... reckless.''

His words echoed those pledged earlier at the reknowned space-tech lab, where he told employees, ''We are working on a significant reduction in arms - that's what the world wants, I believe in it strongly - but to protect the American people, we will settle for nothing less than the highest confidence in the survivability, effectiveness and safety of our remaining forces.''

With the talk of troop cuts and peace dividends and the display of tanks, troops and helicopters in the dusty Mojave Desert on Tuesday, Bush was on the road to bolster his defense budget against those eyeing quick savings from the reduced threat of war in Europe.

Bush acknowledged that 45 years of U.S. policy was in the process of being redrawn, and conceded that the same changed circumstances that last week persuaded him to propose deeper cuts in U.S. and Soviet forces in Europe have emboldened his critics to claim he is not keeping pace with geopolitical realities.

''When some complain of the cost of developing such technologies, they should first consider the cost of not doing all we can to deter conflict and protect the cities and citizens of America,'' he said. ''Clearly, in the future, we will need to be able to thwart aggression, repel a mistake, protect a sealane or stop a drug lord.''

RANCHO MIRAGE, CA. (FEB. 7) UPI - Four-time Academy Award-winning songwriter Jimmy van Heusen, who collaborated with lyricists Johnny Burke and Sammy Cahn on some of the most memorable songs in motion picture history, has died at his Rancho Mirage home at age 77.

Van Heusen died late Tuesday, about two months after suffering a stroke, a Riverside County Coroner's spokesman said.

Van Heusen won Oscars for ''Swinging on a Star'' in 1944, ''All the Way'' in 1957, ''High Hopes'' in 1959 and ''Call Me Irresponsible'' in 1963. He also won an Emmy in 1955 for ''Love and Marriage.''

The Syracuse, N.Y., native, many of whose songs were written for Frank Sinatra and Bing Crosby, also composed ''My Kind of Town,'' ''Young at Heart'' and ''Tender Trap.''

During World War II, while composing for films, he also served as a test pilot for Lockheed Aircraft.

Van Heusen is survived by his wife, Josephine. Private funeral services were planned.

LIMA, PERU (FEB. 7) UPI - The presidential candidate of a leftist coalition was slightly wounded by police gunfire Wednesday when officers broke up a march by his supporters, witnesses and candidates said.

Henry Pease, the presidential candidate of the United Left coalition, was struck in the legs by pellets fired by police, witnesses said. A senate candidate, a house candidate and two other unidentified people also were wounded.

Pease, United Left congressional candidates and supporters were marching toward a central market near the presidential palace when police moved in with tear gas, water cannons and buckshot.

Witnesses said Pease was hit in the legs by two pellets. He was given first aid by a doctor on the scene and then moved to a nearby hospital for further treatment.

''Is this any way to treat citizens?'' Pease asked reporters. ''Is this the way to protect the security of citizens?

Pease is one of four major candidates for the April 8 election.

In addition, police Wednesday reported that Shining Path guerrillas killed seven people, including two policemen, in two different cities in the Andes Mountains.

The two policemen, Raul Lopez Avila and Edgar Andia Mancilla, both 29, were killed Tuesday afternoon by guerrillas who stepped out of a car and shot them in Tarma, 100 miles east of Lima, police said. A woman bystander also was killed instantly by a bullet.

The bodies of four other people were discovered Tuesday night in a poor neighborhood in the city of Ayacucho, 200 miles southeast of Lima. They had been shot in the head and signs praising Shining Path leader Abimael Guzman Reynoso were found on the bodies, police said.

Some 17,500 people have been killed in political violence since the Shining Path began fighting 10 years ago to overthrow the Peruvian government and replace it with a communist regime.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - The nation's most visible conservative and liberal groups rarely see eye to eye and, in their annual ratings of Congress, couldn't agree Wednesday on whether federal lawmakers lean more to the ideological left or right.

At least according to some analysts, they both may be right.

The ratings from the American Conservative Union, one of the best known groups of the political right, and the Americans for Democratic Action, a top liberal organization, painted different pictures of the performance of the Democrat-led House and Senate in 1989.

The Conservative Union, basing its ratings on 20 votes in the Senate and 25 in the House, determined that both chambers were not conservative enough. It gave the Senate an average conservative rating of 46 percent and the House an average score of 43 percent.

But the liberal Americans for Democratic Action, using a different set of votes, was equally sure that Congress, despite its Democratic leadership, had failed to adequately pursue liberal goals. The ADA gave the Senate an average liberal rating of 45 percent and the House an average score of 50 percent.

However, while both groups appeared upset that their political ideology was not winning on Capitol Hill, the ratings may have reflected the fact that, at least in the first year of President Bush's administration, there seemed to be a decline in partisan bitterness.

''The reality is that Congress isn't following any agenda,'' said political analyst Norman Ornstein of the American Enterprise Institute. ''We certainly don't have the sharp ideological edges we saw'' during the Reagan administration when the president and Democrats often crossed swords.

''Now we have a kinder, gentler president and a kinder, gentler speaker'' in the person of House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., Ornstein added. ''We haven't seen any kind of a sharp-edge strategy.''

And while partisan bickering has shown signs of heating up in this mid-term election year, it thus far has not reached anywhere near the level of bitterness often seen during Reagan's two terms.

In its ratings, the American Conservative Union gave three senators - William Armstrong, R-Colo., Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., perfect 100 percent scores, while two, Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, were given zeroes.

In the House, the conservative group gave 10 members perfect 100 scores and 56 members zeroes.

It gave perfect 1989 liberal records to 25 House members and zeroes to 38 others.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - U.S. military planners have been told to ''focus additional attention on the defense of the Arabian peninsula'' and prepare for the possible spread of nuclear weapons to Third World countries, a defense official said Wednesday.

The instructions are in the latest Defense Planning Guidance, a biennial classified policy document issued by the secretary of defense to help the military services make plans as they draw up their budgets for 1992-97.

A senior Defense Department official, who briefed a group of reporters on the the Jan. 26 document on the condition he not be identified, said the classified paper offers a significantly relaxed assessment of the possible Soviet and Warsaw Pact threat to Western Europe.

For the first time, the document assumes completion of a U.S.-Soviet arms control treaty - the conventional force reduction talks under way in Vienna to cut back the number of U.S. and Soviet forces in Europe.

In fact, the document appears very general in nature and only in the area of the Middle East does it offer a shift in U.S. policy, where for years the Pentagon has had contingency plans in case of a Soviet attack on Iran to capture its strategic oil fields.

''The document says that the situation (in the Middle East) makes it prudent to focus additional attention on the defense of the Arabian peninsula as distinct from our previous focus on Iran,'' the official said.

''It does state that our policy should continue to consider the contingency of a Soviet attack into Iran,'' he added.

The document does not identify potential aggressors toward the Arabian peninsula, which includes Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Oman and other small states, but the official said Pentagon policy-makers were looking at ''powers in the region - Iran and Iraq - that have significant armed forces.''

The document, he said, also states: ''We must prepare for the proliferation of conventional weapons, including long-range missiles, chemical, biological and even nuclear systems becoming more common in Third World arsenals.''

Saudi Arabia, Iran and Iraq are all believed to have long-range missile capability. Iran and Iraq used chemical weapons against each other during their eight-year Persian Gulf war.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter said Wednesday that Nicaragua has corrected the major problems he has found leading to its presidential election, despite barring 20 members of Congress appointed by President Bush as observers.

''It's not a perfect election. We don't have perfect elections in our country or anywhere else,'' Carter told reporters.

''The election campaign, despite some problems, is on track and we think if there is any fraud or irregularity on election night, it will be detected. I think we're in fairly good shape.''

Carter is heading a group of elected government executives that has observed the registration and campaigning for the Feb. 25 election in which President Daniel Ortega, a leader of the leftist revolution that seized power in 1979, is opposed by newspaper publisher Violetta Chamorro.

The election is a critical event for U.S. policy in Nicaragua, which Washington blames for subversion in Central America but was unable to overthrow through the Reagan administration's backing of the Contra guerrillas.

Congress cut off military aid to the Contras in 1988, and Ortega promised his neighbors he would allow free and fair elections to prove his embrace of democracy, even permitting the Contras to participate if they agree not to fight again.

Nicaragua this month barred 20 members of the House and Senate appointed by Bush as the official U.S. delegation because Congress had approved additional humanitarian aid to the Contras pending the outcome of the election.

Carter said, however, Nicaragua will permit 12 members of Congress to join his observer group, including Sens. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and John Danforth, R-Mo., and Reps. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, and David Bonior, D-Mich.

Carter said the Sandinistas, in response to his group's requests, had moved to allow the Miskito Indians to fully participate in the elections and that since violence broke out at an opposition rally in December, there have been more than 300 gatherings ''without a single incident of violence.''

Also, the $9 million that Congress approved to help pay for registration, voting machines, and support operations of the parties - including the Sandinistas and Chamorro's opposition - is being distributed after weeks of bookkeeping problems, he said.

''The major problems detected by our group have been corrected,'' Carter said. ''If there is substantial fraud or improprities, we will reveal it.''

Carter, who has largely engaged himself with humanitarian activities and government policy discussions since his defeat for re-election in 1980, welcomed Ortega to the White House after his revolution overthrew the dictatorship of Anastasio Somoza, once backed by American aid. But Soviet and Cuban aid to Nicaragua soon soured the developing relationship, and Reagan moved to oust the Sandinistas.

Carter said it was Nicaragua's sovereign right to reject the official U.S. delegation that included many members who supported aid to overthrow the Sandinistas.

He said his greatest concern is what happens after the election - if the Sandinistas, victorious, will support democracy, human rights, and treat their defeated opponents ''with grace.'' If Chamorro wins, she will have to take over a government run by the Sandinistas for 10 years, including the army.

''It's an unpredictable thing,'' Carter said.

Lugar rejected the Sandinistas' invitation to observe the elections as an individual, and said he urged Managua to allow the U.S. group to attend.

''Candidly, I made the point with the Nicaraguans, 'If you think you're going to win the election, you have every reason to have this particular group of 20 people observe it, to see it is free and fair and to lead a different kind of debate (in Congress) than you've had before,'' Lugar said.

''To deliberately exclude this group is simply, I think, a foreign policy blunder.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - Federal anti-drug chief William Bennett told Congress on Wednesday that the Bush administration wants next week's drug summit in Colombia to produce some ''common steps'' among nations to battle narco-traffickers.

Administration sources confirmed that President Bush intends to sign a joint communique at the meeting to ban the commercial export of U.S. semiautomatics to South America, and impose tighter controls on chemicals used to make cocaine.

Bennett said next Thursday's summit in Cartagena, Colombia, will bring together leaders of the world's biggest cocaine producers - Colombia, Peru and Bolivia - ''and sadly the world's biggest consumer, the United States.''

''What we want out of Cartagena is a recognition and agreement that the four countries face a common enemy and need to take some common steps,'' Bennett told the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

''We are looking at across-the-board kind of action,'' economic and law enforcement, said Bennett, who will accompany Bush to the drug summit.

The trip will draw heavy security as there are fears that drug lords may seek to harm Bush. There have been reports that they have placed a bounty on his head and have sought to smuggle in anti-aircraft guns to shoot down Air Force One.

Bush, speaking in San Francisco on Wednesday after a luncheon address to the Commonwealth Club, said he is confident he will be safe. ''I'm not going to do something stupid or macho,'' he said.

The president said the trip is necessary to demonstrate support for Colombian President Virgilio Barco, who declared war last summer on the cocaine cartels.

''So it isn't whimsical or a desire to be in harm's way,'' Bush said. ''I think we have good arrangements and I think it is good, sound, anti-narcotic policy to support President Barco, who is doing an awful lot to protect our kids from the scourge of narcotics.''

Administration sources, confirming a report in USA Today, said the joint communique approved by Bush for the summit would have the United States underwrite a plan to replace the South American drug trade with legal commerce.

This would cost tens of millions of dollars and involve trying to get peasant farmers to stop growing coca for cocaine cartels in favor of another crop. The initiative would also encourage more private U.S. investment in South America.

The joint communique, sources said, would also call for increased efforts to combat the laundering of drug money and strengthen controls on the licensing or registration of planes, ships and explosives.

Bush, in his proposed budget to Congress last week, recommended that the United States provide an additional $206 million in economic and military aid to the three Andean nations next year. They now get $217 million.

Bennett's two-hour appearance before the House panel was his latest in a series of congressinal hearings to defend the administration's proposed $10.6 billion war on drugs, a 12 percent increase over current spending.

The federal anti-drug chief again heard criticism from Democrats that the White House was not willing to spend enough, particularly on education, and praise from Republicans, who said he was waging an effective fight.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., the panel's chairman, dished out some of the toughest criticism and challenged Bennett's contention that most of Bush's Cabinet secretaries were effectively participating in the drug war.

But Rangel took time at the close of Bennett's comments to say, ''we wish you well'' on the trip with Bush to Colombia.

''We support you and the president,'' he said. ''The country wants your speedy return.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - Congress voted Wednesday to lift sanctions against Panama that were imposed on the regime of Manuel Noriega and to send $42 million of humanitarian aid as the first installment of an aid package that may total $1 billion.

The bill that was approved by voice vote in the Senate and House will free as much as $500 million in loan guarantees, trade benefits and other forms of indirect aid to Panama.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said, ''This is modest package, a good beginning. Panama is on the right. This package will help keep it there.''

A second aid package expected to be completed in the next few weeks will provide $500 million to help pay Panamanian debts, restore public services and boost employment.

In an effort to force Noriega out of power and make him face charges of drug trafficking, the United States cut off economic assistance to Panama. But following the Dec. 20 invasion that resulted in Noriega's capture President Bush proposed a $1 billion aid plan.

The initial $42 million is intended to meet humanitarian needs in Panama in the wake of the fighting and looting that took place there. It will be used to rebuild housing and public works, help small businesses get back in operation, and train civilian police agencies.

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., ranking Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said the overall aid package ''will allow Panama's private sector to serve as a key to the nation's economic recovery.''

Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., urging support for the aid plan, said, ''If this area of the world was important enough to risk and lose American lives ... it is worth our capital to make sure that this democracy becomes a democracy and that its people prosper.''

Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said the plan ''combines aid, trade and investments.''

''This aid package for Panama is a necessary part of finishing the job that Operation Just Cause began,'' Solomon said, referring to the military code name for the invasion.

Some members, while supporting the aid plan, stressed the need for the new government of Panama to take steps to prevent money laundering by that nation's banks, which was widespread under the Noriega regime.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said members of his committee were ''very concerned about reports that the Endara government is resisting changes in bank laws'' to discourage money laundering.

Other members complained about the fact that the initial aid money is being borrowed from the account for aid to African nations, but sponsors of the bill assured them the money will repaid to the African accounts.

The House also passed, with some opposition, a related measure expressing the sense of Congress that Bush acted ''decisively and appropriately'' in ordering the invasion, and expressing sadness over the deaths of 23 U.S. soldiers in the operation. The resolution was approved on a 389-26 vote.

Rep. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., called the operation ''a total success,'' but Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., condemned it, saying it was ''unwise and illegal. It violated all of our treaties and agreements wherein we are bound not to intervene militarily in another country.''

Also included in the aid bill is a provision allowing the president to send up to $10 million to Eastern European countries to support their transition to democratic governments.

#90038u2306 02/07/1990 ~United Press International

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - Scientists reported Wednesday they have zeroed in on a genetic defect that appears to underlie life-threatening reactions to anesthesia, findings that may lead to better tests to avert anesthesia-related deaths.

Two research teams, working independently, said they have narrowed down the location of the gene for inherited malignant hyperthermia - one of the major causes of death from anesthesia - to chromosome 19.

Between 1 in 12,000 children and 1 in 40,000 adults have the disorder, researchers said. When such people are given many common types of general anesthetics, their bodies overheat, their heartbeats speed up and their muscles essentially burn out from repeated contractions.

Before the introduction of a drug to offset the symptoms in the early 1980s, up to 70 percent of patients stricken by the adverse reaction died. Even with the new therapy, about 5 percent of affected patients die.

In two articles published in the journal Nature, one team from Ireland's University College, Germany's University of Munich and London's St. Mary's Hospital and another group from University of Toronto said they have found genetic markers that appear linked to malignant hyperthermia susceptibility, or MHS.

The findings were based on genetic studies of more than 20 families known to have a history of the disorder. Although the precise defect responsible for MHS is not known, the Canadians found evidence indicating the MHS markers lie in the same region as the gene coding for a key skeletal muscle receptor.

''These results ... provide a potential accurate and non-invasive method of diagnosis for MHS,'' wrote Ireland's Tommie McCarthy and his colleagues.

Dr. Jordan Miller, an associate professor of anesthesiology at University of California-Los Angeles medical school, agreed there is a ''great need'' for better tests to screen for malignant hyperthermia before patients undergo general anesthesia.

Currently, the only conclusive test for the disorder involves surgically removing a piece of muscle tissue and testing whether it contracts in response to certain chemicals, Miller said.

The test, which costs $2,000 to $3,000 per person, is generally done only in people who have a family history of life-threatening reactions to anesthesia, he said.

''Anything that could significantly reduce the number of patients that have to undergo such tests would be extremely worthwhile in terms of cost, pain and simplicity. It would also allow more people to be tested,''

Miller said.

Other possible indicators of malignant hyperthermia, such as the jaw becoming rigid when a person is given a muscle relaxant, are not exclusive to that condition and can be found in some people who can tolerate anesthesia, he said.

Miller said widescale screening tests for the inherited disorder probably will not be available until researchers pinpoint the exact genetic defect or defects. ''But this is an important first step,'' he said.

SANTIAGO, CHILE (FEB. 7) UPI - President Augusto Pinochet hinted Wednesday that he would report directly to the president-elect and not the defense minister when he becomes army commander next month after yielding power to a democratically elected government.

Pinochet's remarks were part of a running feud between the general and Defense Minister-designate Patricio Rojas. The feud indicates a growing tension over Pinochet's role and status in the government when President-elect Patricio Aylwin takes office next month.

Pinochet, 74, who has held power since a 1973 coup d'etat, said he would discuss a planned reorganization of the army only with Aylwin and not with Rojas, whom the general described as ''an administrator.''

Aylwin won the presidency in a Dec. 14 election with the backing of an opposition coalition.

Pinochet's comments were the first strong indication of how he views the powers of the new government in relation to the army commander, a post he preserves under the constitution even after turning over the presidency to Aylwin.

Pinochet said Monday during a farewell tour of the country that he would restructure the army and create a new corps in northern Chile from two existing divisions.

But Rojas, Aylwin's designated defense minister, said Tuesday the decision on any military reorganization should be made by the new administration.

Pinochet told reporters Wednesday that Rojas's statement was ''a supposition.''

''What am I going to consult with you about - if the troops use a rifle or only a carbine?'' Pinochet said in Antofagasta, 850 miles north of Santiago. ''It is our (the army's) problem. It is a technical thing.''

Asked if that meant the matter did not need to be discussed with the new president, Pinochet said ''it depends.''

''If I am going to create units, then I'll talk with the president of the republic because Mr. Rojas is an administrator,'' the general said. ''He has to understand the problems.''

Pinochet's attitude toward the newly elected government has raised questions over how smoothly the transition from military to civilian rule will be completed.

Pinochet lost a 1988 plebiscite over the continuation of his presidency but the constitution gives him the right to remain as army commander for eight years without civilian interference. Aylwin has asked Pinochet to step down but he has so far refused.

Reports in opposition newspapers also said that Pinochet planned to move out of Santiago and live in a new home constructed in the middle of an army base in Iquique, 1,100 miles north of Santiago.

Pinochet did not confirm or deny the reports.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - At the request of three lawmakers who were star athletes, the Senate approved the Excellence in Education Act Wednesday with an amendment requiring colleges to report their graduation rates for athletes.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Md., and Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., said their measure is intended to encourage students on athletic scholarships to finish college since so few eventually become professional athletes.

''This is a consumer information bill for student-athletes and their families,'' said Bradley, a Rhodes scholar who was a basketball star at Princeton University and with the New York Knicks.

''A potential student-athlete and his or her family are entitled to a direct and valid answer to the question, 'If I enter your college or university as a freshman on an athletic scholarship in my sport, what are the chances that I will graduate within a year of those in my entering class?''' Bradley said.

The measure originally was introduced as a separate bill but wound up as an amendment to the education bill. It requires colleges and universities receiving federal assistance to provide to the education secretary the annual graduation rates of athletic-scholarship recipients.

The information would be categorized by race, sex, basketball players, football players and all other sports.

The education secretary would compile and publish the information and make it available to high school guidance counselors and principals.

After passing the Senate, the bill went to the House.

The NCAA, at its January meeting in Dallas, adopted requirements for reporting graduation rates. Bradley said that while that was significant, many athletes do not attend NCAA colleges.

McMillen played basketball for the University of Maryland and the Washington Bullets. Towns was a basketball and track star at North Carolina A&T State University.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - The government could save $1 billion a year by refusing to pay crop subsidies to farmers who make $100,000 a year, a farm program critic said Wednesday in filing a bill to "target" farm subsidies.

The critic, Rep. Richard Armey, R-Texas, advocates large-scale reform in farm programs. He has described them as "unrivaled for their sheer economic absurdity and ... fertile ground for serious spending reductions."

In his legislation, Armey proposed the government should not provide crop subsidies to farmers with a gross income of $100,000 or higher, or to farm operations that have gross sales of more than $500,000 a year.

Federal law already says no farmer can receive more than $50,000 a year in government payments. There have been complaints that some operators have subdivided their operations in order to evade the limit.

In a statement, Armey said the lack of income limits on eligibility for crop supports "is just one example of wasteful spending" in farm programs. "There is no reason we should be subsidizing individuals who earn more than three times the average annual income of an American family of four," he said.

Armey, who played an influential role in gaining passage of legislation to close unneeded military installations, said he would try to "give voice to the concerns of taxpayers and consumers" as Congress writes a new long-term farm policy bill this year.

The congressman said Agriculture Department statistics indicate that relatively well-to-do farmers received up to $1.5 billion in subsidies in 1988. The Bush administration has estimated tighter eligibility rules could save up to $1 billion.

DALLAS (FEB. 8) UPI - Lone Star Technologies Inc. said Wednesday a shareholder's derivative lawsuit filed in Delaware accuses some of its present and former directors of breach of duties in the acquisition of American Federal Bank, F.S.B.

''The suit was brought by an alleged shareholder of Lone Star common stock and names as defendants Lone Star Technologies Inc., and W.H. Beasley III, J.E. Devitt, J.E. Chenault Jr., J.P. Harbin, F.B. Hegi Jr. and W.D. Sanders, who are present and former directors of Lone Star,'' the announcement said.

Richard D. Greenfield with the law firm of Greenfield and Chimicles in Haverford, near Philadelphia, said the complaint was filed by his client, Rodney Shields of Arizona, who he said held about 300 stocks of Lone Star.

A derivative suit is filed on behalf of the company by a shareholder.

The complaint concerns American Federal which was created in August 1988 from the merger of 12 failed Texas savings and loan associations under a federal bailout.

Lone Star Technologies contributed $48 million to acquire AFB in a transaction that cost the federal government $1.3 billion.

The lawsuit did not specify damages. Lone Star said it expects the defendants to deny the claims and to ''vigorously contest this litigation.''

Greenfield said the complaint was filed about two weeks ago.

He said the complaint alleges Lone Star may lose its entire investment in AFB.

Greenfield said since the acquisition, nearly two-thirds of AFB's branches have been closed and several of its assets disposed of.

''Shields had asked the directors last year to bring suit themselves. But they rejected him,'' he said.

He said the complaint claimed ''the company has been damaged to the extent that $50 million has been put at risk by the investment in American Federal without necessary investigation into the assets and prospects of the insolvent thrifts.''

CHICAGO (FEB. 7) UPI - Attorney General Richard Thornburgh Wednesday announced the indictment of 20 reputed crime syndicate figures in the Chicago area on charges ranging from murder to loan-sharking rackets to gambling.

The 42-count, 102-page indictment resulted from eight years of investigation by the FBI, the Internal Revenue Service and state and local police, Thornburgh said.

Thornburgh said the long, complicated investigation shows ''our strong commitment to the fight against organized crime.''

The investigation centered on an organization called the ''Joseph Ferriola Steet Crew,'' after a late top mob leader, Thornburgh said.

He said the cases will be prosecuted by the organized crime division of the U.S. Attorney's Office in trials expected to bare much of the inner workings of the Midwest crime syndicate.

Detention hearings were beginning as of late Wednesday afternoon for 19 of the 20 alleged mobsters in custody. Officials declined to identify the missing defendant. They said they believe he is hiding in Greece.

Twenty teams of federal agents, state and local police were positioned at the homes of the suspects early Wednesday, officials said. Reputed mob boss Rocco ''Rocky'' Infelise and Salvatore ''Pizza Guy'' DeLaurentis later were apprehended by the FBI at O'Hare International Airport as they disembarked a Delta flight from Fort Lauderdale.

The indictment charges Infelise replaced Ferriola as head of Chicago organized crime in 1989, either just before or after the death of Ferriola. Working under Infelise as his ''supervisors'' were DeLaurentis, Harry Aleman and Louis ''Louie'' Marino, the indictments said.

Federal authorities charge Infelise and his underlings comprised a ''street crew,'' which profited from gambling, extortion, sports bookmaking, murder, and juice, or excessively high interest, loans.

The street crew was linked to a number of homicides dating to 1975 - the victims being people who either posed a threat to the operation or those who failed to pay a so-called ''street tax,'' thereby working independently of the mob.

The indictment also charges the defendants conspired to bribe public officials in Illinois and Wisconsin. Infelise, DeLaurentis ''and others'' conspired during the summer of 1989 to loan approximately $50,000 to an undercover IRS agent with the intent that he disburse the funds to influence county officials in Wisconsin and Illinois, the indictment said.

The indictment, however, said the county officials were never approached by the agent nor were they aware of the criminal conspiracy or in any way connected with the street crew.

The indictment is the latest in a string of setbacks for the local mob.

Suburban syndicate boss Albert ''Caesar'' Tocco was convicted late last year on racketeering charges after his wife agreed to provide evidence for the government. And suspected crime syndicate assassin Frank Schweihs and an associate await sentencing after an extortion conviction.

In addition, another extensive federal investigation of ties between the mob and Chicago First Ward politicians still is simmering. That investigation included electronic eavesdropping in a downtown restaurant favored by power brokers and extensive use of informers.

SEATTLE (FEB. 7) UPI - The U.S. Coast Guard announced Wednesday it is seeking public comment on a proposal to license operators of fishing, fish-processing and fish tender vessels under 200 gross tons.

The Commercial Fishing Industry Vessel Safety Act of 1988 stipulates a licensing plan must be submitted to Congress in September, the Coast Guard said.

There currently are no licensing requirements for the uninspected commercial fishing industry vessels. It is up to the owner to decide if a prospective operator is competent, Coast Guard officials said. The Coast Guard said it will accept written comments on the proposal before March 1.

The Coast Guard licensing program, designed to ensure a minimum level of competency, currently offers 48 licenses to cover all maritime activities required by law to have licensed persons in positions of responsibility.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Mobil Corp. faces a fine that could top $100,000 for failing to report a 50,000 gallon leak at a Brooklyn oil terminal and for originally saying only 80 gallons of kerosene leaked from the tank, officials said Wednesday.

The leak from the tank in the Greenpoint section was discovered Saturday, but Mobil only notified the state Monday, said Ben Marvin, a spokesman for the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Mobil first reported 80 gallons of kerosene had leaked from the tank, he said.

Marvin said he did not know if the spill caused any environmental damage.

Mobil workers have collected 37,000 of the 50,000 gallons that flowed into a drainage system, company officials said.

''The workers on the site began cleaning up as soon as it happened. They just didn't follow procedures to notify,'' said Mark Cohen, a Mobil spokesman.

''There is no excusable reason,'' Cohen said.

Cohen said the company was concerned with cleaning up the leak and would later investigate why its ''strict procedures were not followed.''

''We've emptied the tank that had the problem and right now we're focusing on remedying the situation. After that we will evaluate what happened in terms of reporting,'' Cohen said.

A DEC investigator was at the site overseeing the cleanup and confirmed the company's efforts, Marvin said. However, he said the DEC was concerned that procedures to report spills were not followed.

''Failure to notify is against the law. It carries a maximum fine of $50,000 per day,'' Marvin said.

Mobil officials said they never scaled the number down to 80 gallons. ''I don't know where that figure came from,'' said Cohen.

Marvin said he did not know whether the amount of oil reported spilled would effect discussions scheduled Friday between company officials and the DEC or whether the company would be held responsible only for failing to report the seepage.

''A spill of any quantity must be reported,'' Marvin said. ''It's the company's responsibility to make sure environmental laws are adhered to.''

A Mobil pipeline in the same complex spilled 65,000 gallons of unleaded gasoline in April 1988.

MOSCOW (FEB. 7) UPI - The Communist Party swept away its seven-decade monopoly on power Wednesday and will ask the people to approve a direct presidential elections in a dramatic advance for Mikhail Gorbachev's reform policies.

''This is a step of exceptional magnitude in our party's history - a landmark,'' Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev said in announcing the reform.

''Our party is undergoing a process of historic proportions, a process of transfer of power to the soviets,'' he said. Soviets are local governing councils.

The stunning announcement was a major victory for Soviet leader Gorbachev's reform drive and climaxed a momentous three-day plenum of the party's Central Committee, whose members agreed to contend for power in the first multiparty system in the 72-year history of the Soviet Union.

Outside the Kremlin, where the Central Committee met until 9:15 p.m, crowds waited for the announcement of the historic decision that could establish the first direct elections of a national leader in more than a millenium of Soviet and Russian history.

''In any case, the president would be responsible before the people and would be elected by the people,'' Vice President Anatoly Lukyanov, a classmate of Gorbachev at Moscow University 40 years ago, told hundreds of foreign and Soviet correspondents.

Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev, another close and trusted Gorbachev aide, explained the steps toward a new presidential system.

''The plenum supported the idea of asking the people to approve the introduction of a presidential government in this country,'' Yakovlev said. ''That is to say, the president should be elected for a certain term and he and his Cabinet shall have full power.''

In another key decision, the plenum did not recognize the breakaway of the Lithuanian Communist party, the first split of the monolithic central party organization in 72 years.

Yakovlev said the central party would ''render all material and other assistance'' to party loyalists in Lithuania, and the Soviet party again urged the head of the dissident party, Algirdas Brazauskas, to change his mind.

Lukyanov said the plenum agreed to change Article 6 of the Soviet constitution, ending a day of conflicting reports about what was done to the constitutional guarantee of Communist power.

The Central Committee will ask the 28th Party Congress to change Article 6 ending 72 years of Communist monopoly on power. Once the Party Congress approves, then parliament would have to approve and confirm the new text.

The draft text, read by Lukyanov, removed the guaranteed monopoly for the party.

''The Communist Party of the Soviet Union like other social and political organizations and mass movements participates in running the country and its social affairs,'' the draft read.

''In nominating its candidates, the party does not assume full governmental authority,'' it said. ''Its role is to be a political leader with no claim to any particular position in society encoded in the constitution.''

Stressing the finality of the step, Lukyanov said the party leadership would tell the Congress of People's Deputies to change the article to reflect the new conditions of pluralism and emerging political groupings.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, emerging from a three-hour meeting with Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, hailed the epic developments.

''This is clearly a time of great change in the Soviet Union, which is making a great effort to reform economically and politically, and to emphasize the importance of the introduction of pluralism into the political system, something the United States strongly supports,'' said Baker, who arrived Wednesday for a three-day visit.

A Moscow-based Western diplomat added, ''It's been a long time in coming.''

The decision by the Central Committee to give up unchallenged rule is the most radical political step of Mikhail's Gorbachev's perestroika era and will utterly alter the political landscape, eventually forcing Gorbachev to test himself at the polls.

The move follows the renunciation of total power by Communists in Eastern European nations set free under Gorbachev's reforms, and again makes the Soviet Union a model for its former satellites.

For the United States, a multiparty sytem in Russia will ulitmately mean some uncertainty about Soviet leaders - unlike in the past when party leaders like Leonid Brezhnev were unchallenged rulers and could remain in the party for decades. Brezhnev ruled 18 years, Nikita Khrushchev eight years and Josef Stalin ruled 29 years.

Since it took over in November 1917, the Communist Party has never had to contend for power.

Soviet state founder Vladimir Lenin's communists overthrew a provisional democratic government that emerged from the February 1917 Russian Revolution.

In its eight-month rule, the provisional government scheduled elections that Lenin grudgingly allowed, but when his Communist Party lost to the Social Revolutionaries, he closed the Constituent Assembly after it met for one day on Jan. 19, 1918, and dissolved and banned all other parties.

Fierce exchanges during the plenum's first two days forced it to be extended beyond its planned close Tuesday, and the meeting finally concluded Wednesday afternoon, just after Baker's arrival for a three-day visit to Moscow.

In his opening address Monday, Gorbachev told the party brass to reform or perish in coming battles at the polls in the evolving Soviet democracy. He also indicated that he intends to stay on the offensive against his conservative foes by asking for another plenum in several weeks to push for approval of his new democratic charter for the party.

Soviet newspapers devoted whole pages to the party leadership's dramatic plenum, publishing texts of many of the 50 speeches in its first two days and reporting the enormous attention the gathering had drawn around the world.

In the longest and toughest address Tuesday, Politburo hard-liner Yegor Ligachev spearheaded conservative resistance to Gorbachev's proposal for the party to compete for power with other political groups in his perestroika reform drive.

''The plenary meeting is being held at a crucial moment for perestroika,'' the official news agency Tass said. ''It was preceded by a broad discussion in the party, during which demands were put forward for a radical democratization of Soviet society, a reassessment of the role of the Soviet Communist Party as the leading political force in the country and the deepening of economic reform.''

In the emotional tug of war behind closed doors at the Kremlin, Ligachev led the conservative attack on Gorbachev's bid to hasten democratization in the Soviet Union, while Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov, Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and other senior officials rallied to his defense.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 7) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter said Wednesday that Nicaragua has corrected the major problems he has found leading to its presidential election, despite barring 20 members of Congress appointed by President Bush as observers.

''It's not a perfect election. We don't have perfect elections in our country or anywhere else,'' Carter told reporters.

''The election campaign, despite some problems, is on track and we think if there is any fraud or irregularity on election night, it will be detected. I think we're in fairly good shape.''

But White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk criticized the Nicaraguan government's decision to bar the congressional observers, saying ''we are disappointed that Sandinista stonewalling has brought this about.''

''The president's bipartisan commission reflects the full spectrum of opinion in the Congress on Nicaragua issues and it is universally regarded to be fair and impartial,'' Popadiuk said. ''It is hard to understand why a government that claims to be committed to a free and fair election would fear permitting such a group to observe the electoral campaign and the balloting.''

Carter is heading a group of elected government executives that has observed the registration and campaigning for the Feb. 25 election in which President Daniel Ortega, a leader of the leftist revolution that seized power in 1979, is opposed by newspaper publisher Violetta Chamorro.

The election is a critical event for U.S. policy in Nicaragua, which Washington blames for subversion in Central America but was unable to overthrow through the Reagan administration's backing of the Contra guerrillas.

Congress cut off military aid to the Contras in 1988, and Ortega promised his neighbors he would allow free and fair elections to prove his embrace of democracy, even permitting the Contras to participate if they agree not to fight again.

Nicaragua this month barred 20 members of the House and Senate appointed by Bush as the official U.S. delegation because Congress had approved additional humanitarian aid to the Contras pending the outcome of the election.

Carter said, however, that Nicaragua will permit 12 members of Congress to join his observer group, including Sens. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and John Danforth, R-Mo., and Reps. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, and David Bonior, D-Mich.

Carter said the Sandinistas, in response to his group's requests, had moved to allow the Miskito Indians to fully participate in the elections and that since violence broke out at an opposition rally in December, there have been more than 300 gatherings ''without a single incident of violence.''

Also, the $9 million that Congress approved to help pay for registration, voting machines, and support operations of the parties - including the Sandinistas and Chamorro's opposition - is being distributed after weeks of bookkeeping problems, he said.

''The major problems detected by our group have been corrected,'' Carter said. ''If there is substantial fraud or improprities, we will reveal it.''

Carter, who has largely engaged himself with humanitarian activities and government policy discussions since his defeat for re-election in 1980, welcomed Ortega to the White House after his revolution overthrew the dictatorship of Anastasio Somoza, once backed by American aid. But Soviet and Cuban aid to Nicaragua soon soured the developing relationship, and Reagan moved to oust the Sandinistas.

Carter said it was Nicaragua's sovereign right to reject the official U.S. delegation that included many members who supported aid to overthrow the Sandinistas.

He said his greatest concern is what happens after the election - if the Sandinistas, victorious, will support democracy, human rights, and treat their defeated opponents ''with grace.'' If Chamorro wins, she will have to take over a government run by the Sandinistas for 10 years, including the army.

''It's an unpredictable thing,'' Carter said.

Lugar rejected the Sandinistas' invitation to observe the elections as an individual, and said he urged Managua to allow the U.S. group to attend.

''Candidly, I made the point with the Nicaraguans, 'If you think you're going to win the election, you have every reason to have this particular group of 20 people observe it, to see it is free and fair and to lead a different kind of debate (in Congress) than you've had before,'' Lugar said.

''To deliberately exclude this group is simply, I think, a foreign policy blunder.''

NEW YORK (FEB. 7) UPI - A member of the jury considering a verdict in the assault trial of reputed Mafia boss John Gotti told the judge Wednesday that one of the jurors ''has brought a previous bias into the deliberations'' and pleaded with the judge for guidance.

In a note to the judge delivered late in the day a juror said, ''I feel we have a juror who has brought a previous bias into this room, please advise. This juror has indicated he had some opinion on guilt or innocence before the trial started.''

Acting state Supreme Court Justice Edward McLaughlin responded to the note by sending the frustrated jury back to the hotel where it is sequestered, and he suggested the jurors show more cooperation when deliberations resume Thursday.

''You can't get 12 New Yorkers to agree on anything,'' McLaughlin said.

''For 220 years juries have come back with verdicts, maybe with some bruised egos, but with a verdict,'' the judge said.

''I wouldn't know what's going on in there, but to question somebody's lineage or intelligence isn't the way to deal with a difficult situation '' he added.

In their second day of deliberations Wednesday, jurors pored over drastically different transcripts of the same secretly recorded conversation.

The variations, defense lawyers claim, prove the government changed its interpretation of the muffled tapes to match whatever criminal case it was prosecuting.

One of the transcripts jurors asked to see was used in two federal trials of organized crime figures. The other was an amended account of the same conversation submitted for Gotti's state court assault trial.

Gotti, 49, reputed godfather of the Gambino organized crime family and allegedly one of the nation's most powerful mobsters, is accused of ordering the wounding of union leader John O'Connor in retaliation for the trashing of a mob-linked restaurant built with non-union labor.

Gotti, who has previous convictions for hijacking and murder, could be imprisoned for life as a persistent offender if convicted in the assault case.

The May 7, 1986, shooting of O'Connor, a business agent for Carpenters Union Local 608, was allegedly carried out at Gotti's behest by a murderous Irish gang known as the Westies.

On the tape, made two weeks after the shooting, two admitted Westies were discussing the violence and said it was carried out ''for the greaseballs.'' The conversation between Mickey Featherstone and Kevin Kelly took place in a visiting room at the Rikers Island jail complex in New York, where Featherstone was being held on a racketeering charge.

Absent from the federal transcript, but included in the state version, was the name of Westies leader James Coonan, alleged gunman James Schlereth and the comment, ''He popped him.''

A state tape expert, Edward Wright, who altered the transcripts, said that after he had listened to the tape more than 50 times, ''the inaudibles became audible.''

The jury also asked to see a detective's notes from the debriefing of admitted Westie member James McElroy, a convicted killer who was the state's star witness against Gotti.

McElroy testified that he accompanied Schlereth to the Carpenters Union headquarters at 1650 Broadway and saw the aftermath of the shooting.

Gotti's lawyer, Bruce Cutler, in his closing statement called McElroy ''swill'' and a ''low life'' who made up his testimony so the government would reduce his 60-year federal prison sentence.

SAN DIEGO (FEB. 7) UPI - Indicted junk bond king Michael R. Milken has been named "Man of the Decade" by the Mexican and American Foundation, Inc., a spokesman for the border business group said Wednesday. Milken was unanimously selected to receive the foundation's top award of the 1980s by the board of directors late last year, said Ron Valles.

The former Drexel Burnham Lambert executive, who faces trial this year on 98 felony counts of securities fraud and related charges, will receive the award at an annual foundation banquet Sept. 22 in San Diego.

Federal prosecutors have said they are working on a new and broader superceding Milken indictment. Milken spokesman Ken Lerer has denied reports of a plea bargain offer.

In a letter to Milken notifying him of the award, foundation president Tony Valencia and two other foundation officials wrote, "The assistance you are giving to the goals that we represent are innumerable. Your quest to obtain capital to help finance the growth of minority businesses, who would not otherwise have those resources, is needed.

"Additionally, by encouraging investment in Mexico, you help develop transborder commerce and civic relations between Mexico and the United States," the letter stated.

The letter informed Milken that Americans who received "Man of the Year" awards from the foundation during the 1980s included two California Republican congressmen, Sen. Pete Wilson and Rep. Duncan Hunter; Lodwrick M. Cook, board chairman and CEO of ARCO; and Brian Dyson, president of Coca Cola USA.

Last June, Milken was honored at a foundation luncheon in Tijuana for his record of financing Hispanic businesses in the United States and for investing in Latin American export-oriented industries.

Milken received special permission from the Justice Department to attend the banquet. Accompanied by 50 Southern California investors, the 42-year-old junk bond wizard toured eight Mexican border maquiladora plants and later received the key to the city from then-Tijuana Mayor Federico Valdes Martinez.

Foundation officials said then they were not dismayed by Milken's legal difficulties in the United States. "As far as we're concerned, he is innocent until proven guilty. That's the American way," said finance director Gil Fuentes.

ANALYSIS BY JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (FEB. 7) UPI - For sheer terror, imagine flying in a Boeing 737 and having the top of the airplane tear off - riding with the top down at 24,000 feet.

That happened in real life to the passengers aboard an Aloha Airlines flight in April 1988. For 15 minutes, as pilot Bob Schornstheimer and co-pilot Mimi Tompkins struggled to bring the plane in for an emergency landing at Maui, the first class passengers rode in terror of being sucked from the plane as debris flew and useless oxygen equipment dangled and flapped.

''Miracle Landing'' takes the story of those 15 minutes and turns them into a two-hour movie that will have everyone who has ever experienced a fear of flying gripping the seat of their armchair. It airs on CBS Sunday, Feb. 11, 9-11 p.m. Eastern time, starring Wayne Rogers, Connie Selleca and Ana-Alicia.

The movie does not pretend to be a just-the-facts-ma'am docudrama. The name of the airline has been changed to Paradise and the word Aloha is never mentioned, not even in greeting.

There are made-up characters and other changes. Most importantly, for those who remember the headlines at the time, ''Miracle Landing'' does not show a stewardess being sucked out of the plane, as apparently happened in real life. Her body was never found.

''Miracle Landing'' opens in Honolulu, where Mimi Tompkins (Selleca) learns she has been accepted for ''upgrade'' training to become the airline's first woman captain. In the film, as in real life, this will be her last flight as a co-pilot.

Things move along rapidly as she co-pilots for Schornstheimer (Rogers), a former Air Force flight instructor. In the cabin Michelle Honda (Ana-Alicia) is one of three flight attendants making the passengers comfortable on a commuter hop from Hilo to Honolulu.

The stewardesses are serving refreshments when a little boy passenger notices a ceiling panel buckling and ripping.

Suddenly a 20-foot section of the fuselage is ripped away, sucking with it whatever isn't nailed down. The plane pitches violently, one engine is gone and the pilot must try to get the ship under control and bring it in for an emergency landing at Maui, the nearest airfield.

In the passenger compartment, there is havoc. Some passengers have been hurt; all are terrified. For most of the film, stewardess Honda drags herself up and down the aisle trying to help and calm the passengers, her long hair streaming in the wind.

The film keeps cutting back and forth from the valiant stewardess with the streaming hair to the intrepid pilot and co-pilot riding the bucking craft and exchanging technobabble about flaps angles and air speed.

That could get a little silly if you didn't have the constant picture of the bloodied passengers and beyond them - no airplane, no superstructure, nothing but blue sky and fleecy white clouds and death.

Now, that's scary and so is ''Miracle Landing.''

An oil spill like the Exxon Valdez could occur again.

That's what Connie Chung learns when she dons a hard hat and heads for Alaska for a segment of ''Saturday Night with Connie Chung,'' to air on CBS Saturday, Feb. 10, 10-11 p.m. Eastern time.

The show airs exclusive videotape footage taken aboard the Exxon Valdez just hours after it ran hard aground on Bligh Reef last March, eventually spilling 11 million gallons of bubbling crude oil into Prince William Sound.

The show gives the viewer a look at the place, the ship, the oil, the glacier, the icebergs, even The Pipeline Club, the bar where the captain of the Exxon Valdez supposedly had drinks the afternoon before the accident. It uses interviews, graphics and film for a step-by-step guided tour to ecological disaster.

The show makes a number of points, including that of a woman pilot who flew over the scene nine hours after the accident and saw no oil company gear at work to clean up the spill. She remembers thinking, ''If this is the biggest oil spill in the United States - where is everybody?''

She added that for two days after the ship went aground, a dead calm prevailed at Prince William Sound. It was three days after the accident that gale force winds spread the oil disastrously. By then, barely one percent of the oil had been picked up.

Is the oil industry prepared to protect the environment? Dan Long of the Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation - whose videotapes of the scene are shown here - says the answer is no.

Are they better prepared to do so? They say they are, but even Larry Shier an official of Alyeska, the oil industry consortium set up to handle oil spills, admits there still are no guarantees.

(FEB. 7) UPI - Soviet Communists give up monopoly on power... a Politburo member says the party will propose a presidential system of government... President Bush calls for strong defense. U-P-I has details on the top stories and more, next:

The Soviet Communist Party took a historic step today, voting to give up its monopoly on power. A Politburo member says the party also will ask the people to approve a presidential system of government with a Cabinet.

The Soviet vice president said the party's Central Committee voted to change Article Six of the Soviet Constitution. That's the article that has guaranteed single-party rule for the Communists for more than 70 years.

The Soviet news agency Tass confirmed the vote, but gave NO details of the program adopted by the party leadership.

The move opens the way for a multi-party system, something President Gorbachev pushed for when he addressed the opening of the plenum on Monday.

In London, Prime Minister Thatcher welcomed the end of the Communist monopoly on power, calling the move a ''great decision.''

She told a visiting Soviet delegation that she supports everything Gorbachev is trying to do, and said she's ''very pleased'' that communism ''will be one party among other parties.''

Secretary of State Baker began talks in Moscow today with Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze at the start of his four-day visit to the Soviet capital.

Baker arrived as the Soviet Communist Party continued Day Three of a tumultuous meeting that had been scheduled to end yesterday. Baker said the changes going on in the Soviet Union are ''very important,'' but he doesn't expect them to affect his Moscow talks.

U-S officials expect those talks to result in basic decisions on several strategic arms issues, including limits on cruise missiles.

Also on the agenda is the future of a united Germany.

In a related development, Shevardnadze said today that West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and his foreign minister will come to Moscow on Saturday in a surprise visit. Kohl will join the Shevardnadze-Baker talks.

NO details were given, but East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow was in Moscow last week for talks that covered reunification.

West Germany also said that Kohl will meet with President Bush later this month, for talks that will touch on German unity.

(FEB. 7) UPI - The West German government says it's excited about the prospect of introducing its currency into the East German economy.

But international financial experts say the proposed German monetary union may produce a rocky road for the European Community's integrated monetary system.

Since 1979, West Germany and eight other E-C countries have linked their currencies within narrow fluctuation margins, while floating jointly against other currencies such as the U-S dollar.

But one analyst warns that hooking the West German deutschmark - the strongest currency in Europe- with the heavily subsidized East German economy could complicate matters for the E-C.

On the other hand, some financial observers say an influx of the West German mark into East Germany could invigorate its stagnant economy and draw foreign investors to East Germany.

President Bush today pushed ahead with his campaign to drum up support for his 307-BILLION-dollar defense budget.

Bush toured the Lawrence Livermore nuclear weapons lab near San Francisco and said the U-S effort to reduce arms stockpiles must NOT be allowed to impair America's defense against nuclear attack.

Bush said that even though Washington is working to ''reduce arsenals and reduce tensions,'' it's important to keep in mind ''the crucial role of strategic defenses.''

Bush yesterday praised reform efforts going on in the Soviet Union. Today, he cited the Strategic Defense Initiative as a necessary deterrent against nuclear attacks ''from the many other countries'' that are acquiring ''ballistic missile capabilities.''

The Strategic Defense Initiative looms as a prime target of congressional budget-cutters hoping to win bigger immediate savings from the reduced threat of war in Europe.

(FEB. 7) UPI - The federal government thinks the bald eagle has landed on its feet, or talons, after threats of its extinction.

The Interior Department says it will examine gains made in the bald eagle population with an eye toward shifting the species from its present endangered classification to the threatened category.

The reclassification would mean that while the majestic bird still faces the possibility of becoming extinct, the danger is NOT as imminent as suggested by the endangered tag.

But the possible move has some bird watchers scratching their heads.

An expert with the National Audubon Society says his group is- quote-

''leery of this announcement because recovery has been spotty and inconsistent throughout the country.''

The Interior Department says the bald eagle has scored gains among its ranks in every U-S region, except the Southeast.

The Education Department has some sobering news about geography education.

The department's first test of geographic knowledge shows that most U-S high school seniors are NOT able to find Southeast Asia on a map. Many of the seniors do NOT know which parts of the world are hot and which are cold.

The testing was done by the National Assessment of Educational Progress, the government's testing project. Delaware Governor Michael Castle, a member of the board overseeing the project, says the results don't bode well for ''this nation's ability to be full partners in the world economy.''

Said Castle- ''You can't do business with a customer you don't know.''

The tests were administered in 1987thousand high school seniors, and they correctly answered only 57 percent of the 76 multiple-choice questions.

Only 50 percent of the students knew the Panama Canal cuts the sailing time between New York and San Francisco. And 13 percent could NOT find Canada on a world map.

PHOENIX (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Three-Five Systems Inc. has earned the Pitney Bowes Quality Award for 1989 Quality Performance.

The optoelectronics and display systems manufacturer was selected as a recipient from among many Pitney Bowes vendors monitored for quality throughout 1989.

In its selection process for the prestigious annual awards, Pitney Bowes subjects every shipment from each of its suppliers to an individual performance rating for quality, delivery and price.

Quality standard levels which are required by Pitney have been consistently raised in 1988 and 1989, and will increase yet again for 1990 according to Robert Bretz, director of materials management for Pitney Bowes. Three-Five Systems plans to be a contender for the award program in 1990 as well.

Joseph Riccio, vice president of quality assurance for Three-Five Systems stated, ''Our ability to achieve this award is highly reflective of the focus of Three-Five's entire manufacturing operation. We maintain strict quality assurance procedures, enforce rigid SPC techniques, and subject our own products to a comprehensive quality testing program which is more demanding than that of our customers.''

Company President David Buchanan added, ''Top quality in all of its product lines is the foundation that will support the company's continued growth. We believe that our current success is due in large part to that concept.''

Pitney Bowes will present the award to Three-Five at its Quality Award Luncheon to be held later in February at Pitney Bowes' headquarters in Stamford, Conn.

Three-Five Systems Inc. is a leading international manufacturer and distributor of optoelectronics and display systems. Current products include application specific integrated displays and liquid crystal displays with on-board drive circuitry, as well as infrared emitters/detectors and a variety of single and multi-digit displays in standard and custom formats.

PORTLAND, OR (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Texas Instruments' Semiconductor Group has awarded its Supplier Excellence Award for 1989 to Electro Scientific Industries Inc. (ESI). The award recognizes ESI for its performance in supplying laser memory repair systems, technical support and service to Texas Instruments.

"We selected ESI for this prestigious award because of its outstanding support in supplying laser repair systems to us. This award is our way of saying thank you for being an excellent supplier," said Ernie Cook, U.S. procurement manager for TI's Semiconductor Group.

This is the first time that ESI has received the TI award. Texas Instruments has presented the award annually since 1976. It honors fewer than one percent of its suppliers worldwide.

ESI and TI recently signed the largest purchase agreement in ESI's history calling for delivery of ESI's most advanced laser processing systems, the Model 9000, over four years.

ESI has offices and representatives in 37 countries around the world. Founded in 1953, ESI was a pioneer in the application of laser technology to circuit manufacturing, and today is a world leader in the production of laser systems for trimming and processing microelectronic circuitry, and a major material and equipment supplier to the passive component industry.

FREMONT, CA (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - GRiD Systems Corp., a leading laptop computer manufacturer, Thursday introduced its first small-footprint desktop computers, a powerful Intel 80386SX-based model and a low-cost 80286-based model.

Both the 16MHz GRiD 386sx-MFP (MicroFootprint) and 10MHz GRiD 286-MFP use the industry standard AT bus and measure just 15-1/2 inches wide, 15 inches deep and four inches high.

Standard configuration includes 1MB of RAM, expandable to 12MB; VGA (video graphics array); a 3.5-inch, 1.44MB floppy disk drive; 101-key enhanced keyboard and three add-in slots.

GRiD President Alan Lefkof said the GRiD 386sx-MFP and 286-MFP are full-function computers with greater capability than most small-footprint desktops.

"The 386sx-MFP and 286-MFP fit GRiD's overall strategy of downsizing our desktop computers," Lefkof said. "They provide more desktop work space while at the same time offering increased configurability and expandability."

GRiD's MFP desktops are designed primarily to address the computing needs of office personnel in Fortune 1,000 companies and large government agencies. The small-footprint computers provide local processing power when used to replace mainframe terminals. They also offer customers a highly configurable workstation when used in a networked office environment.

Like other GRiD products, the MFP desktops come with a wide variety of standard features. A GRiD MFP desktop user can purchase a full-featured system including a mouse, 4MB of RAM, VGA screen and 40MB hard drive without using any of the unit's three ISA expansion slots. This gives the user the ability to choose from a broad selection of add-in cards including fax cards and additional storage.

GRiD's 100-watt power supply will support an ample array of add-in cards and additional drives. Many small-footprint desktop vendors offer 50- or 75-watt power supplies that will not run as many internal peripherals as will GRiD's.

The standard 1MB RAM in GRiD's desktop computers is flexible to meet a user's needs. In addition to 640KB of main memory, the 384KB between 640KB and 1MB can be selected either as shadow RAM for high performance or extended memory for use by applications software or operating systems.

MONETT, MO. (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Jack Henry & Associates Inc. (NASDAQ:JKHY) Thursday reported second quarter and six-month results which reflected continued progress in its return to providing integrated IBM-based systems to financial institutions.

In the second quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, income from continuing operations was $254,000, or 7 cents per share, on net company revenues of $2,699,000, compared with income from continuing operations of $387,000, or 10 cents per share, on net company revenues of $2,692,000 in the second quarter a year ago.

Net income, after inclusion of losses from discontinued operations, for the current quarter was $174,000, or 5 cents per share, compared with net income after losses from discontinued operations of $271,000, or 7 cents per share, in the second quarter a year ago.

Results for the six-month period ended Dec. 31 reflect income from continuing operations of $408,000, or 11 cents per share, on net company revenues of $5,007,000, compared with income from continuing operations of $819,000, or 23 cents per share, on net company revenues of $5,224,000 for the like six-month period in the prior year.

Net income including losses from discontinued operations was $305,000, or 8 cents per share, in the 1989 six month period and $654,000, or 18 cents per share, in the 1988 period.

''The second quarter results showed improvement over the first quarter in terms of the revenues and income of our data processing systems business '' said Colin McAllister, chief executive officer.

''Net income also increased over the first quarter, but not as much as we had hoped, due to some increased costs and an additional loss from our discontinued operations.''

McAllister also said, ''Our order backlog and current sales activity indicate that we should show continued progress in the second six months of the fiscal year. Most, if not all, of the improvement is expected to be reflected in the financial results of the fourth quarter.''

The comparable periods a year ago included revenues of about $1.1 million each quarter from a software development and marketing agreement with another hardware vendor. Arrangements with that vendor were suspended last June.

No revenues were recognized from that vendor in the current-year periods. Since July 1, 1989, all of the company's revenues have come from direct sales to individual customers.

Separately Jack Henry & Associates Thursday announced that, in response to various unsolicited inquiries, the company has authorized its investment banker, Pauli & Company Inc. of St. Louis, to evaluate these and any other inquiries received regarding a possible sale, merger or other business combination involving Jack Henry & Associates Inc.

''This action is consistent with our previously stated intention to maximize value for all shareholders,'' said Jack Henry, chairman of the board. ''All discussions to date with outside parties have been of a very preliminary nature, we are not in receipt of a firm offer and there is not any assurance that a business combination will occur.''

SAN JOSE, CA (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - The water conservation efforts of Santa Clara Valley residents appears to be continuing. Overall water use declined ten percent in January 1990 as compared with January 1987.

"It's heartening to see that water conservation is still occurring during the winter months," stated Sharon Israel, public relations specialist. "We know it is more difficult to cut back during the winter. There is only so much water to be saved from indoor use only."

Residential and business customers continued to reduce their water usage under the voluntary water conservation program. Together, they used 10.4 percent less water than in 1987. This is a significant savings of more than 250 million gallons of water. The mandatory water conservation goal had been 25 percent less than 1987 usage.

Public Authorities (cities, schools districts, the county) used 19.9 percent less water in January 1990 as compared with the same month in 1987. This was a great improvement over the conservation figures for November-December 1989 when water usage was up 13 percent.

The rainfall situation has improved slightly in the past two months. December 1989 recorded only .04 inches of rainfall. However, January 1990's rainfall figure was 1.84 inches. This was a slight increase over the rainfall figure from January 1987 when 1.60 inches of rain fell in Santa Clara Valley.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Radio Shack(R), a leading retailer of PC-compatible computers and the nation's largest consumer electronics retailers, announced five new computers and a 24-wire dot matrix printer at an open house highlighting its complete line of Tandy computer products.

Unveiled were an 80286-based laptop computer, small footprint 286 and 386SX(TM) CPU-based computers, a 16 megahertz (MHz) 386(R) CPU-based computer, a 33 MHz computer using the 386 microprocessor, and a low-cost printer capable of color printing.

The ''executive black'' Tandy (R) 2800 HD 80286-based laptop computer has selectable clock speeds of 12 or 6MHz and includes one megabyte (MB) of internal memory; a 20MB hard drive; one 1.44MB floppy disk drive; an 8.625-inch x 9.125-inch, backlit, EGA-compatible LCD screen; parallel, serial, external monitor and keyboard ports; and provision for an internal 2400 baud modem.

Tandy's popular DeskMate (R) productivity software and the MS-DOS(R) 3.3 operating system are factory-installed on the hard drive.

The 2800 HD weighs less than 12.5 pounds with the battery.

The Tandy(R) 2500 XL is a new low-profile computer that uses the 10MHz Intel(R) 80286 processor and includes 1MB of RAM. Tandy's DeskMate Graphical User Interface (TM) and MS-DOS 3.3 are built into memory for ''instant on'' operation. It also has the ability to record and play back high-fidelity speech and music.

Measuring 4.25 x 15.5 x 15 (HxWxD) inches, the 2500 XL features a ''fold out'' hinged case design for ease of access to expansion cards and easy installation of additional drives.

Three open 16-bit slots accommodate full-size expansion cards.

One 1.44MB disk drive is installed with room for another 3.5-inch and one 5.25-inch device. This and all other new Tandy desktop computers contain 16-bit VGA, 16-bit SmartDrive(TM) IDE controller, a serial port, bidirectional parallel port, mouse port, and socket for an optional math coprocessor.

The Tandy(R) 4016 SX, a 16MHz Intel 386SX processor-based computer, shares the same small footprint and design with the 2500 XL. It includes many of the same hardware features as the 2500 XL with the additional power to run 386-based software.

The Tandy(R) 4016 DX computer uses the 16MHz 386 CPU with a full 32-bit data path across two memory expansion slots. It accommodates additional expansion through four device bays and six 16-bit card slots.

Other key features of the 4016 DX are 1MB of memory, 16-bit VGA graphics adapter, 16-bit SmartDrive IDE connector, a mouse port and one 1.44MB floppy drive.

Utilizing the industry standard architecture and Intel's 386 microprocessor operating at 33MHz, the Tandy(R) 4033 LX is the most powerful PC offered by Radio Shack.

It combines high-speed static memory and a cache controller for superior speed and performance.

The combination of high-performance features delivers approximately two-and-a-half times improvement in CPU intensive applications over PCs using the 16MHz 386 processor with cache.

DENVER (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Oxford Consolidated Inc. (NASDAQ:OXCI), a Denver-based oil and gas company, announced Thursday that it will hold a special shareholders' meeting on Feb. 27, 1990 to consider a proposal affecting Oxford's common stock.

The net effect of the proposal is to reverse split the current common stock by 20 to 1 with the company purchasing the shares of those shareholders who currently own fewer than 300 shares of Oxford common for cash at the mean of the bid and ask price.

The proposal is a two step transaction which would first issue one new share of Oxford common for each 300 shares. Oxford would buy any fractional shares for cash at the mean of the bid and ask price prior to the meeting. The second step of the proposal is a forward split of 15 to 1.

Oxford said the proposal is intended to reduce the high cost of administering over 3,500 small investors accounts which represent approximately 2 percent of the outstanding common stock and to provide liquidity to small shareholders who presently cannot dispose of their shares without incurring expenses which are substantial relative to the market value of their stock.

Additionally, the company expects better access to capital markets than is currently available.

The special shareholders' meeting will also consider a proposal to convert the 17,114 outstanding shares of Oxford Series A $10 par value convertible preferred stock to common stock in the ratio of seven shares of current Oxford common stock for each share of preferred.

Oxford Consolidated common stock closed at 19 cents bid, 21 cents asked in NASDAQ trading yesterday.

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Calprop Corp. (ASE:CPP), one of California's premiere residential builders and developers announced that lot sales during the fourth quarter will result in an additional $9 million in gross revenues.

The company sold 49 ready-to-build lots in Sonoma County in Northern California and 68 lots in Los Angeles County.

Bill Rattazzi, president and chief operating officer, explained that ''these sales are part of Calprop's continued operating expansion into all levels of residential land development and construction. We believe selling these lots at their current stage of development offered us an optimal return and was in line with our corporate goal of strategic asset management to create a balanced portfolio of development and construction projects statewide.'' NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Al Horrigan, president of Northern California Operations and senior vice president, and Calprop's joint venture partners, Doilney and Sass, negotiated the sale of 12.5 prime acres at the entrance of the prestigious Fountaingrove Country Club in Santa Rosa for approximately $5.2 million.

Horrigan commented: ''This sale illustrates Calprop's commitment to strategically position our investments throughout the area. By continually reviewing our projects, we can maintain a balanced inventory position and enhace our operating flexibility.

''Calprop has an agressive position in the Northern California market with two of the company's largest development projects located here. Provence, Calprop's 503-unit master planned community in Windsor, has been greeted enthusiastically by homebuyers in the region due to its superior design and construction. It is currently in the second phase of development with 131 units under construction.

''In addition, the company recently optioned a thousand acres for a master planned community focusing on a championship golf course near Jackson in Amador County. This project is currently in the preliminary planning process. This lot sale helps us to balance these long-term commitments.''

Other Calprop projects in Northern California are located in San Carlos, Cotati and Half Moon Bay.

SAN JOSE, CA (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Finnigan Corp. Thursday reported the results of its fourth fiscal quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Sales for the fourth quarter were $32,524,000, approximating last year's $32,337,000. There was a net loss of $859,000, or 16 cents per share for the quarter, compared to net income of $1,376,000, or 25 cents per share in last year's fourth quarter.

Sales for the full year at $118,754,000 were 9 percent lower than 1988's $130,732,000. The loss for the full year was $3,941,000, or 73 cents per share, compared to the prior year's net income of $8,162,000, or $1.50 per share.

The company recognized a tax benefit of $235,000 for the fourth fiscal quarter and $302,000 for the full year. The combination of losses in jurisdictions for which offsetting tax benefits were not available and income in other subsidiaries resulted in the small tax benefit relative to the pre-tax loss.

Earnings for 1988 included a benefit of a one-time adjustment of $316,000 associated with the company's adoption of Financial Accounting Standard No. 96.

Order receipts for the fourth quarter rebounded strongly and set a new quarterly record at $40,545,000. This represented a 41 percent increase over the third quarter and 26 percent increase over the prior year's fourth quarter. DALLAS (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - For the third time since the Department of Transportation (DOT) started tracking airline performance, one airline has swept all three major categories.

Dallas-based Southwest Airlines, which last month achieved major airline status on its sales past the $1 billion mark, had the best records of the nation's 12 largest airlines in ontime performance, Customer service and baggage handling.

The DOT reported that more than 81 percent of the airline's approximately 25,000 flights for the month of December arrived on time, that it had only

.19 Customer complaints per 100,000 passengers and that only 4.99 passengers per 1,000 reported any baggage problems.

''The employees of Southwest Airlines have again set a record in those areas most important to our Customers, proving once more that it is possible to have the lowest fares and at the same time provide the best Customer service,'' said Gary Barron, executive vice president and chief operations officer of Southwest.

''I know that with Southwest's new status of 'major' carrier, the employees will continue to provide the superb Customer service that has contributed to our success.''

Known as the ''maverick'' of the airline industry because of its combination of low fares, no interline policy, short ground times and unparalleled profitability record, Southwest Airlines first captured the highly sought after DOT crown in the March 1988 report and became the first airline to ever do so.

The airline repeated the event in the November 1989 report and remains the only airline since the DOT started tracking performance statistics to sweep all three categories.

Southwest Airlines currently serves 31 airports from California to Birmingham and Nashville and from Detroit and Chicago to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas. The airline recently announced it will begin service in April from California's Burbank airport, bringing to six the number of California airports served by Southwest.

The airline also reported a record profit of $71,558,000 for 1989, up from its record profit of $57,952,000 for 1988.

PHOENIX (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Statement from Edward R. Beauvais, chairman and chief executive officer of America West Airlines (NASDAQ:AWAL; PSE:AWA):

America West is disappointed with Department of Transportation Administrative Law Judge Yoder's recommendation that Continental Airlines, rather than America West, was selected to provide service to Japan.

However, the judge concluded that America West should be chosen for back-up authority in the event Continental is unable to operate the service. We believe that we have proposed a service pattern that will provide important benefits for the traveling public and substantial competitive benefits in the U.S.-Japan market. America West intends to file timely exceptions and a brief urging that the DOT decision-maker overturn Judge Yoder's recommendation which was the exact reverse of the DOT Public Council's position.

It appears to be a ''two horse race'' between America West and Continental and directly raises a question of the seriousness of the Department's policy of encouraging entry by new carriers in international markets. We feel confident that the DOT decision-maker will come down on the side of new entrants with the final decision due in the late April, early May time frame.

The company reported revenues of $6,610,000, a net loss of $2,086,475 and a loss per common share of 40 cents for the first quarter. For last year's comparable quarter revenues were $3,809,000, the net loss was $861,000 and loss per common share was 20 cents.

The per share data is net of undeclared and unpaid preferred dividends of $275,000 in the first quarter of fiscal year 1990 and preferred dividends paid of $275,000 in the first quarter of fiscal year 1989.

The current fiscal year's first quarter service contract revenues of $2,047,000 was a decrease of $1,747,000 from service contract revenues of $3,794,000 for the three month period ending Dec. 31, 1988. The service revenues for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1988 included $1,931,000 of service revenues from the company's service contract in Michigan which expired in January 1988.

Product sales for the current fiscal year first quarter were $4,563,000, an increase of $4,548,000 as compared to the first quarter last year. This increase is a result of revenues from the company's contract with the California Lottery.

In addition, we have recently settled the litigation with Aloha Leasing. These items are a step in the right direction. We must continue to reduce our costs, make our current contracts profitable, secure new, profitable business and obtain additional financing.''

HOUSTON (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - An administrative judge at the U.S. Department of Transportation Thursday recommended Continental Airlines to serve a new route between Honolulu and Tokyo, which Continental said will allow it to offer one-stop flights between Houston and Tokyo.

Continental plans to originate the 747 flight in Houston, with a stop in Honolulu en route to Tokyo.

''We believe Continental was selected because Houston was recognized as an important gateway city in need of further international air service development,'' said Continental Chairman Frank Lorenzo. ''We are extremely gratified by the strong support that we received from the Houston and Texas delegations in Washington, whose endorsements helped explain the great need for this service.''

The carrier selection process at the DOT put Continental's proposed Honolulu-Tokyo service in competition with American Airlines' San Jose-Tokyo application as well as applications for Honolulu-Tokyo service submitted by Delta, Aloha and America West, and an application for Honolulu-Nagoya service submitted by Hawaiian.

Continental also has pending at the DOT an application to begin non-stop Houston-Tokyo service, among other new routes to Japan. The carrier said that it intends to offer the direct and non-stop routings as a complete pattern of service that gives travelers alternative routings and makes non-stop Houston-Tokyo flights economically viable.

The carrier said it intends to begin service on the new route as early as July 1990 if Transportation Secretary Skinner accepts the judge's recommendation.

The 747 will depart Houston each day at 8 a.m., arrive in Honolulu at 12:05 p.m., and arrive in Tokyo at 5:15 p.m. the next day. The return flight will depart Tokyo at 7 p.m., arriving in Honolulu at 6:20 a.m. and in Houston at 7:35 p.m.

''This is one of the most significant developments in the history of Continental's Pacific growth,'' Lorenzo said. ''Continental has a long and proud history of service to both Hawaii and Japan. Nearly 1,200 Continental employees operate 64 departures per week from our Honolulu hub and we offer service to more Japanese cities than any other U.S. carrier.''

SUNNYVALE, CA. (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Advanced Micro Devices announced Thursday that its board of directors has adopted a stockholder rights plan in which preferred stock purchase rights will be distributed as a dividend at the rate of one right for each share of common stock held as of the close of business on Feb. 20.

The rights plan is designed to deter coercive or unfair takeover tactics and to prevent an acquiror from gaining control of the company without offering a fair price to all of the company's stockholders. The plan is not being adopted in response to any efforts to acquire control of the company. The rights will expire on Dec. 31, 2000.

In a letter being sent to stockholders, W.J. Sanders III, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the company, said the plan is intended to protect the interests of AMD's stockholders.

He noted that such tactics include ''offers that do not treat all stockholders equally, the acquisition in the open market of shares constituting control without offering fair value to all stockholders, and other coercive or unfair takeover tactics that could impair the board's ability to represent your interests fully.''

Sanders stressed, however, that the plan ''is not intended to prevent an acquisition of the company on terms that are favorable and fair to all stockholders. The plan is designed to deal with the serious problem of unilateral actions by hostile acquirors which are calculated to deprive a company's board and its stockholders of their ability to determine the destiny of the company.''

Each right will entitle holders of AMD's common stock to buy 1/1000 of a newly issued share of Series A Junior Participating Preferred Stock of the company at an exercise price of $65. The rights will be exercisable and will trade separately from the common stock only if someone attempts to obtain 20 percent or more of the company or is designated an ''adverse person'' by the company's board of directors. Details of the stockholder rights plan are outlined in a letter which will be mailed to all stockholders.

BEVERLY HILLS, CA (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Gibralter Financial Corp. (NYSE:GFC) announced Thursday that it has filed a petition under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code to protect the company from its creditors.

James N. Thayer, chairman and chief executive officer of the company, said: ''This action by the company was necessary in order to dissolve a writ of attachment over the company's assets obtained by Bank of America, NT&SA, in November 1989 as part of Bank of America's efforts, as the indenture trustee of the company's $99.5 million aggregate principal amount of senior subordinated debentures, to obtain payment of those debentures.

''While the writ of attachment was the proximate cause of today's action, the Chapter 11 filing also resulted from the federal regulators' action in seizing Gibralter Savings and Gibralter Savings Bank, F.A., the company's two savings and loan subsidiaries, in March 1989, and the regulators' failure to date to cause Gibralter Savings to pay its debts to the company.

''The company intends to continue to pursue its legal remedies against Gibralter Savings and the federal regulators during the course of the Chapter 11 case for the benefit of our creditors and stockholders.''

ST. GEORGE, UT (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - SkyWest Inc. (NASDAQ:SKYW) Thursday reported a net loss of $263,000 for the third quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared to net income of $606,000 for the same period last year.

The net loss per common share was 5 cents for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1989 compared with net income per common share of 12 cents for the comparable period ended Dec. 31, 1988.

For the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1989, net income was $3,249,000 compared with $2,870,000 for the comparable period ended Dec. 31, 1988. Net income per common share was 62 cents, up 13 percent from 55 cents per common share for the same period ended Dec. 31, 1988.

The third quarter is historically the weakest for SkyWest and was particularly flat this year due to a 30 percent increase in fuel prices and other operating expenses. The company was not able to completely recapture these expenses due to a soft passenger traffic environment in the Western United States.

SkyWest operates as the Delta Connection to 40 cities in eight western states. Approximately half of SkyWest passengers connect to or from Delta Air Lines flights primarily in Los Angeles and Salt Lake City. BURLINGTON, MA (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - M/A-COM Inc. (NYSE:MAI) Thursday reported a loss from continuing operations for its first quarter ended Dec. 30, 1989 of $44,388,000, or $1.80 per share.

The loss includes estimated restructuring charges and provisions for contract losses of approximately $43,500,000, or $1.76 per share. In addition, the company reported a loss from discontinued operations of $73,890,000, or $2.99 per share resulting in a net loss for the quarter of $118,278,000, or $4.79 per share. There is no tax benefit associated with these losses and the company has a significant operating loss carryforward.

In the first quarter of the previous year, the company had net income of $2,720,000, or $.11 per share and income from continuing operations of $2,694,000, or $.11 per share.

These results were anticipated in the company's January 18 announcement indicating that the company would incur a significant loss primarily related to a general restructuring and downsizing of its business. Dr. Thomas A. Vanderslice, chairman and chief executive officer, said, ''The downsizing will include the company's exit from certain businesses and product lines, and the contraction of others in which exposure to technical risk and level of required investment are not commensurate with the potential return.''

Dr. Vanderslice went on to say that, ''The assets of the company are being redeployed into those core businesses which offer the greatest opportunities for growth and return on investment. These businesses have a higher commercial and international content than the businesses we are exiting.''

M/A-COM businesses identified for disposition include the company's Government Systems Division, as well as certain smaller units primarily engaged in the development and production of subassemblies, microwave high power amplifiers, transmission equipment and radar antenna assemblies. These businesses have annualized sales of approximately $170 million.

Dr. Vanderslice added, ''M/A-COM management is responding to the rapidly changing conditions in the defense electronics marketplace with decisive actions to control cost and focus its business. We have every expectation that the ongoing business will quickly return to profitability.''

Sales from continuing operations were $83,213,000 compared to $61,258,000 in the first quarter of 1989 and include approximately $24,000,000 from Adams-Russell businesses acquired in July 1989.

New orders during the quarter relating to the continuing operations were $89,663,000 compared to $56,555,000 in the comparable period last year, and include approximately $29,000,000 from Adams-Russell businesses.

Backlog associated with the continuing operations at the end of the quarter was $308,835,000 including $75,000,000 from Adams-Russell Inc. compared to $200,338,000 in 1989.

M/A-COM is a leading producer of radio frequency, microwave and millimeter wave semiconductors, components and subsystems for applications in telecommunications, radar, navigation, missile guidance, electronic warfare, surveillance and command-control-communications-intelligence (C3I) systems. M/A-COM also supplies surveillance products used in intelligence collection applications. The company's products are used primarily in defense electronics systems, but also have numerous commercial applications.

JACKSONVILLE, FL (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - FRP Properties Inc. (NASDAQ:FRPP) announced Thursday that the first quarter was one of continued progress.

The company completed the acquisition of J. R. Mabbett & Son Inc. (''Mabbett'') on Oct. 2, 1989, and the process of integrating their operations with the company's Transportation Group was begun. However, earnings were lower due to higher costs associated with the acquisition and the company's overall growth program.

For the first quarter of fiscal 1990, ended Dec. 31, 1989, consolidated revenues increased 26 percent to $9,905,000 from $7,848,000 in the first quarter of last year. Gross profit increased 7 percent to $2,263,000 from $2,107,000.

The increases in revenues and gross profit are attributable to the acquisition of Mabbett. However, administrative expenses increased over $300,000, primarily as a result of the acquisition.

Also, interest expense increased approximately $280,000 as compared to last year, principally as the result of increased borrowing related both to the acquisition and to finance the Real Estate Group's new commercial warehouse office buildings during the latter part of last fiscal year.

Consequently, income before an accounting change decreased 38 percent to $489,000 from $787,000, and corresponding earnings per share were 11 cents and 17 cents, respectively.

In accordance with Financial Accounting Standards Board's Statement No. 96 effective Oct. 1, 1988, the company changed its method of accounting for deferred income taxes. The cumulative effect from prior years of this change was to decrease net income in the first quarter of fiscal 1989 by $690,000, or 15 cents per share.

Consequently, this year net income increased to $489,000 from $97,000, and earnings per share increased 11 cents from 2 cents.

WEST PALM BEACH, FL (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Jos. F. Bradway, Jr., President of VHC, Ltd. (NASDAQ:VHCL), Thursday reported the company's results for the fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

VHC's sales rose 11.5 percent to $31 million for 1989, compared with sales of $27.8 million for 1988. Net earnings for 1989 were $1.3 million, or 61 cents per share, compared with $1.4 million, or 68 cents per share, in the prior year.

VHC's results for 1989 reflected the acquisition of A.K. Robins in December 1988 and increased sales from the company's Maul Technology subsidiary. The decline in earnings from the prior year was due primarily to the effects of an eight-week strike in the third quarter at the company's largest operating facility.

Fourth quarter sales declined 15.3 percent to $5.8 million, compared with sales of $6.8 million in the fourth quarter of 1988. A net loss of $69,000, or 3 cents per share, was recorded in the most recent quarter compared with net income of $380,000, or 18 cents per share, in the like period of 1988.

''VHC's fourth quarter results were affected by a low order backlog resulting from the strike that occurred in the third quarter,'' noted Bradway. ''Our backlog dropped to $4.9 million at the beginning of the fourth quarter. However, at year-end the backlog had improved to $9.1 million.''

Fourth quarter margins increased over the prior year due to the inclusion of A.K. Robins and a favorable product mix. As a result, gross profits declined only 4.1 percent, however, selling, general and administrative expenses increased due to the additional sales effort to improve the company's backlog, higher professional fees and additional staff and related costs.

SHREVEPORT, LA. (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Arkla Inc. (NYSE:ALG) Thursday reported financial results for the fourth quarter and the full year.

The company also announced further progress on its restructuring efforts which were disclosed in October, 1989.

For the quarter, income from continuing operations was $68.1 million compared to $42.1 million in 1988. For the full year, the comparable figures were a loss of $60.9 million compared to income of $124.8 million in 1988.

The large improvement in quarterly performance is due to both the gain resulting from the Initial Public Offering (IPO) of Arkla Exploration Co. stock and improvements in pipeline and distribution operating income.

The fourth quarter balance available to common stock was $44.9 million compared to $32.6 million. For the year, the comparable results were a loss $92.1 million compared to income of $109.5 million in 1988. Both the fourth quarter and full year results included after-tax writedowns in connection with the restructuring plan announced by Arkla in October, 1989.

These writedowns affected both continuing and discontinued operations. These charges to continuing operations for 1989 were almost entirely related to costs associated with gas purchase contracts entered into in the supply-short environment of the late 1970's and early 1980's.

''Although 1989 has been a difficult year, we have addressed the issues confronting the company and have set the stage for improved performance as we begin the new decade. Our actions will permit the company's financial results to better reflect our current performance in an improving environment,'' said Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Mack McLarty.

''The fourth quarter has already begun to show the positive trend which should accelerate in 1990. With the successful completion of our IPO for Arkla Exploration, the initiation of our pipeline expansion projects, the approval of our long-term service agreement with Laclede Gas Co., and our other restructuring measures, we have positioned Arkla to take full advantage of the bright potential for natural gas in the 1990's,'' McLarty concluded.

Arkla is a balanced natural gas company engaged in the distribution, transmission, and exploration/production segments of the natural gas industry with over $3 billion in assets.

Arkla is a NYSE listed company traded under the symbol ''ALG.''

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Phoenix Re Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:PXRE) Thursday announced results for the fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

As expected, the company reported a fourth quarter loss reflecting primarily reduced levels of premium income caused by an increasingly competitive environment, combined with the unusual number of catastrophic events which occurred during the final three months of the year.

President and Chief Executive Officer Gerald L. Radke noted, however, that the company earned a modest profit for the year despite the fourth quarter increase in catastrophic losses.

Radke also announced that the company's board of directors today declared a regular quarterly dividend of 5 cents per share. The dividend will be paid on March 14, 1990, to stockholders of record as of Feb. 28, 1990.

Revenues for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, declined 12 percent to $37,892,000 from $43,035,000 in 1988. Net income for the period totaled $511,000, or 13 cents per share, compared with $7,751,000, or $1.91 per share in 1988, representing a decrease of 93 percent.

For the fourth quarter of 1989, the company posted revenues of $8,168,000, or 25 percent less than the $10,926,000 reported in the like period last year. The loss for the quarter was $2,495,000, or 61 cents per share, compared with earnings of $2,014,000, or 49 cents per share in the comparable period last year.

Radke noted that net premiums written for the year fell 11 percent to $30,414,000 as the company continued to withhold its underwriting capacity in response to severe competition. Although the company reduced its exposures, it could not avoid the effects of an unusual number of large catastrophe losses occurring during the year.

Hurricane Hugo, the largest ever insured loss, was followed in rapid succession by the California Earthquake, the Phillips Petroleum explosion, the Australian Earthquake in Newcastle, and a freeze loss caused by severe winter weather in the southern states. This catastrophic loss activity caused pre-tax losses of $6,600,000 during a period of depressed premiums.

The company also incurred an unusual number of large fire losses during the year. These events resulted in an increase in the combined ratio of losses and underwriting expenses to 120.1 percent in 1989 compared with 88.6 percent last year. In keeping with its conservative philosophy, Phoenix Re has recognized its best estimate of the ultimate cost for these catastrophes in its year-end results.

During the fourth quarter, Phoenix Re Corp. completed a $10 million term loan financing with a commercial bank. Proceeds of $6,750,000 were contributed to the statutory capital and surplus of Phoenix Reinsurance Co., increasing its statutory capital to $57,409,000.

FRAMINGHAM, MA. (FEB. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Dennison Manufacturing Co. Thursday announced its sales and earnings for the fourth quarter and full year 1989.

Net sales for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, were $201.5 million compared to $198.1 million for the fourth quarter of 1988. Earnings for the quarter were $5.7 million (36 cents per share), compared to $14 million (89 cents per share), in 1988. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, net sales, earnings and earnings-per-share were $770.9 million, $29.1 million, and $1.82, respectively, compared to $721.8 million, $37.2 million, and $2.35 per share for last year.

Commenting on the quarter's results, Nelson S. Gifford, chairman, said, ''As we anticipated in our December 14th news release, the recent slow-down in the domestic economy has had a negative impact on our retail and industrial businesses resulting in lower earnings in the fourth quarter.

Accordingly, we have undertaken certain measures to reduce our operating costs and expense levels by over $10 million per year. The full benefit of these actions should be felt in 1990.

''We view the business outlook for 1990 with caution because we are dependent upon the vitality of the domestic economic environment. We will continue to emphasize our strategic programs of consolidation and focused investment to ensure that Dennison's long term financial performance will be strong,'' Gifford said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows on Jan. 25, 1990, Orange-co Inc. announced that it would discontinue operations of its Lake Hamilton Packing facility indefinitely as of Jan. 29, 1990. The closing is attributed to the volume and quality effects of the freeze of Dec. of 1989 combined with the ongoing effects of the previous year's freeze.

The company reportedly will continue to market fresh fruit through other packaging houses. It stated fresh fruit will remain a viable segment of its business. The company's fresh fruit orchards in Polk county constitute the bulk of its fresh fruit resources. Those orchards were more severely affected by the Dec. freeze than were Orange-co's agricultural concerns in other parts of Florida.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) COMTEX - Representatives from the Securities and Exchange Commission and National Association of Securities Dealers Inc. said today that significant advances have been made in the battle against penny stock fraud but conceded the war is far from over.

"Penny stock con artists nickel and dime more than $2 billion a year from unsuspecting investors," said Sen. John Heinz (R-PA) in a hearing before the Senate Subcommittee on Securities. "They don't operate from trading rooms, they operate in boiler rooms. They don't work on Wall Street, they work on the back street."

"Penny stocks" is a term used to refer to low-priced securities (usually trading under $3 per share, initially) which, with few exceptions, are not traded on an exchange or quoted on NASDAQ. There are roughly 55,000 securities available for public trading in the United States, about 47,000 of which trade outside an exchange or NASDAQ.

Many penny stocks represent legitimate investment opportunities but penny stock abuse occurs through price manipulation, high pressure sales tactics, misrepresentation and fraud, and lack of investment price information to investors. Penny stock abuse harms individuals who are defrauded, the markets for lower priced securities and those who use those markets for their capital needs.

Last week SEC Chairman Richard Breeden proposed amendments to the Securities Law Enforcement Remedies Act of 1989. Breeden's amendments would strengthen the proposed legislation by giving the SEC new authority to halt illegal conduct without first going to court, the power to impose civil money penalties and grant access to grand jury information for use in matters within the SEC's jurisdiction.

Panelists from the SEC, NASD and North American Securities Administration Association Inc. unanimously endorsed these amendments as necessary weapons in the fight against penny stock fraud. The NASD is responsible for regulating the NASDAQ and the over-the-counter securities markets. The NASAA speaks for grassroot government officials responsible for securities regulation and investor protection in the 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Noting the magnitude of the problem, Sen. Richard Shelby (D-AL) pushed for more criminal proceedings against those who engage in penny stock fraud. "How many have gone to jail?", Shelby asked. "If we have $2 billion in fraud, something should be done. Arbitration won't do."

Joseph Goldstein, the SEC's Associate Director, Division of Enforcement, agreed and said there has been an increase in criminal indictments. However, when pressed by Shelby, Goldstein could not come up with exact numbers or an approximate figure.

Goldstein added he is optimistic a new penny stock cold calling rule enacted by the SEC effective Jan. 1, 1990 will help deter penny stock fraud. The rule is designed to help protect investors from the high pressure telephone sales tactics often used by unscrupulous broker-dealers seeking to defraud the public. Broker-dealers involved in boiler-room selling abuses typically use prepared scripts to try to get investors to immediately buy securities over the telephone or bill them for purchases they did not intend to make.

The rule requires broker-dealers to obtain each customer's written agreeement to the customer's initial purchases of penny stocks. This helps to prevent penny stock fraud by imposing objective requirements that govern the process by which new customers are induced to purchase penny stocks. In order to prevent certain broker-dealers from ignoring the provision, it requires records to be kept that will indicate broker-dealer compliance with each of its provisions.

"The commission believes this rule is a well-balanced response to penny stock fraud," said Goldstein.

The NASD believes this rule will have a dramatic effects on abusive penny stock practices. Because the rule exempts NASDAQ and exchange listed securities from its coverage, the NASD is concerned that non-NASDAQ over-the-counter penny stock companies and broker-dealers may try to seek refuge from the SEC rule on NASDAQ or an exchange.

"As a result of the SEC penny stock rule, the NASD is currently reviewing its standards for inclusion on regular NASDAQ," said Frank Wilson, Executive Vice President and General Counsel of the NASD. "It is now exploring raising those standards, as well as possibly requiring additional criteria to be met, in order to further strengthen its market and deny the refuge that companies subject to the SEC's penny stock rule may seek."

Last week, a bill entitled the Small Investor Protection Act of 1990 was introduced. The bill would outlaw "blank check and blind pool" offerings. These are offerings through which money is raised with no stated purpose for its use. While it is known this has been a vehicle for fraud and abuse in the penny stock market, blind pools and blank checks are also used as legitimate methods to raise capital.

The NASAA endorses the elimination of blank check and blind offerings to help curb penny stock abuse. The SEC and NASD endorse the concept but feel more study needs to be done before outright banning of these issues.

"The problem of blank check offerings needs to be addressed," said Richard Ketchum, the SEC's Director, Division of Market Regulation. "But it must be addressed with care. Many investment partnership deals are brought over years using blind pools. We are studying if blind pools are a good vehicle to raise capital. Before banning, we must work with these issues."

Wilson said any investor thinking of investing in penny stocks can first contact the NASD and request a background of the broker-dealer's disciplinary history. He said that since May, 1988, the NASD has received over 12,000 responses.

"The most effective defense against penny stock fraud is an educated investor," Goldstein added.

HONG KONG (FEB. 9) - South Korean buyers dominated activity on the local silk market during the past as week as trading returned to normal after the Chinese New Year holiday break.

The spot price of Chinese raw silk steam filature white 2022 denier rose from its previous high of 52.80 to 53.00 U.S. dollars per kilo for Grade AAA.

Prices had dropped to as low as 52.00 U.S. dollars before the Chinese New Year break two weeks ago with traders seeking immediate cash.

The future price remained firm at 50 U.S. dollars per kilo for April as quoted by the official Chinese silk trading firm here.

Dealers said South Korean buyers had snapped up an undisclosed quantity of Grade AAA during the week and overseas orders continued to pour in but no immediate deals were concluded.

During the week, a consignment of some 70,000 pieces of China-made silk garments arrived here from Shanghai for transhipment to Western Europe and North American markets, market sources said.

The silk garments were believed to have been designed by leading French designers under joint ventures with China.

MILAN, Italy (FEB. 8) - The Tokyo stock market will experience a "terrible crash" sooner or later, U.S. economist Milton Friedman said in an interview published in the economic daily newspaper Italia Oggi here on Thursday.

Mr. Friedman, a proponent of monetarist, free-market economics, said that the reasons were simple:

"The value of shares quoted in Tokyo, at current exchange rates, accounts for between 40 percent and 50 percent of all shares in circulation throughout the world. Nobody is going to tell me that this is in line with reality. Even if Japan is prosperous and economically strong, it is beyond all logic to believe that its productive resources represent half of all the financial markets together."

He said that this "anomaly" could be corrected either by a severe fall in the prices of shares quoted in Tokyo, or by a fall in the value of the yen.

"The result would be exactly the same," he said.

PARIS (FEB. 8) - Hungary has opened its economy to the inflow of foreign capital as part of a programme to encourage the transfer of assets into private ownership, the deputy prime minister of Hungary, Peter Medgyessy, told the French daily La Tribune de l'Expansion on Thursday.

The company said it did not expect customers to be private car drivers, but instead local government and public services. Fiat expects to produce 200 to 300 of the cars per year.

Stockholm (FEB. 8) - Sweden's minority ruling Social Democratic goverment here Thursday proposed a two-year freeze on wages and prices to try to get inflation back under control.

Finance Minister Kjell-Olof Feldt admitted that the proposal was a ''significant step away from the Swedish model of free wage negotiations, but it is necessary'' in view of a nearly seven per cent rate of inflation.

Exceptions to the freeze proposal would be made for bank employees and public service employees, where wage negotiations have already gotten underway.

Along with the wage and price freeze, Stockholm said it would also seek parliamentary approval for a two-year our labour truce -no strikes by workers and no lockouts by employers - to take effect from February 15.

Under a further proposal by Stockholm, employers would be obliged to pay for the first two weeks' of an employee's sick leave, as opposed to the current system whereby health insurance companies meet all sick leave costs from the outset.

A vote in parliament on the proposals is set for February 13. Several unions have criticised the labour truce proposal.

Bonn (FEB. 8) - West German farmers' incomes increased by 32.1 percent in the 198889 farming year, a rise partially accounted for by the 10.5 percent plunge in earnings the year before that, Agriculture Minister Ignaz Kiechle reported here Thursday.

Kiechle projected a 12 to 15-percent rise in farming income for the current 1989-90 year ending June 30.

TOKYO (FEB. 8) - The Tokyo International Financial Futures Exchange plans to introduce options on Euroyen futures in a bid to inject life into the fledgling Japanese market, exchange president Taroichi Yoshida said Thursday.

Mr. Yoshida told a news conference that the new instrument might be launched in the next few months. The exchange also plans to extend trading hours and speed up transactions by refining its computerised trading system, he added.

The exchange, set up in June last year in an attempt to modernise Japan's financial markets, currently offers three futures contracts.

The Euroyen contract, the world's first, is based on the interest rate charged on three-month Euroyen deposits and has so far proved to be the only contract popular with financial institutions.

Turnover has been minimal in the other two contracts, based on three-month Eurodollar rates and the value of the yen against the dollar, as both face competition from similar contracts in Singapore, London and Chicago.

Mr. Yoshida said the exchange was considering a new currency contract to simplify trading procedures. The present contract is quoted in terms of how many dollars it takes to buy 100 yen whereas foreign exchange dealers quote the Japanese currency in terms of how many yen are required to buy a dollar.

Financial futures require the holder to buy or sell securities at a particular price within a specified time. Options are similar but less risky as the holder is not obliged to proceeed with the transaction.

Three Japanese stock exchanges have introduced trading in various stock-index options in the past year, the most recent being the Tokyo Stock Exchange's Tokyo Stock Price Index Option launched October 20.

MANILA (FEB. 8) - The Philippines posted a balance of payments surplus of 348 million dollars in 1989, 47 percent down from the previous year, Central Bank Governor Jose Fernandez said here Thursday.

This was despite a 2.51 billion dollar trade deficit, more than double the previous year's 1.08 billion dollars, he added.

Mr. Fernandez said the country had financed its trade deficit with increases in non-trade receipts, capital and credit flows, debt rescheduling and reductions.

Exports in 1989 reached 7.84 billion dollars, while imports totalled 10.35 billion dollars, he said.

Mr. Fernandez also said gross international reserves at the end of 1989 totalled 2.3 billion dollars, which he said was one of the highest levels in three years.

But deputy governor Edgar Zialcita admitted this was still below the government target of three months' imports.

While the "external side" of the economy did well, Mr. Fernandez said some domestic figures were below target.

He said the failure to hit such targets as the base money target set in an agreement with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) early in 1989 forced an "addendum" to their agreement sometime in November after an IMF review.

The addendum binds Manila to impose new excise taxes, increase utility rates and tighten the budget deficit.

Mr. Fernandez confirmed that Manila would be buying back 1.3 billion dollars of commercial debt at a 50 percent discount using money from multilateral and official sources.

Mr. Fernandez said the foreign debt currently stood at 26.88 billion dollars following various rescheduling and debt-to-equity conversions.

SPOKANE, WA (FEB. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Pegasus Gold Inc. (AMEX, Toronto: PGU) today announced record production, revenues and cash flow for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Gold production of 341,400 ounces for 1989 increased 20.3 percent over the 283,800 ounces produced the year before. Total revenues were $178.4 million, up 9.6 percent from $162.8 million last year. Cash flow from the operating locations remained strong at $59.1 million or $2.47 per share compared to $51.7 million, or $2.18 per share, a year ago in spite of declining gold prices.

Net income in 1989 was $9.8 million, or 41 cents per share, compared to $15.6 million, or 66 cents per share, before extraordinary credits of 9 cents, the year before. Net income for 1989 included write-downs of certain investments during the year of $4.8 million, compared to a gain on the sale of investments of $5.0 million in the prior year. The impact of these items was a 41 cent pre-tax difference in earnings per share between the two years.

Results for the fourth quarter included net income of $2.0 million, or 8 cents per share, on revenues of $41.0 million. This compares to net income of $0.5 million, or 2 cents per share, before extraordinary credits, on revenues of $37.0 million the year before.

Lower gold prices were a major factor that impacted earnings during the fourth quarter and the year of 1989. The realized gold prices per ounce in 1989 were $415 for the fourth quarter and $416 for the year, compared to $446 for the fourth quarter of the previous year, and $439 for that year as a whole. The company's hedging programs added $11.6 million to revenue when considering the $382 average COMEX spot price of gold during the year. The effects of higher zinc prices realized in 1989 were substantially offset by lower silver prices.

During the year, the company increased the number of its operating mines to six with the entry of the Beal Mountain mine into commercial production and the addition of the Basin Creek mine through the acquisition of Pangea Resources Ltd. These mines were the source of the increase in production in 1989, and each contributed incremental operating earnings.

Pegasus Gold Inc. is a major North American gold producer that currently produces over 340,000 ounces of gold annually from six mines in the western United States. The company also produces significant amounts of silver, zinc and lead. Pegasus Gold common shares are traded on the American Stock Exchange and The Toronto Stock Exchange under the symbol PGU. Options on the company's common shares are traded on the Chicago Board Options Exchange and the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Gains on the sale of 63 percent of Chris-Craft's interest in Warner Communications Inc. accounted for approximately $447 million of the year's net income. Net income in 1988 was $10,804,000, or $.43 per common share. Operating revenues rose 7 percent in 1989 to $267,499,000 from 1988's $250,830,000.

Chris-Craft's Television Division reported 1989 operating income of $14,410,000, compared to last year's $32,231,000. Television Division operating revenues rose 7 percent, to $246,741,000 from $230,577,000, but a 21 percent increase in programming costs resulted in the 55 percent decline in the division's operating income.

Interest and other income, net rose to $51,895,000 from last year's $11,124,000, reflecting the temporary placement, mostly in U.S. government securities, of WCI stock sale proceeds.

Chris-Craft noted that interest expense for the year was about the same as in 1988, even though in 1989 BHC repaid all of its long-term debt, because the 1989 amount includes third quarter debt retirement expense of $2,773,000.

Chris-Craft reported 1989 fourth quarter net income of $5,691,000, or $.23 per common share, compared to last year's $461,000, or $.01 per common share. The increase in net income primarily reflects a substantial increase in interest income and lower interest expense. Television Division operating income declined substantially, to $903,000 from $6,660,000, as a 5 percent increase in operating revenues was more than offset by a 12 percent increase in programming costs.

COEUR D'ALENE, ID (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Hecla Mining Co. (NYSE, PSE: HL) today reported a fourth quarter loss of $13.2 million, or 49 cents a share on revenue of $25.3 million. This compares to net income of $3.8 million or 14 cents a share, in the same period of 1988 on revenue of $26.5 million. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, Hecla incurred a loss of $22.4 million, or 83 cents a share, on revenue of $101.7 million. In comparison the company reported a profit of $15.1 million, or 56 cents a share, on revenue of $105.4 million in 1988.

Noncash write-downs and other nonrecurring charges totaled $14 million in the fourth quarter and $16.7 million for the full year 1989. Fourth quarter write-downs and charges include a loss of $9.1 million on the disposal and write-down of Sunshine Mining Co. common stock; write-down of the Escalante ore stockpile and inventories by $1.1 million and accrual of $0.5 million for closure costs at the site; reduction of the carrying value of the Holt property in Utah and the Durita property in Colorado by $1.9 million; and a $1.4 million charge for Durita reclamation. In addition to write-downs and charges taken in the fourth quarter, the company had previously recorded a $1.6 million charge for the settlement of an environmental lawsuit at the Old Reliable copper mine in Arizona, and $1.1 million for reclamation and excess depreciation at Escalante.

Combined gold production in the fourth quarter of 1989 totaled 21,000 ounces compared to 31,000 ounces in the same period last year. For the year, gold production declined to 83,000 from 103,000 ounces in 1988, primarily due to suspension of operations at the Yellow Pine Unit during the year. Construction of Yellow Pine's new heap leach pad and plant is nearly complete and the property will return to production in 1990.

Silver operations were not profitable in the fourth quarter, recording a $4.4 million gross operating loss, although cash flow remains positive. Industrial minerals revenue increased from $24.5 million in 1988 to $33.4 million in 1989, but gross profit declined because of increased competitive factors in the specialty aggregate marketplace and higher operating costs at the ball clay operations related to expanded development programs.

Gold and silver prices have seen some recent improvement, but continue to lag behind levels of a year ago. The average price of gold was $390 per ounce in the fourth quarter of 1989 compared to $415 per ounce in the same period last year. Silver declined from an average price of $6.22 per ounce in the fourth quarter of 1988 to $5.38 per ounce in the fourth quarter of 1989, a 14 percent decrease.

Hecla Mining Co., headquartered in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, is a leading domestic producer of newly mined silver and gold, and a supplier of premium ball clay, kaolin and specialty aggregates. The company has operations and projects under development in 12 states and four Canadian provinces.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Carlyle Group, a private merchant bank owned in part by the Richard King Mellon family interests, announced that it is making a filing today with the SEC indicating that a partnership it controls owns 6.27 percent of Harsco Corp. (NYSE: HSC), a diversified industrial company headquartered in Camp Hill, Pa.

The SEC filing indicates that the Carlyle-controlled partnership is exploring a variety of options to increase the value of its holdings. "While the market has undervalued Harsco for some time now, the company has worldclass franchises in many of its product markets," said Frank Carlucci, former U.S. Secretary of Defense and vice chairman of The Carlyle Group.

Carlucci recently spoke with Harsco's President and CEO Malcolm Gambill and told him that Carlyle regards Harsco's shares as an attractive investment. He also invited Harsco's management to have an introductory meeting with The Carlyle Group in the near future. "I regard our conversation as quite positive and very friendly in spirit," Carlucci stated. The Carlyle Group, Carlucci indicated, makes investments from time to time in public companies whose real value it believes is misjudged by the stock market. "Harsco is such a company," he said.

Andrew Mathieson, executive vice president of The Richard K. Mellon & Sons voiced the family's support of Carlyle's investment in Harsco and noted that it is prepared to assist Carlyle in any way it can.

"We have been a part-owner and investor in Carlyle from its inception and have found Carlyle to be a responsible investor, with a concern for community needs and a talent for increasing value for all parties," Mathieson said.

Mathieson also pointed to the Mellon family interests' contributions to economic development in Pennsylvania. "Our desire to help strengthen Pennsylvania companies and promote Pennsylvania's economy has been well demonstrated through the years," he observed. Carlucci echoed this philosophy: "As a Pennsylvanian, I am very much aware of local sensitivities and I can assure you that Carlyle conducts itself responsibly and with the highest standards."

The Carlyle Group has led investor groups which have acquired companies with a combined value in excess of $1 billion. They include: Caterair, the world's largest airline catering company; Coldwell Banker Commercial, the nation's largest commercial real estate services company; Ticketron, a leading national computerized ticketing company; and Oakite, a New Jersey-based specialty chemical company. Together these companies had combined 1989 sales in excess of $1.4 billion and employ approximately 26,000 people.

SAN FRANCISCO (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Centex Telemanagement Inc. (NASDAQ: CNTX) today reported financial results for the first quarter and year ended Dec. 31. 1989. For the quarter, net income of $2,069,000 or 21 cents per share represented a 34.0 percent increase over the $1,544,000 or 16 cents per share earned in the like quarter of 1988. Client billings reached $22,601,000, a 37.7 percent increase over the $16,411,000 recorded for the like quarter last year.

For the year, net income of $7,018,000 or 72 cents per share represented a 55.3 percent increase over the $4,519,000 or 48 cents per share earned in 1988. Client billings reached $82,829,000, a 36.3 percent increase over the $60,773,000 recorded last year. Centex's 188 results have been restated to reflect the acquisition of SNAP Communications Inc. in the first quarter of 1989.

Commenting on these results, Peter A. Howley, chairman, president and chief executive officer, stated, "It is especially gratifying that Centex achieved this record, performance despite a significantly higher tax rate, strikes at the Bell Operating Companies and the San Francisco Bay Area earthquake.

"It is also worth noting," he continued, "that our operating income -- probably the best measure of Centex's performance -- continued to rise, now for nine consecutive quarters since our Initial Public Offering, despite our aggressive geographic expansion during the year. We believe this accomplishment underscores the strength of our telecommunications management business and the effectiveness of our disciplined growth strategy."

Centex ended 1989 with 15 branch offices and 7,249 clients nationwide, compared to 11 branches and 4,993 clients at year end 1988. The fourth quarter saw the addition of 630 net new clients. "We continue to be especially pleased with the progress of our newer branch offices outside California," Howley said. "Today, more than one out of every three Centex branch offices is located outside our home state, compared to just one out-of-state branch office two years ago."

In other financial news, Howley noted that Centex has commenced a continuing stock repurchase program to acquire shares in the open market or in private transactions from time to time for reissuance under stock incentive plans and other corporate purposes. Centex anticipates repurchasing approximately 300,000 shares through the end of 1990, and expects to continue to purchase shares at appropriate levels thereafter.

Looking forward, Howley voiced enthusiasm for the new decade. "Broad economic and business factors, including the rising trend of farming out non-core operations to third-party providers, confirms the growing acceptance of our telecommunications management concept."

Centex Telemanagement Inc. is a pioneer in providing comprehensive telecommunications management services to small and medium-sized businesses. Centex provides a single point of contact for smaller businesses, which face increasing complexity and confusion resulting from the expanding number of local and long distance telecommunications options.

In exchange for a management fee, Centex analyzes the telecommunications needs of its clients, selects the best mix of services from various third-party providers, and blends the services into a network shared by its clients under Centex management. Centex clients receive a broad range of high-quality telecommunications services at a significant cost savings. Centex currently serves over 7,200 clients through 15 branch offices in six states.

Net earnings for the quarter from continuing operations rose to $12,486,000 or $.53 per share, from $9,525,000 or $.39 per share for the comparable 1988 period. Included in the 1989 results is a $3 million gain ($.13 per share) from the sale of a majority interest in the company's former subsidiary, Allied Steel & Tractor Products, Inc.

A $14 million after-tax gain on the sale of the company's retained interest in The Mohawk Rubber Company was also realized in the fourth quarter. Net earnings for the 1989 fourth quarter were $26,486,000 or $1.13 per share compared to $7,867,000 or $.32 per share in 1988. Revenue for the fourth quarter was $178.6 million compared to $177.7 million in the corresponding 1988 quarter.

Earnings from continuing operations for 1989 rose to a record level of $47,117,000 or $1.98 per share from $40,028,000 or $1.68 per share for 1988. Net earnings, including discontinued operations and 1988 extraordinary items, rose to $61,117,000 or $2.57 per share compared to $43,989,000 or $1.85 per share for 1988. Revenues increased 6 percent to $756.4 million compared to $715.7 million for the prior year.

Sales of the majority interest in Allied and the retained interest in Mohawk resulted in proceeds of over $70 million which were used to reduce borrowing levels. Total debt decreased $104 million in 1989 to $144 million as of Dec. 31, 1989. The company's debt to total capitalization was 43 percent at year end, a substantial improvement for the fifth consecutive year.

Steven M. Rales, chairman and chief executive officer, stated, "We are extremely pleased with our performance in 1989 but remain cautious about the current year. Our record earnings level for 1989 has been accomplished during an unfavorable environment for the manufacturing sector and is a real credit to the commitment of Danaher's employees. Our strong operating cash flow and the proceeds from the Mohawk and Allied sales have resulted in a significant strengthening of the company's financial position. We believe we are well positioned to capitalize on the global opportunities which are available in our core business lines."

SANTA MONICA, CA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Telos Corp. (NASDAQ: TLOS) today reported that revenues for the third fiscal quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, rose 15 percent to $32,084,000 from $28,003,000 a year earlier, while net income advanced to $619,000, or 15 cents per share, from $346,000, or nine cents per share, in the prior-year quarter.

Revenue for the nine months of fiscal 1990 was $92,969,000, up from $84,285,000, in the same period last year. Net income was $1,061,000, or 27 cents per share, compared with $2,250,000 or 58 cents per share, in the corresponding prior-year period.

Lin Conger, Telos chairman and president, noted that results for the current fiscal year reflected expenses of $456,000 related to the previously announced proposed acquisition of Telos by Contel Federation Systems Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Contel Corp. A special Telos shareholders' meeting has been set for Feb. 20, 1990, to vote on the transaction, in which Contel is offering to purchase all Telos common shares for a cash price of $15.50 per share.

He added that the results reflect both the adjustment of certain health insurance costs and increased reserves for certain receivables. The net effect of these items is approximately one cent per share of increased profit.

Telos' backlog, funded and unfunded, was $283.1 million at Dec. 31, 1989. This represented an increase of 58 percent over the $179.5 million backlog at the end of fiscal 1989.

Founded 20 years ago, Telos is now a diversified, nationwide technology services firm that provides software and hardware services to the public and private sectors. The company relies on more than 1,800 employees to serve clients in aerospace, defense, electronics, communications and other computer-intensive industries, principally agencies of the U.S. government. Fiscal 1989 revenues were $116 million.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Roerig Division of Pfizer Pharmaceuticals today announced that it will provide over 6,000 bottles of its new antifungal agent Diflucan(R) (fluconazole) to over 200 major cancer and AIDS treatment centers nationwide.

"Because of the potentially life-saving and life-improving nature of this product," said John Jefferis, M.D., senior vice president-medical, Pfizer Pharmaceuticals, "we want to ensure that patients in critical need will receive it immediately." The donated product will be available to treatment centers this week.

Diflucan is indicated for fungal infections, namely oropharyngeal and esophageal candidiasis, serious systemic candidiasis such as urinary tract infection, pneumonia and peritonitis, as well as for acute therapy and for suppression of relapse of cryptococcal meningitis. The product will be available through normal drug distribution channels by Feb. 16.

In the treatment of fungal infections, Diflucan offers several advantages such as once-daily dosing, the availability of both oral and intravenous dosage forms, and a low incidence of side effects. (Nausea is the most common side effect.) "In particular, reduced side effects and laboratory monitoring, as well as the availability of an oral dosage form, can provide an improved quality of life for patients," said Jefferis.

Economic benefits are also possible with Diflucan (fluconazole) therapy. Diflucan can be taken orally on an outpatient basis, eliminating IV administration labor and supplies and reducing days of hospitalization. This was shown in a comparative study where patients on Diflucan were in the hospital for fewer days than patients on the comparative therapy, amphotericin B. As a result, significant savings can be realized on each patient given Diflucan.

Over 2,000 patients have already received Diflucan free of charge through a Pfizer-administered "compassionate use" program. These patients were identified as unresponsive to or intolerant of currently available medications. Patients currently in this program will receive complimentary Diflucan for another month, as the product becomes available through normal channels of distribution.

ANN ARBOR, MI (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Domino's Pizza, Inc., headquartered in Ann Arbor, has posted a 6 percent sales gain in the month of January from the same period a year ago, primarily due to a nationwide promotion in the month which offered two pizzas for one price.

"Our goal was to get a good start in the month of January, a traditionally slow period for the restaurant industry," explained Dave Black, president of Domino's. "We're confident we met that challenge."

Though financial results for 1989 for Domino's Pizza were incomplete, Black noted that systemwide sales will total an estimated $2.5 billion for 1989 vs. $2.3 billion in 1988, and that his company did sell 250 million pizzas last year, with pepperoni remaining the favorite topping.

In 1989, Domino's Pizza used 24 million pounds of pepperoni, 4.7 million pounds of flour, and 132 million pounds of cheese, that required 1.3 billion pounds of milk -- production quotas for 100,000 cows.

"While pepperoni remains the favorite, we have seen an increase in some combination of toppings," Black said. "For example, ham and pineapple are becoming more popular, especially among Californians."

Monday remains the slowest day for pizza sales and Friday the most popular.

MINNEAPOLIS (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Network Systems Corporation (NASDAQ/NMS: NCSO) today announced unaudited results for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. Revenues for the period were $144,789,000, up 10 percent from revenues of $131,470,000 for 1988. Net income for the period was $17,327,000, or 59 cents per share, up 52 percent from $11,360,000, or 39 cents per share, earned in the comparable 1988 period.

Revenues for the fourth quarter of 1989 were $45,770,000, a 26-percent increase over revenues of $36,246,000 for the equivalent 1988 period. Net income for the three months was $7,658,000, or 26 cents per share, compared with $1,425,000, or 5 cents per share in 1988. Last year's fourth quarter per share income included a charge to earnings of 10 cents per share for potential inventory obsolescence.

Fourth-quarter sales of the company's hardware and software products were $35.4 million, up 30 percent from last year's total of $27.2 million. "With the addition of $10.4 million of revenue from the company's maintenance service business, a 15-percent increase from the 1988 quarter, the company achieved record revenues and ha its most profitable quarter in history," said Lyle D. Altman, president. Sales for the quarter were strong in the U.S. and in Europe, both increasing more than 30 percent over 1988 levels.

Commenting further, Altman said that the strong fourth-quarter results can be attributed to the growing acceptance of the company's HYPERchannel-DX product line which produced $15 million of sales in the quarter and to the continued growth in sales of the company's RDS, or channel extension, products. "Also important," said Altman, "were improvements made by the sales force and marketing staff which increased productivity and provided more focus on the commercial customer."

OAK BROOK, IL (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Waste Management, Inc. (NYSE: WMX) today reported that it achieved record net income and revenues in the fourth quarter and for all of 1989.

For the full year ended Dec. 31, the company's net income rose 21 percent to $562,135,000, or $1.22 per share, versus $464,223,000, or $1.02 per share, in 1988. Revenues in 1989 were up 25 percent to $4,458,904,000, compared with $3,565,617,000 the preceding year.

Fourth quarter net income climbed 23 percent to $152,903,000, or $.33 per share, compared with net income of $124,737,000, or $.27 per share, in the quarter a year earlier. Revenues for the quarter, which ended Dec. 31, were $1,194,501,000, an increase of 23 percent from $972,589,000 a year earlier.

Per share results reflect a two-for-one stock split in the form of a stock dividend distributed in December 1989.

Results for both the year and the fourth quarter include a non-taxable gain ($70,826,000) resulting from the public offering of 5,000,000 shares of common stock of Chemical Waste Management, Inc. in October 1989, which were offset by unusual non-recurring charges ($70,560,000 on an after-tax basis). The non-recurring charges principally relate to a provision for the future impact of proposed federal Subtitle Deregulations on the company's solid waste landfills.

The 1988 results included an after-tax gain of $11,354,000, or $.03 per share, from the 1988 combination of the company's waste-to-energy operations with those of Wheelabrator Technologies Inc., the nation's leading developer and operator of waste-to-energy facilities.

For the first six months of fiscal 1990, the company recorded revenues of $1,348,000 compared with $575,000 a year ago.

ATCHISON, KS (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Midwest Grain Products, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: MWGP) today reported net income of $1,894,000, or 29 cents per share, on sales of $45,400,000 for the second quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989.

This compares to last year's second quarter net income of $3,523,000, or 55 cents per share, on sales of $49,142,000.

For the first six months of fiscal 1990, the company had net income of $4,979,000, or 76 cents per share, on sales of $94,169,000. First half net income for the preceding year was $6,517,000, or $1.07 per share, on sales of $95,399,000.

Ladd Seaberg, president and chief executive officer, expressed disappointment with the results, but said, "they are understandable when recognizing what is happening" in three of the company's major markets -- alcohol, vital wheat gluten and flour milling.

Increased competition in the beverage and industrial alcohol markets led to temporary price and volume reductions, requiring additional alcohol to be sold to the lower margin fuel market.

The company's flexibility to produce whatever mix of alcohol is required for sales helped prevent extra costs associated with a slowdown in operations or a build-up of inventory, Seaberg said.

He added that the company's new production unit at its Pekin, Ill., plant "is fully operational now" and the alcohol produced there has been approved by Midwest's major customers. "We will be in excellent condition to produce larger quantities of high quality alcohol as the markets strengthen," he said.

Vital wheat gluten sales were adversely affected by competition from imports, which increased substantially during the second quarter. The majority of competition was from Australia, with secondary amounts from Canada and Europe.

"We are meeting the competition to retain our customers," Seaberg explained, noting that although this "weakens earnings for the short term, it keeps us strong for the long term."

He said the company has overcome similar conditions in the gluten market before and expects previous earnings to return.

Reduced flour mill earnings were principally caused by narrow margin bids which were necessary to obtain export contracts through the first six months of the year. The mill was additionally affected by reduced operating time for internally produced flour for gluten production. Seaberg announced that the company has since entered into a more favorable export contract, with opportunity for increased earnings compared to the second quarter level.

Wheat starch sales for the first half of the fiscal year rose 12.2 percent over the same period a year ago. Second quarter sales accounted for just one-third of that increase. Despite the quarter's slowdown, the company is optimistic that the pace to exceed last year's starch sales will accelerate in the remaining six months.

Looking beyond the overall results for the quarter, Seaberg reiterated that "we are ultimately confident that our strategy to protect markets and sacrifice short-term earnings is good for the long- term health of the company."

He also emphasized that the company is in a very sound cash position, and repeated an earlier announcement that the company's bank term loan balance of $2,625,000 was paid off prior to the second quarter's end.

He said the 2-1/2 cent per share dividend increase declared for the second quarter is supported by Midwest's solid financial footing and belief in the company's long-term earnings position.

SEATTLE (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Varig of Brazil has ordered 15 new-generation Boeing 737-300 jetliners, Boeing Commercial Airplane Group confirmed today. Value of the order is approximately $450 million.

Varig, Brazil's major carrier and the largest airline in South America, is acquiring the new aircraft for both fleet replacement and expansion.

This latest purchase will bring Varig's total fleet of owned and leased 737-300s to 25. The airline also has operated the earlier version of the aircraft, the 737-200.

Varig's new 737-300s will seat 132 passengers in a single-class configuration.

Varig Executive Vice President Rubel Thomas said the airline is ordering additional 737-300s because "it assures us that both domestic and international regional traffic growth will be suitably attended to."

The advanced-technology twinjets will be powered by new CFM56-3B2 engines built by CFM International, a joint venture of General Electric of the United States and SNECMA of France. These quiet but powerful engines allow the 737-300 to be a good community neighbor at even the most noise-sensitive airports.

The 737-300 is part of a family of new jetliners -- along with the 737-400 and the 737-500 -- designed to be among the quietest and most fuel-efficient aircraft in the world. All three offer many of the features developed for the original, highly successful 737-200, but providing a greater range of passenger capacity while consuming up to 25 percent less fuel per seat.

To build this latest generation of 737s, Boeing applied the advancements in propulsion, aerodynamics, materials and flight management capabilities introduced in its larger 757 and 767 jetliners. For passenger benefit, the new 737s have the same interior created for the 757, providing maximum comfort and efficiency.

Despite all the changes and advanced technology, the new family of 737s still bears a high degree of commonality with the earlier 737-200 airplane. For example, all versions of the 737 have essentially the same handling characteristics in the air as well as on the ground. Pilots flying 737-200s do not need a new type-rating to operate -300s, -400s or -500s, thereby minimizing the training required. Furthermore, a substantial number of replaceable parts on the three new 737s are identical to those on the -200, which simplifies airline spares inventory and maintenance.

For the world's 123 operators of 737-200s, commonality makes it easy to step up to the higher capacity and advanced technology of the 737-300, -400 and -500. Thus, each of the newer models can be easily integrated into existing fleets, as Varig is doing with its 737-300s.

Launched into commercial service in December 1984, the 737-300 has become one of the most popular commercial aircraft. To date, Boeing Commercial Airplane Group has announced orders for 928 of the 737-300 from 45 customers worldwide.

CHICAGO (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - A senior Ford Motor Company executive today said that stronger-than-expected vehicle sales in January should bode well for the automobile industry in the coming year.

"I'm pleased that January's sales represented an annual rate of 15.3 million units, the best we've seen since September," said Robert L. Rewey, Ford vice president - North American Sales Operations. "Ford's sales for January didn't make headlines, but we took 22.3 percent of the market. That's exactly what we did during calendar year 1989, so we are in good shape for what's ahead."

Rewey, speaking at the introduction of the new Mercury Tracer and Ford Escort GT at the Chicago Auto Show here, said Ford entered 1990 expecting sales to be better in the second half of the year. Ford is forecasting industry car sales of 9.6 million units, and industry truck sales of 4.9 million units, for a total of about 14.5 million vehicles in 1990, he said.

Rewey also told reporters that the Ford Motor Company that is entering the decade of the 1990s is a much different company from the one of the early 1980s.

Ford worked hard through the decade of the 1980s to distinguish itself not only from foreign competitors, but from its domestic rivals as well, he said.

"We'd like Ford to be regarded as the 'different car and truck company,'" Rewey said. "Why? Because our philosophy is different, our products are different and our results have been different."

According to Rewey, one major difference is that Ford is the only automobile manufacturer dedicated to building small cars in North America. Ford has invested more than $2 billion in small car production, which has yielded the next Ford Escort and the new Mercury Tracer.

Rewey also said that major changes in the worldwide automobile business over the past decade have changed radically the way Americans should look at the automobile business. No longer can companies such as Ford be lumped together with other companies based on geographical happenstance.

"In fact, it's probably true to say that, as the major auto manufacturers worldwide 'go global,' as Ford is doing with the Ford Escort and Mercury Tracer, that the concept of 'The Big Three' and 'The Japanese' and 'The Europeans' quickly becomes dated," Rewey said. "You could argue there are eight or nine companies of several nationalities that are the major players in the world auto market."

ABBOTT PARK, IL (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Abbott Laboratories introduced today a 15-minute version of its physician office diagnostic test, called TestPack Chlamydia, which is used to detect chlamydia infection in women. The development of this faster diagnostic test will enable patients to get test results with only one visit to a physician's office and begin any necessary treatment immediately.

Chlamydia is the most prevalent sexually transmitted disease (STD) in the U.S. and Europe and is a leading cause of infertility and ectopic (tubal) pregnancies in women. An estimated 3-5 million new chlamydia cases occur annually in the U.S.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) recently released a report outlining new STD treatment guidelines. The report recommends that physicians test women at risk to develop chlamydia.

Chlamydia can have severe complications, such as pelvic inflammatory disease, ectopic (tubal) pregnancy and infertility. The CDC estimates that the direct and indirect cost of these complications in women and newborns is $1 billion annually. The CDC is emphasizing screening because chlamydia, once diagnosed, can be easily treated with antibiotics.

The CDC guidelines recommend chlamydia testing for women who are 25 years of age or younger or sexually active with a new partner within the preceding three months.

In addition, the CDC recommends that all women in their first trimester of pregnancy be tested. If transmitted to infants during birth, chlamydia can cause conjunctivitis (eye infection) and/or pneumonia. The CDC also recommends that all pregnant women with one or more of the following risk factors be tested once during their first trimester of pregnancy and once again during their third trimester: multiple sex partners, gonorrhea or a past history or presence of an STD.

According to Dr. Mercer, other appropriate candidates for routine chlamydia testing include women with:

-- abdominal pain or tenderness;
-- gonorrhea or pelvic inflammatory disease; -- cervical discharge;
-- exposure to an STD;
-- an infant who at birth had inclusion conjunctivitis (eye infection) or pneumonia.

Abbott Laboratories is a worldwide manufacturer of healthcare products, employing 42,000 people. In 1989, the company's sales and net earnings were $5.4 billion and $860 million, respectively, with earnings per share of $3.85.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Textron Inc. (NYSE: TXT) reported net income for 1989 of $259.2 million ($2.91 per share), after an extraordinary loss of $9.5 million (11 cents per share), compared with $234.4 million ($2.67 per share) in 1988, after extraordinary losses of $37.7 million (43 per share), B.F. Dolan, chairman and chief executive officer, announced today. Revenues rose to a record $7.4 billion in 1989 from $7.3 billion in 1988.

Dolan said, "Segment operating income increased as Textron's balanced diversity again helped us withstand difficult conditions in several of our markets. Profits of the Aerospace Technology sector improved, principally as a result of a more favorable product mix at Bell Helicopter. Income declined in the Commercial Products sector due to lower margins in the automotive and fastener businesses and a loss on the planned divestiture of a product line, which was more than offset by continued strength in the Financial Services sector."

As a result of the previously disclosed Federal Trade Commission preliminary injunction relative to Textron's acquisition of Avdel, Textron's results of operations for 1989 do not include the earnings of Avdel. Avdel's unaudited 1989 sales and earnings befor income taxes were approximately $149 million and $23 million, respectively.

Interest expense in 1989 increased due to higher interest rates and $22.3 million of additional interest on the borrowings related to the purchase of Avdel. Results benefitted from a reduced income tax rate for the year. Fourth Quarter Results

Revenues and net income in the fourth quarter were $2.0 billion and $77.1 million (85 cents per share), respectively, compared with $2.0 billion and $64.0 million (74 cents per share) in 1988, after an extraordinary loss of $8.0 million (9 cents per share). The quarter benefitted from significantly improved results of the Systems segment due to improved performance on certain fixed-price development contracts and continued strong performance of the Financial Services sector. These improvements were partially offset by lower results of the Propulsion segment due to lower volume and less favorable product mix and lower profits in the Commercial Products sector due principally to a loss on the planned divestiture of a product line.

NORTHVALE, NJ (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - ADM Tronics Unlimited, Inc. of Northvale announced today that the animal care products division of the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company (3M) approached ADM Tronics to seek an exclusive marketing license for ADM Tronics' patented Vet-Sonotron(TM) therapy device for the equine market.

The proposal from 3M would require ADM Tronics to do additional laboratory testing during which 3M would conduct a market study.

3M would then have an option to secure an exclusive marketing license.

After careful and extended consideration of 3M's proposals, ADM Tronics has decided not to enter into an agreement with 3M under the terms and conditions it has offered. Dr. Alfonso Di Mino, president of ADM Tronics, issued the following statement: "The proposed arrangement with 3M would place a significant burden on our company's financial and technical resources without any assurance that 3M would exercise the option. We are very grateful for 3M's interest in our veterinary therapy product but we must do what is in the best interest of our shareholders."

OKLAHOMA CITY (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Fleming Companies (NYSE: FLM) reported today higher sales and earnings for 1989. Sales were $12.05 billion, an increase of 15.1 percent over the 1988 level of $10.47 billion. Net earnings were $80.1 million compared to the strike- impacted $65.4 million for 1988, an increase of 22.5 percent. Earnings per share were $2.54 versus $2.43, a gain of 4.5 percent.

Malone & Hyde, a major subsidiary, is included from the date of acquisition in July 1988. Sales for comparable units were up 6 percent when adjusted for the 53-week fiscal year in 1988.

Fourth quarter sales were $2.88 billion, a decrease of 7.5 percent from $3.11 billion in the same quarter of 1988 which contained one more week. Net earnings were $20.9 million, compared to $21.1 million the prior year, a decline of 1 percent. Earnings per share were 67 cents versus 77 cents, a decrease of 13 percent.

Fourth quarter comparisons are affected by the 1988 sale of a foodservice subsidiary, White Swan, which created a nonrecurring gain of 46 cents per share. Sales for comparable units were up 2 percent when adjusted for the difference in weeks.

Dean Werries, chairman and chief executive officer, said that while the company did not fully meet its 1989 earnings expectations, progress was made in many important areas which should improve longer-term performance.

"We achieved good results in most regions and successfully assimilated the large Malone & Hyde operation. Productivity was improved for the 15th straight year."

As part of a continuing program to redirect investments to more productive purposes, Fleming disposed of a number of underperforming assets. Operating expenses were reduced throughout the company, Werries added.

"Our affiliated retailers continued their healthy growth pattern in 1989, opening 130 new supermarkets with a combined 5.1 million square feet of floor space," he said.

"All in all, it was a challenging year, but one in which significant forward-looking initiatives were taken. We are encouraged by the improvement which was evident in the fourth quarter as our actions began to show positive results."

HOUSTON (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The Public Utility Commission of Texas (PUC) yesterday approved a plan to allow Houston Lighting & Power Company (HL&P) to recover approximately $128 million of additional rate relief in connection with its 1982 rate order. The additional rate relief stems from court rulings that the PUC had erred in its 1982 rulings in HL&P's general rate case.

The PUC order applies amounts being collected under bonded rates to the amount due from the 1982 rate case. HL&P increased rates under bond in June 1989 pending a PUC decision on its general rate request. The full $128 million was collected by HL&P in 1989.

Revenues from bonded rates are subject to refund if the increase ultimately granted is less than the amount collected under bond. However, the $128 million of bonded revenues applied to the amount due from the 1982 rate order is no longer subject to refund.

Because the amounts collected under bonded rates are not applied to the 1982 rate order are expected to offset a portion of the deferred plant costs associated with Unit 1 of the South Texas Project (STP), they are not reflected in income.

The PUC also granted HL&P's request for an extension of accounting deferrals for STP Unit 1. The accounting deferrals will continue until new permanent rates are implemented.

Accounting deferrals allow a utility to defer operating and depreciation costs associated with new facilities and continue accruing carrying charges while awaiting approval of rates which reflect these costs. This accounting treatment provides an opportunity to recover these costs at a later date and reduces the drain on earnings during the review process.

Accounting deferrals for STP Unit 1 were granted in April 1989, retroactive to the unit's August 1988 commercial operation date, but only for one year from the date of HL&P's rate filing. The accounting deferrals would have ended Nov. 23, 1989 without the extension.

HL&P, which is a subsidiary of Houston Industries Incorporated (NYSE: HOU) expects a decision on its pending rate case in mid-1990.

PORT NEWARK, NJ (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - EPI International, Inc. (NASDAQ: EPIX) today reported higher second-quarter revenues of $10,588,690 as compared to $8,065,562, an increase of 31.4 percent. Net income rose to $225,465, or 18 cents per share, vs. a loss of $281,361, or 18 cents per share, for the quarter last year.

For six months, revenues amounted to $21,821,361 vs. $18,011,142, an increase of 21.2 percent. Net income rose to $964,899, or 60 cents per share fully diluted, compared to $163,001, or 10 cents per share, for the same period last year.

Irving Glick, president of EPI, said, "The main reason for these increases was the company's continued success in enlarging its sales force and selling new and existing products to an expanded customer base. Cost of goods as a percentage of sales decreased from 79.6 percent last year to 78 percent this year for the six months, and from 80.6 percent to 79.5 percent for the comparable quarters."

He added, "Operating expenses as a percentage of sales decreased to 15.1 percent from 17.2 percent for the comparable six-month period, and for the quarter they decreased to 16.4 percent from 21.4 percent. The reason for these decreases was the allocation of expenses to a larger sales volume."

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The New York Times Company today reported net income for 1989 rose to a record $266.6 million or $3.39 per share compared with $167.7 million or $2.08 per share in 1988. Results for 1989 include an after-tax gain of $193.3 million or $2.46 per share on the sale of the company's cable television system. The gain on the sale of NYT Cable TV and the results of its operations prior to its August 1989 sale date are included as discontinued operations in the financial exhibits below.

Income from continuing operations for the year declined to $68.2 million or $.87 per share from $161.0 million or $2.00 per share for 1988. Consolidated revenues for 1989 rose 4 percent to $1.8 billion from $1.7

The company reported a 1989 fourth-quarter net loss of $19.0 million or $.24 per share compared with net income of $50.4 million or $.64 per share for the fourth quarter of 1988. The 1988 quarter includes $2.0 million or $.02 per share for the operations of NYT Cable TV. Consolidated revenues for the 1989 quarter were $470.2 million compared with $450.0 million for the fourth quarter of 1988.

The decline in 1989 earnings from continuing operations for both the fourth quarter and the year was primarily attributable to a weakness in the New York region's economy, which affected advertising linage at the New York Times, and to three previously-announced factors:

-- a fourth-quarter charge of $.57 per share for a valuation reserve against the company's investment in its Forest Products Group and for costs primarily associated with voluntary union staff reductions at the New York Times;

-- an $.18 per share reduction for the year ($.11 per share for the fourth quarter) resulting from the structuring of the McCall's, Golf World (U.S.) and Sailing World magazine acquisitions; and -- a litigation settlement with independent home delivery dealers resulting in a $.03 per share fourth-quarter charge.

Exclusive of these three factors, earnings per share from continuing operations would have been $.47 per share in the fourth quarter and $1.65 per share for 1989.

DOMINGUEZ, CA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Pic 'N' Save Corp. (NASDAQ: PICN) announced today that its board of directors has authorized the repurchase of up to five million common shares of its stock. The company will repurchase the shares from time to time through open market and privately negotiated transactions over the next two years at prices deemed appropriate by management. MINNEAPOLIS (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Computer Network Technology Corporation (CNT) (NASDAQ: CMNT) today reported net income of $261,135, or 2 cents per share, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989. This compares to a net loss of $1,290,448, or 11 cents per share, for the same period in 1988. Full-year revenues increased to $10,180,697, up 70 percent from $6,004,480 in 1988.

For the 1989 fourth quarter, CNT had net income of $184,978, or 1 cent per share, compared with a loss in the fourth quarter of 1988 of $485,513, or 4 cents per share. Revenues in the 1989 fourth quarter increased 98 percent to $2,850,231 from $1,442,189 during the same period in 1988.

According to Mac Lewis, president and CEO, "Domestic end user customers, which are organizations that buy CNT systems through our direct sales force in the U.S. and Canada, contributed over 140 percent more revenues in 1989 than in 1988. Revenue from OEM customers, who resell CNT technology as part of their own product line, was down slightly in 1989. International revenues were just over 5 percent of total revenues, up from virtually no revenues in 1988."

Lewis continued, "The positive growth of domestic and international end user revenues in 1989 reflects growing acceptance of CNT's extended channel networking systems. During 1989 CNT was repeatedly selected as the preferred vendor of high speed local and unlimited distance networks. We now have successful production network implementations in 34 large organizations."

CNT reported 22 new end user customers in 1989, including 12 new domestic and international customers in the fourth quarter of 1989 alone. Among these new 1989 client additions were: Affiliated Computer Systems, Inc. (of Dallas), British Telecom, BP Exploration, Centrefile (the data processing services subsidiary of National Westminster Bank of England), Chicago Board of Options Exchange, Comdisco Disaster Recovery Services, Esso Exploration (in UK), First Interstate Bank, Minnesota Power, NCNB Texas, Nova Corporation of Alberta, The Procter & Gamble Company, Royal Insurance (of Liverpool, England), Shell Canada Limited, United States Trust Company, and Zytron Corporation (an information services company of Dun & Bradstreet).

Lewis concluded, "Going forward, we continue to emphasize growth through investments in technology, service, support and sales. While we anticipate increased revenue and income for fiscal 1990, we expect to experience continuing fluctuations in quarterly results due to the timing and size of individual orders. Despite such quarterly fluctuation, we are focused on our current positive business momentum and confident about our long-term growth and profitability."

Computer Network Technology Corporation develops, manufactures and markets high speed extended channel networking systems for the interconnection of mainframe computers, computer peripheral devices, and data base computers over unlimited distances.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - British Telecom (NYSE: BTY) announced today that earnings per share for the third quarter had increased by 14.8 percent from 0.66 pounds sterling per American Depository Receipt (ADR) to 0.76 pounds ($1.22). For the nine months, earnings per ADR have increased by 10 percent.

Revenues for the third quarter rose 10.5 percent from 2,790 million pounds to 3,083 million ($4,964 million) including the effect of tariff increases.

Telephone call income growth held up well in the climate of slower economic expansion in the United Kingdom. Domestic call volumes were up by over 9 percent and international call volumes were up by 12 percent on a year-on-year basis.

The demand for access lines grew in the last 12 months by 4.4 percent, with business lines increasing by 9.4 percent and residential by 3.0 percent.

Operating costs increased by 8.1 percent for the third quarter, enjoying the benefit not only of the reduced pension costs announced in the second quarter but also a decline in core manpower numbers of 1,400.

The continuing capital expenditure program allied to the cost of financing the recent investment in McCaw Cellular Communications Inc. and the acquisition of the Tymnet business were rosponsible for an increase of 110 million pounds in the interest charge to 352 million pounds for the nine months.

The taxation charge for the third quarter was 33.2 percent and for the nine months 33.7 percent. Both are well below the standard U.K. taxation rate of 35 percent.

Commenting on the results, British Telecom Chairman Iain Vallance said: "The nine-months' results demonstrate a continuing strength in demand for telecommunication services, in spite of the general slowdown in the U.K. economy. Our emphasis remains on improving the quality of our customer service, increasing the efficiency of our operations, and achieving profitable growth for our shareholders."

Net income for the fourth quarter of 1989 was $18.9 million, or $2.13 per share, compared with $8.9 million, or $1.01 per share for the same period last year. The 1989 fourth quarter earnings include $0.61 per share of income from the termination of a pension plan offset by the write-off of certain coal leases.

Ward Smith, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "The acquisition of Hyster Company last May has had a significant positive impact on the results of NACCO Industries. Hyster-Yale is a world leader in the materials handling industry and benefited from very favorable market conditions in 1989."

NACCO Industries is a holding company that has three major operating subsidiaries. Hyster-Yale Materials Handling, Inc. designs, manufactures and markets forklift trucks and related service parts under the Hyster and Yale trade names. The North American Coal Corporation mines and markets lignite coal for use primarily as fuel in power generation by electric utilities. Proctor-Silex, Inc. is a leading manufacturer of toasters, irons, coffeemakers and other small electric appliances.

JAMESTOWN, NY (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Bush Industries, Inc. (AMEX: BSH), a leading manufacturer of R.T.A. (ready-to-assemble) furniture, today reported preliminary results for the fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 31 1989.

Fourth-quarter net income was approximately $110,000 or 2 cents per share on net sales of $27.9 million, versus net income of $1,545,000 or 35 cents per share on net sales of $28,042,000 for the same period of the prior year. Earnings for the final quarter of 1988 include $388,000 or 9 cents per share form the cumulative effect of an accounting method change.

Net income for 1989 was about $2,360,000 or 52 cents per share on net sales of approximately $99.8 million, compared to net income of $4,042,000 of 90 cents per share on net sales of $93,848,000 for the previous year.

"The company has a sale gain for the year in the face of soft retail sales and a more competitive environment which did put added pressure on profit margins. Nevertheless, we are not satisfied with our earnings," Paul Bush chairman and president, said.

"From a marketing standpoint, we are continuing our strategy to broaden our distribution, extending beyond the electronic furniture area into the traditional furniture market and the rapidly expanding home office market. As a result, our customer base has increased and includes many of the nation's major mass merchandisers and a growing number of traditional furniture outlets to which our high quality, well- styled products, offered at reasonable prices, are increasingly attractive.

"Operationally, we are continuing the evolution in converting our manufacturing processes to the more efficient and responsive cellular manufacturing system. The pace of our progress and the results have not been up to our expectations. Our operations have been affected as we have reacted to the market demands, and as a result our efficiencies have deteriorated. We have commenced a major focus in addressing these issues, and while our action may not be immediately seen in our results, we anticipate progress and better results by the second half of the year," Bush concluded.

PITTSBURGH (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Cyclops Industries Inc. (NYSE: CYC) today reported net income of $36.2 million or $5.04 per share on sales of $1.35 billion for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

This compares to $16.9 million or $2.46 per share on sales of $1.25 billion for the prior year. For the fourth quarter of 1989, net income was $3.7 million or $.51 per share compared to $5.1 million or $.72 per share in 1988. Prior reporting periods have been restated to give effect to the restoration to continuing operations of two divisions previously accounted for as discontinued for financial reporting purposes.

Commenting on 1989, James F. Will, president and chief executive officer, said that earnings from Cyclops' flat-rolled steel operations led the higher 1989 results. "Our functional grades of stainless and galvanized carbon steel were strong contributors in 1989. We set records for shipments in both product lines," he said. "We also benefitted from excellent stainless plate sales during our first full year of ownership of Eastern Stainless. Recently, we began operating newly refurbished stainless sheet facilities at Eastern, and we plan to ship product later in the first quarter.

"Tubular products sales and earnings declined in 1989 from the previous year due to sluggish markets in the construction and energy industries. This cyclical business began to improve during the last half of 1989, and we expect the improvement to continue in 1990.

"Increased earnings from our Flour City high-rise curtain wall business, coupled with the sharply improved performance of E.G. Smith Construction Products, enhanced the 1989 results from our nonresidential construction businesses. Following a restructuring in late 1988, Smith returned to profitability in 1989 after sustaining losses for the past several years," said Will.

"We began 1988 with strong demand for many of our steel products," according to Will. "Shipments declined as the year progressed, reflecting the general slowdown in the economy. Sales and income for the fourth quarter were below a year earlier, due to decreased product demand, a reduction in raw material-based surcharges, facility restructuring, and shutdowns caused by weather and maintenance.

"As we begin 1990, we anticipate the reverse, that is, a slow start with demand rising as the year goes on. Although it will be difficult to match the high performance levels of 1989, at this point we expect 1990 to be another good year for Cyclops."

Cyclops Industries Inc. is a producer of flat-rolled stainless and carbon steel and tubular products, and also manufactures and erects metal panels and curtain wall for nonresidential buildings.

EATONTOWN, N.J. (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - PVC Container Corporation (NASDAQ: PVCC) announced today that its net income for the second fiscal quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, decreased 43 percent to $97,953 of $.02 per share compared to $172,237 or $.03 per share for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989 decreased 9 percent to a level of $6,316,260 compared to $6,922,469 for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988.

For the six-month period ended Dec. 31, 1989, net income was at a near break-even level of $25,561 compared to $259,355 or $.04 per share for the six-month period ended Dec. 31, 1988. Sales for the six-month period ended Dec. 31, 1989, decreased approximately 11 percent to a level of $12,345,123 compared to $13,927,499 for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988.

"The decline in net earnings during the first half of the current fiscal year, although disappointing, was not unexpected," said Phillip L. Friedman, president and chief executive officer. "The company recently completed a major expansion and relocation of its plastic bottle business to its new manufacturing facility, and was faced with some additional non-recurring, start-up expenses along with a lower- than-expected demand for some of the company's plastic bottles. The decrease in revenue from our company's plastic bottles division along with these higher operating expenses, was the major reason for the decline in earnings." It was noted that during June 1989 the company completed construction of its new 102,690-square-foot plastic bottle manufacturing facility located in Eatontown, N.J. on the company's 13.6 acres of property. Through most of the company's first fiscal quarter ending Sept. 30, 1989, the company was engaged in relocating all of its blow molding equipment from the old facility previously leased into the newly constructed $5.0 million facility.

Friedman further noted, "The start-up phase of the new manufacturing facility is now behind us, and improved operating efficiencies have now been demonstrated which should yield improved profitability in the future as plastic bottle sales increase."

It was further noted that the company's wholly owned subsidiary, Novatec Plastics & Chemicals Company, Inc., a specialty plastic compounder has improved its performance most recently. Friedman said, "Although sales volume of Novatec Plastics specialty compounds remained essentially unchanged, profitability of our plastic compounding business improved significantly due to lower PVC resin prices, the major raw material used in the manufacture of the company's products. Margins also benefited from the company's progress in expanding its sales of compounds into the engineering plastic market. Novatec has recently introduced several new grades of its Novablend line of PVC compounds for extrusion and injection molding, as well as some newer plastic alloys marketed under the Novaloy trade name."

Friedman said, "The company is optimistic that it will experience a modest improvement in the level of plastic bottle sales over the next several quarters and will continue to benefit from lower PVC resin prices and improved plastic compound profit margins in the near term future."

PVC Container Corporation, located in Eatontown, N.J., is a major producer of plastic containers for the packaging industry. Its wholly owned subsidiary Novatec Plastics & Chemicals Company, Inc., is a leading supplier of PVC compounds and plastic alloys in the United States.

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Local real estate executives, gazing into the crystal ball, have forecast a positive future for the Southern California market, as well as strong growth for the Inland Empire and for multi-family housing.

Completed December 1989, the second annual Southern California Real Estate Survey was cosponsored by Arthur Andersen's Real Estate Services Group and Southern California Real Estate Journal, and reflects the opinions of industry chief executive officers and high- level executives. The 330 respondents were primarily brokers, developers, and lenders, yet many were involved in appraisal, consulting, individual investment and other practices.

On average, respondents possessed more than 13 years' experience in real estate and more than 84 percent represented companies with asset values from $1 million to more than $1 billion.

Nearly 84 percent of those surveyed had a favorable outlook for local real estate in the next three years. Even so, only 28 percent thought the number of real estate transactions would increase in 1990, 41 percent said the level of transactions would not change, and 31 percent felt it would decrease.

"The Inland Empire and multi-family housing featured a consistently positive outlook in the survey," said Andrew S. Kane, director of Arthur Andersen's Real Estate Services Group in Southern California and a partner based in the firm's Los Angeles office. "These are likely to be key development and investment areas in the next several years."

Respondents were asked to select the five most promising areas for residential development. The Inland Empire, which includes San Bernardino and Riverside Counties, was favored as the current "hot spot" for residential real estate development in Southern California by 63 percent of respondents. North San Diego County (42 percent) and South Orange County (34 percent) were the next most favored areas.

More than half the respondents said the Inland Empire will continue to boom over the next three years, with the runners-up being North San Diego (34 percent) and Oxnard (23 percent). In addition, when asked for the ideal areas for residential relocation, 38 percent indicated the Inland Empire.

Respondents were also asked to select the five most promising areas for commercial development, and again selected the Inland Empire as the hottest market, with 41 percent giving this response for the present and 45 percent for over next three years. Downtown Los Angeles was cited as the second most promising area currently, and North San Diego County came in second for three-year potential. The Inland Empire was also singled out as the best area for commercial relocation.

Part of this preference for the Inland Empire stems from a regulatory environment that is generally supportive of development, as indicated by the response. In contrast, more than half of those polled said that Santa Monica and Santa Barbara were the areas most hostile to development. "The lack of the hostility and the anti- growth sentiment that seems to permeate many other communities is, in part, what makes the Inland Empire such a popular and dynamic market," said Kane.

Multi-family housing, such as condominiums and apartments, was said by 61 percent of those surveyed to have the greatest three-year development potential. In fact, single-family housing, the second most common response, was cited 15 percent less often than multi- family residence. "The recent price escalation in the single-family market has indeed been switching demand to more affordable alternatives," said Kane.

Likewise, more than three of four respondents said multi-family property values would increase in Southern California, whereas 59 percent said the same about single-family housing.

1990 will be a better year for buyers than sellers of real estate, according to 58 percent of respondents; the most common reasons being prospects of future appreciation, availability of financing, and large supply of property. Most of those (20 percent) who indicated the market would be better for sellers said this would result from high demand, tax law changes, and low supply. Twenty-two percent indicated the market would be equally good for both buyers and sellers.

When asked what they thought were the biggest challenges facing real estate developers, 68 percent mentioned the anti-growth movement as a current problem. Traffic congestion was cited second, with 56 percent expressing immediate concern and 63 percent pessimistic about the next three years. "These issues are indeed related, as traffic congestion typically gives rise to anti-growth concerns -- both of which are political and economic issues in great need of coordinated solutions," said Kane.

In the commercial sector, the survey favored large retail development (58 percent) as the most likely to sustain increased property values, with downtown office space in major cities being the second most promising. Industrial/warehouse facilities were said to have the greatest three-year potential of any commercial real estate, as indicated by 44 percent of responses.

Only approximately 15 percent cited either high-rise or low-rise office space as having great development potential. "This attitude reflects an awareness of the amount of vacant office space that already exists locally " said Kane. In fact, more than half of the respondents said vacancy rates for 1990 would increase in downtown offices and 42 percent projected an increase in suburban office vacancy.

Fifty-nine percent of those surveyed largely attributed the increasing prices of downtown office space to the surge of Japanese investment. Interestingly, respondents indicated that high-rise buildings would benefit from foreign involvement, followed by hotels and, thirdly,

In fact, three-quarters of Southern California real estate executives said they or their clients had been approached by a foreign investor about an acquisition or joint venture within the last 12 months, 72 percent of these investors being Japanese. Of all proposed investors, the Japanese expressed the strongest interest in actively participating in their investment, rather than merely providing funding.

The real estate market will likely increase its shift to equity from debt in financing transactions. Sixty-three percent expect equity to be used more often during the next year, and nearly three out of four expect the same in three years. "This 'back to basics' approach is indicative of an overall shift in the business community, particularly lenders, towards increased conservatism," said Kane. "It also reflects a wariness that arose in the aftermath of the troubled Savings and Loan industry."

Twenty-six percent of those surveyed said that a reduction in the capital gains tax would make them at least somewhat likely to sell off property. "Such taxes would appear to spur a selling binge, but this would not necessarily increase capital formation," said Kane. "This would probably result in an acceleration of tax revenues, although it is uncertain whether a tax cut would be of long-term help to the industry."

Respondents cited land-use restrictions invoked by community groups, as well as toxic and environmental hazards, as the most prevalent existing litigation threats. "Environmental liability is expected to become more of an issue in the next several years; for example, most of those surveyed indicated they protected their property investments by having inspections by environmental engineers," said Kane. In fact, 65 percent of responding firms expect to adjust their management focus to emphasize environmental hazards.

If the respondents' opinions of recent history are an indication, the Bush Administration will continue to favorably affect local economic growth, competitiveness, inflation and interest rates. Most indicated that President Bush was having no effect upon the environment, government regulations, income taxes, or yields on properties. Those surveyed were split as to whether the current presidency had either a positive or zero effect on unemployment.

"Taken as a whole, the 1989 Southern California Real Estate Survey indicates that ours is among the most promising property markets in the nation," said Kane. "Although the outlook is not quite as favorable as in recent years, the local market is positive, active and vital."

TWIN CITIES (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Mesaba Aviation Inc. (NASDAQ: ATCC) today reported that it flew 13.7 million revenue passenger miles during the month of January, a 59.2-percent increase over 8.6 million revenues passenger miles flown during the same month last year (one revenue passenger flown one mile equals one revenue passenger mile). The airline said it carried 63,996 passengers in January, an increase of 56.7 percent over 40,845 passengers carried last January. Mesaba's load factor during the month was 47.0 percent, compared to 51.7 percent last year.

The reduction in load factor during the month reflects the airline's additional capacity to its system over the past year with its fleet of

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - British Telecom (NYSE: BTY) announced today that earnings per share for the third quarter had increased by 14.8 percent from 0.66 pounds sterling per American Depository Receipt (ADR) to 0.76 pounds ($1.22). For the nine months, earnings per ADR have increased by 10 percent.

Revenues for the third quarter rose 10.5 percent from 2,790 million pounds to 3,083 million ($4,964 million) including the effect of tariff increases.

Telephone call income growth held up well in the climate of slower economic expansion in the United Kingdom. Domestic call volumes were up by over 9 percent and international call volumes were up by 12 percent on a year-on-year basis.

The demand for access lines grew in the last 12 months by 4.4 percent, with business lines increasing by 9.4 percent and residential by 3.0 percent.

Operating costs increased by 8.1 percent for the third quarter, enjoying the benefit not only of the reduced pension costs announced in the second quarter but also a decline in core manpower numbers of 1,400.

The continuing capital expenditure program allied to the cost of financing the recent investment in McCaw Cellular Communications Inc. and the acquisition of the Tymnet business were responsible for an increase of 110 million pounds in the interest charge to 352 million pounds for the nine months.

The taxation charge for the third quarter was 33.2 percent and for the nine months 33.7 percent. Both are well below the standard U.K. taxation rate of 35 percent.

Commenting on the results, British Telecom Chairman Iain Vallance said:

"The nine-months' results demonstrate a continuing strength in demand for telecommunication services, in spite of the general slowdown in the U.K. economy. Our emphasis remains on improving the quality of our customer service, increasing the efficiency of our operations, and achieving profitable growth for our shareholders."

EDISON, N.J. (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Engelhard Corporation (NYSE: EC) clarified today that it intends to sell certain businesses as part of a major plan announced last week to reorganize and restructure the company.

Orin R. Smith, president and chief executive officer, said Engelhard has been approached by a number of interested buyers, but no agreements have been reached as yet. The businesses to be sold include most of Engelhard's gold and silver product fabrication and refining, metal joining, and crystals and electronics operations.

Smith said Engelhard is looking for buyers who, based on their own strategic directions, would be able to provide the focus and resources needed to ensure the long-term success of these businesses.

"In total, these businesses are profitable and potentially very good businesses to be in," Smith said. "We are selling them because we have made a strategic decision to focus on further strengthening our leadership positions in catalysts, pigments and additives, platinum group metal products and precious metal management."

In addition to selling certain businesses, Engelhard also announced last week that it will restructure its ongoing operations, including the anticipated reduction of about 500 salaried jobs. Smith said he expects the restructuring to reduce Engelhard's annual operating expenses by $30 million or more.

Smith said that full implementation of the reorganization and restructuring this year could result in significantly improved earnings beginning in 1991 and positive net cash flow of $15 million to $20 million per year could be realized in future years as a result of these actions.

"With this plan, we intend to significantly improve the company's financial performance, both near- and long-term, and ensure that Engelhard continues to be a world-class competitor in the 1990s," Smith said.

Engelhard has taken a $160.4 million after-tax charge against 1989 fourth-quarter earnings to cover its actions. This nonrecurring charge consists of $110 million related to the exiting of businesses and $50.4 million to restructure ongoing operations.

When it announced the plan, the company also said its board of directors had approved a 21 percent increase in the regular first- quarter common stock dividend.

Engelhard Corporation is a world-leading provider of specialty chemical products, engineered materials and precious metal management services.

DETROIT (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Ford Motor Company (NYSE: F) today announced a new customer-incentive program, giving buyers of the 1989/90 Ford Escort a $750 cash allowance plus 6.9 percent low-rate financing, and buyers of 1989/89-1/2 Mercury Tracers a $1,000 cash allowance plus 6.9 percent low-rate financing.

As an alternative, buyers may choose a higher cash allowance of $1,500 on Tracer or $1,000 on Escort.

Cash allowances or annual percentage rate (APR) financing are offered on 22 Ford, Mercury, and Lincoln car and truck products in a new program that takes effect today and continues through April 2. The interest rate is new, 6.9 percent APR for 24, 36, or 48 months, 10.9 percent for 60 months.

"A combination of a large cash allowance and special financing rates on the Escort and Tracer provides an excellent value for purchasers of these cars," said Robert L. Rewey, vice president, Ford North American Sales Operations.

"These new incentives will further help reduce our dealers' inventories, which were cut dramatically in January. Their days' supply of cars, which stood at 97 at the end of the year, is now down to about 65 -- quite a bit below the norm for this time of year with the spring selling season approaching."

In order to qualify for a cash allowance or low-rate financing, buyers must take delivery from dealer stock by April 2.

GREENVILLE, DE (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Sears Roebuck Acceptance Corp. (SRAC), a wholly owned consolidated subsidiary of Sears, Roebuck and Co. (NYSE: S), today reported that net income increased 16.6 percent to $43.6 million for the fourth quarter of 1989 from $37.4 million for the same quarter of 1988. For the year, net income increased 23.1 percent to $178.1 million for 1989 from $144.7 million for 1988. Net income for the year 1988 reflects $11.4 million of additional non- recurring net income resulting from the adoption of the new income tax standard, FAS 96.

The increase in net income for the quarter was primarily attributable to SRAC's increased combined investment in Sears notes and receivable balances. For the year, the increased combined investment at higher yields was the primary cause for increased net income. The yields were increased in response to a rise in the average cost of short-term borrowings.

Combined earnings on SRAC's investment in the notes and receivable balances of Sears increased 17.4 percent to $332.5 million for the fourth quarter of 1989 from $283.1 million for the prior-year period. Combined earnings for the year 1989 increased 33.7 percent to $1,343.9 million from $1,005 million for the prior year. Interest and related expenses for the 1989 fourth quarter increased 17.8 percent to $266.8 million from $226.5 million for the comparable 1988 period. For the year, interest and related expenses increased 33.9 percent to $1,073.7 million for 1989 from $801.9 million for 1988. BURBANK, CA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Summit Health Ltd. (NASDAQ: SUMH) today announced a $303,000 increase in earnings for the second quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared to the same quarter a year ago. Earnings for the current year quarter were $979,000 or $.03 per share compared to $626,000 or $02 per share a year ago. For the six month period ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared to prior year six months, earnings were $2,029,000 compared to $1,934,000.

The second quarter revenues were $93,574,000 compared to $95,834,000 for the prior-year quarter. The decrease was due primarily to the closing of a 122-bed hospital, located in Colorado Springs, Colo., in July 1989 and the sublease of three of the company's nursing centers to independent operators during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989. For the facilities in operations throughout the two quarters ended December 1989 and 1988, respectively, revenue increased 4 percent. This revenues increase was attributable to an increase in revenue per patient day, partially offset by increased deductions from revenue.

Summit Health Ltd. is an investor-owned health care company, which operates 20 hospitals, including eight in Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, with a total of 2,877 licensed beds. Summit's 17 long-term care centers and four retirement centers have 2,699 licensed beds. Summit's 41 facilities are located in four states and in Saudi Arabia. WATERBURY, CT. (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - As previously announced, fourth quarter earnings for Centerbank (NASDAQ: CTBX) include an addition to loan loss reserves of $41 million, a $14 million charge off to reserves, and a $10 million reduction in nonperforming investments.

As a result of these actions, Centerbank reported a loss for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1989, of $30,121,000 or $2.47 per share, compared with net income of $1,604,000 or 13 cents per share for the fourth quarter in 1988. For the year, Centerbank posted a loss of $31,775,000 or $2.61 per share, compared with net income in 1988 of $10,582,000, or 87 cents per share.

The fourth quarter additions bring total reserves to $43 million, or 54 percent of nonperforming assets. Chairman Robert J. Narkis stated, "This action recognizes the recent deterioration in the real estate market and is an attempt to anticipate market conditions in an unstable economic environment. The $10 million reduction in nonperforming investments recognizes the potential need to write down several investments to reflect market conditions. Unlike many banks, Centerbank is fortunate to be in a position to take this action without, on a relative basis, adversely affecting our earnings potential or capital postion. In short, the bank is in great shape to weather the economic problems surfacing in New England."

Centerbank remains one of the strongest capitalized financial institutions in the Northeast. At year-end, book value was $16.33 per share, the equity-to-assets ratio was 10.7 percent, shareholders equity was $199 million, and total assets were $1.9 billion. In January, Centerbank announced that, due to a State Banking Department interpretation of the law governing the computation of earnings for dividend purposes, they are precluded from paying a dividend in the first quarter of 1990.

Established in 1850, Centerbank is the largest independent financial institution headquartered in western Connecticut. It operates out of 19 branch offices stretching along the I-84 corridor from Southington to Danbury. Its subsidiaries include Centerbank Mortgage Company, Center Capital Corporation, Realtech Realtors and Burgdorff Realtors.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of The Prospect Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: PROSZ), today adopted a plan of complete liquidation and dissolution and directed that the plan be submitted to a vote of Prospect's shareholders at the company's annual meeting to be held in late April or early May. The vote follows the announcement in January of a program to maximize value for shareholders through the distribution of substantially all of Prospect's assets.

Prospect also announced that it expects to file preliminary copies of its proxy solicitation material with the Securities and Exchange Commission in early March.

Steps to implement the initial distributions are expected to commence immediately after the shareholder vote, and the liquidation will be completed as expeditiously as possible.

The distribution of Prospect's interest in Recognition Equipment, Inc., is not expected in the near term. The company intends next week to complete its previously announced purchase of a $15 million convertible senior subordinated note in Recognition.

In addition to substantial preferred stock interests in MidSouth Corporation and Illinois Central Corporation, Prospect holds majority interests in The Forschner Group, Inc., which is the exclusive U.S. marketer of Victorinox Swiss Army Knives; Children's Discovery Centers of America, Inc., the country's fifth largest daycare company, and Ivy Insurance Group, Inc., an automotive insurance company in California. Prospect has signed a definitive agreement with BSN Corp. to sell National Spirit Group, Inc., and operator of cheerleading camps and manufacturer of cheerleader and school uniforms. Prospect, which holds a 51 percent interest in Sylvan Foods, Inc., the nation's third largest mushroom producer, announced in January that it expects to distribute Sylvan's common stock to Prospect's shareholders. HAMILTON, BERMUDA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Sea Containers Ltd. (NYSE: SCR) met yesterday together with its investment bankers, Lazard Freres & Co., and decided to recommend to shareholders at the March 15, 1990 annual general meeting a recapitalization plan calling for the company and certain subsidiaries to purchase up to seven million common shares at $70 each in cash through a tender offer. It is expected that the tender offer will be commenced later this month and will be completed in April.

The recapitalization will be subject to completion of asset sales totalling approximately $1.1 billion to Stena U.K. Ltd. and Tiphook plc, which are subject to approval by the shareholders at the March 15 meeting. Assuming approval is obtained as expected, the target date for completion of the sales is March 31, 1990.

The shareholders will also be asked to approve by-law and Memorandum of Association changes enabling the company to repurchase its common shares and to strengthen its ability to resist future coercive takeover bids at unfair prices.

Shareholders will also be asked to vote against the sale, pursuant to existing conditional contracts, of container assets to Genstar and Itel (unless such contracts are terminated sooner) on the grounds that the Stena/Tiphook offer is more favorable to the company and its shareholders. The repurchase by the company of its common shares cannot take place until 21 days after amendment of the company's Memorandum of Association to permit such repurchases, so the earliest date the recapitalization can become effective is April 6, 1990, which is the target date.

The company believes the value of the recapitalization is in excess of $70 per common share; however, such value depends upon the multiple of earnings at which the common shares trade post-recapitalization. The company projects earnings of approximately $10 per common share in 1990, excluding gains on sales of assets and costs of the takeover defense and recapitalization. These earnings are projected to increase to about $12 per common share in 1991. Earnings forecasts assume continuance of stable business conditions as have prevailed in 1989.

If all common shares are tendered other than those held by the company's subsidiaries, each shareholder would receive cash equivalent to approximately $41 per common share tendered and retain common shares which would have an equivalent value of approximately $32 per common share tendered, assuming the market affords a multiple of eight times 1990 forecast earnings; shareholders who tender would thus receive a total $73 of blended value for each common share tendered.

If fewer shares are tendered, then the proportion of tendered shares acquired for cash will increase accordingly. If the market affords a multiple of 10 times 1990 forecast earnings the equivalent total blended value rises to approximately $80 per common share tendered.

LONG BEACH, CA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - KLM Royal Dutch Airlines today announced that it will buy up to 15 McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) MD-11 long-range tri-jet transports built by Douglas Aircraft Co. here.

The Netherlands' national carrier placed firm orders for 10 aircraft, with options for five more. With a value estimated at $1.3 billion for the 10 firm bookings plus spare parts and services, it is the largest single purchase ever made by KLM and the largest initial firm order for MD-11s to date.

Deliveries of the first 10 MD-11s will begin in December 1993 and continue through November 1995. Delivery schedules for the optional aircraft will be established later.

The aircraft will be MD-11 passenger models with seating for 265 passengers in a three-class arrangement including a large business section.

The choice of engines to power the new transports will be made later this year. McDonnell Douglas offers three different advanced high-bypass ratio powerplants for the MD-11: GE Aircraft Engines' CF6-80C2; Pratt & Whitney's PW4460 and the Rolls Royce Trent 650. All are rated in the 60,000- to 65,000-pounds thrust class.

With any of the engines, the MD-11s will have non-stop range in excess of 8,200 statute miles (13,200 km) in the KLM configuration, with speeds up to 588 mph (945 km/hr). The aircraft has an overall length of 200 feet 10 inches (61.2 m) and a wing span of 169 feet 6 inches (51.7 m). Maximum takeoff weight is 610,000 pounds (273,289 kg).

KLM will use the new aircraft on its long-range routes to South America, the Caribbean, the Middle East and Africa, and to develop service to new destinations in the United States and elsewhere.

The airline selected the three-engine MD-11 after a long and intensive evaluation in competition with the twin-jet Boeing 767 and the four-engine Airbus A340.

The MD-11 offers a wider passenger cabin, an advanced cockpit designed for a two-person crew, flexible interior fittings designed for quick and easy changes of the cabin arrangement, and many advanced features for passenger comfort and convenience.

With 6,850 cubic feet (194 cu m) of lower-deck cargo space, the MD-11 also provides significantly more room than any other aircraft for loading revenue freight after passengers' bags are stowed -- a feature particularly important in KLM's planned operations.

The MD-11 order continues an affiliation of more than 55 years between KLM and McDonnell Douglas. KLM first bought Douglas DC-2 transports in 1934, and has had the manufacturer's aircraft in its fleet ever since. KLM is the only airline that has operated every McDonnell Douglas commercial transport model from the DC-2 through the DC-10, and now will continue that tradition.

Including this order, McDonnell Douglas has booked a total of firm orders and other commitments for 340 MD-11s.

NEWPORT BEACH, CA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The following is a summary of a presentation made today by Jim Hitchin, president and chairman of Infrasonics Inc. (NASDAQ: IFRA), at the Southern California Growth Stock Conference.

Infrasonics is a medical device manufacturer, principally in the respiratory care area. The company is well positioned to become a leader in this field in the 1990s because its strong R&D efforts over the past few years are now paying dividends in the form of FDA approvals and product introductions.

Its major product since June 1985 has been an infant respirator (ventilator) which has, in four short years, built revenues approaching $6 million.

The company has received FDA approval for a new adult ventilator. This product will be a significant addition to the product line because the adult ventilator market is several orders of magnitude larger than the infant ventilator market.

With the introduction of the adult ventilator, the company's capabilities will expand and will cover the complete range of ventilator products.

In addition, the company has just received FDA approval for a new type of high frequency infant ventilator. This was the result of a four-year study to show safety and efficacy in children with severe air leaks. In the study, the company found that the odds for survival for this class of infant more than doubled.

Another new product receiving FDA approval is a patient-triggered ventilator which synchronizes the ventilation rate to the baby's breathing rate. This is the first product of its type and represents state-of-the-art technology.

Finally, Infrasonics received FDA approval for its pulmonary function tester that allows physicians to determine the conditions of the lungs in order to develop proper diagnosis in the treatment of impaired lung function. The pulmonary function tester also aids in the determination of respiration or ventilation strategies for treating ventilator dependent patients.

San Diego-based Infrasonics has been publicly held since November 1984. Its common shares are traded in the over-the-counter market under the NASDAQ symbol IFRA.

SEATTLE (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - China Airlines (CAL), Taiwan's national carrier, received its first of six new technology 747-400 from Boeing Commercial Airplane Group today.

Accepting on behalf of the Taiwanese government and CAL, respectively, were Lou Wei-Hua, deputy director general of the Civil Aeronautics Administration and Gen. Chiang Hung-I, CAL vice president. The delivery ceremony, at Boeing's production facility near Everett, Wash., was hosted by William Shineman, vice president-general manager of Boeing's Everett Division.

Powered by Pratt & Whitney PW4000 engines, the 747-400s will add 50 percent to the carrier's capacity on nonstop routes between Taipei, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The aircraft's superior economics will give CAL the ability to offer three-class service for a total of 411 passengers with substantial fuel savings over their current 747SP fleet on a per-seat basis.

The 747-400 has the same fuselage dimensions as the 747-300, which is the lengthened-upper-deck model of the famed superjet. Compared to the -200s operated by CAL, the -400 model has greatly increased range capability, a digital two-crew flight deck, better fuel economy, more interior flexibility and lower operating costs.

Interior improvements allowing for quick re-positioning of seats will permit CAL to react to fluctuating market requirements which demand varying combinations of first-class, business and economy seating.

China Airlines, a long-time Boeing customer, ordered its first 727 in 1966. Since then it has ordered Boeing 707s, 737s, 747s and 767s. The airline currently operates a 23-aircraft fleet with 11 Boeing 747s, including a mixture of -200, freighter and SP models.

Forty-nine 747-400s have now been delivered since the first of the new model was delivered from the Everett facility Jan. 26, 1989. Firm orders for the 747 family now total 975, of which 253 are for the 747-400 airplane. Boeing has announced orders for 82 jetliners so far in 1990. Last year, the company announced 887 jetliners valued at about $46.74 billion, a record year.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - KPMG Peat Marwick, the international accounting and consulting firm, has entered into a worldwide licensing agreement with Brightbill-Roberts & Co. Ltd., the creators of HyperPAD(TM) an object-oriented application development tool for MS-DOS systems.

The agreement allows Peat Marwick to use software developed with HyperPAD for client engagements, as well as internal firm operations. It also includes provisions for transferring the technology to Peat Marwick clients.

Peat Marwick chose the HyperPAD environment to build proprietary tools in support of its application development strategy, according to Jules Ghedina, principal in charge of Peat Marwick's National Technology Resource Center.

"Our solutions-oriented philosophy means we are not locked into a single tool or environment," he noted. "Instead, we employ a 'best of breed' approach to meet our client's needs in the selection and use of tools and methodologies."

Ghedina cited a need for a range of technologies and methods organized through a unifying framework to "produce the benefit our clients demand from application development." He said that was the vision that resulted in Peat Marwick's Application Engineering 1995 Program (AE/95), which strategically integrates tools, techniques, methods, management practices and operating environments.

To support the implementation of AE/95, Ghedina continued, Peat Marwick selected HyperPAD as the best vehicle for developing an automated application engineering facility (AE/Platform(TM)) for standard MS-DOS workstations, a widely used computing platform among the firm's consulting clients. In addition, the presence of an equivalent product for the Apple Macintosh(R), Apple's own HyperCard(R), allows Peat Marwick to develop common applications for the MS-DOS and Macintosh environments.

The decision to go with HyperPAD originated in the firm's new National Technology Resource Center, located at Peat Marwick's executive offices in Montvale, N.J. The center provides technology support and coordination to the firm's management consulting practice domestically and internationally.

KPMG Peat Marwick provides accounting and auditing, tax, and management consulting services to leading business organizations, governmental and private institutions, and individuals through 132 offices in the United States. It is the U.S. member of KPMG, an international firm operating in 115 countries with 1989 revenue of $4.3 billion. KPMG has approximately 6,000 consulting professionals, including more than 3,000 in information technology.

Founded in 1981, Brightbill-Roberts & Co. Ltd. has a long string of critically acclaimed products noted for their ease of use. In its last fiscal year, the privately held, 24-employee company had sales of $2.6 million. The company headquarters are in Syracuse, N.Y.

BLUE BELL, PA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - U.S. Healthcare Inc. (NASDAQ: USHC), a leading operator of health maintenance organizations (HMOs), today announced a medical care compensation system based on quality care parameters and financial incentives for physicians to provide better care for the company's more than 1 million HMO members.

A company executive vice president, Dr. Michael A. Stocker, said the unique physician payment system was developed to encourage quality care.

The U.S. Healthcare physician compensation system is used to calculate payments for more than 3,300 private practice physicians who also care for HMO members who have chosen their offices for their primary care.

One novel aspect of the system is the involvement of the member himself to help determine what his doctor is paid. The company also consults physician peer review committees and other medical experts and uses state-of-the-art computer systems and algorithms to help determine physician compensation.

"This way," Stocker said, "we can bring consumerism and accountability into health care. The physicians who treat our members are not our employees. We cannot and should not tell them how to practice medicine, but we certainly can measure their performance by standards given us by the medical community itself and by what our members tell us, and pay accordingly."

To learn what its members think of their doctors, the company conducts annual surveys covering each office. The ultimate question asked of a member is, "Would you recommend your primary physician office to others?"

The company also reviews a doctor's ability to keep his patients. Its HMO members may readily transfer from one doctor's office to another without leaving the HMO. The company views excessive transfer rates as an indication of patient dissatisfaction.

Advisory peer review committees of independent physicians assist the U.S. Healthcare HMO's in the task of physician evaluation. These committees have adopted standards of care against which physician service to HMO members are measured after site visits, office chart reviews and interviews with the participating physicians.

Participating doctors are also evaluated on the basis of whether they have adopted the HMO philosophy of preventive, managed care.

The payment system reflects the fact that state and federal regulatory authorities and the HMOs require primary care physicians to assume some responsibility for managing health care costs. HMO industry regulators and the industry itself consider cost containment essential to combating the escalating costs of health care and the pressure to increase member premiums. To enable participating physicians to practice cost containment while still providing all appropriate care, U.S. Healthcare has developed referral arrangements that are innovative and unique in the industry. The company, for instance, pre-purchases clincal laboratory, radiology and other services for fixed monthly fees that are based on its total membership. Since the amount paid does not increase when these services are used, there is no financial incentive for a physician not to order laboratory studies or X-rays for a U.S. Healthcare member. In emergency situations, laboratory work, X-rays, EKG's and other studies are still fully covered no matter what the setting. Since the vast majority of care that doctors give is not emergency care, most X-rays and lab tests are performed by the negotiated pre-paid providers within the HMO system, and cost containment can be accomplished without sacrificing care.

A critical part of the program is the effort to avoid both over-utilization and under-utilization of health care services. It has been estimated that too much care contributes about 20 percent of the nation's health bill annually and causes physical harm to untold thousands of patients. Too little care is also an evil to be avoided. The computer is a principal tool in this effort. Computers assist in quality assurance reviews and referral pattern monitoring which help the company determine whether appropriate levels of care are being given. Under-utilization would result in decreased physician compensation. The company could also impose sanctions, including termination of the physician's service agreement.

U.S. Healthcare is one of the nation's leading operators of state-licensed and federally qualified HMOs. Founded in 1976, the organization has more than 1 million members in the Mid-Atlantic, Greater New York, and New England marketplaces. The company also provides managed health care services for self insured and other employers and operational and administrative services for health benefits companies. U.S. Healthcare is dedicated to providing access to quality health services for its members while aggressively seeking solutions to the problem of spiraling costs facing our current healthcare system.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The AIDS crisis now facing nearly 2,000 Romanian children has been labeled an international emergency according to health care experts.

The children, mainly under 13 years of age and living in orphanages, were infected by unchecked blood transfusions and the repeated use of unsterilized syringes.

In an effort to help the Romanian government begin to tackle this wrenching problem, U.S. Healthcare Inc. (NASDAQ: USHC), the Pennsylvania-operated health maintenance organization (HMO), obtained 1,000 sterile syringes and sent them to Romania yesterday.

Dr. Michael B. Stocker, general manager of the mid-Atlantic region of U.S. Healthcare, said that the Romanian situation is particularly disturbing because it could have been avoided.

"What we're seeing in Romania is the result of lack of education, and the tragedy is that the children who need the most care are also the ones that are the most neglected. By giving these syringes to the Romanian officials, it's one small way all of us in the United States can help."

Reese Paley, a well-known American art collector, volunteered to transport the syringes for U.S. Healthcare. Paley left for Romania yesterday and will deliver all 1,000 syringes to officials when he arrives.

PRINCETON, NJ (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - GE American Communications, Inc. (GE Americom) announced today the signing of a contract with K Prime Partners for the lease, through end-of-life, of 10 transponders on SATCOM K-1. The transponder deal on K-1, which has a projected service life through 1996, is valued at over $100 million.

The customer, K Prime Partners (KPP), is a newly-formed entity consisting of GE Americom and a group of multiple system operators. KPP was formed to launch a direct-to-home satellite service at mid-power Ku- Band. THe MSO partners include American Television and Communications Corporation (ATC), Comcast Corporation, Cox Cable Communications, Continental Cablevision, Inc., Newhouse Broadcasting, Tele- Communications, Inc. (TCI) United Artists Entertainment Company, Viacom, and Warner Cable Communications.

The partnership will provide to the American public an extended program service (EPS) to be received through antennas which will measure approximately one meter across. Initially, the 10-channel service will include a set of superstation signals as well as pay-per-view services.

These programs will be transmitted from GE Americom's SATCOM K-1, a 45 watt mid-power Ku-Band satellite already in geostationary orbit and capable of reaching homes throughout the entire continental United States.

John Cusick, vice president of business development for GE Americom, stated that the partnership's service holds tremendous promise. "The formation of K Prime Partners brings together those business system elements essential for a successful direct-to-home satellite service -- appealing programming, attractive economics, substantial capital commitments, and strong retail distribution capabilities. GE Americom is excited both to be part of this initiative and to utilize our K-1 satellite in this application," Cusick said.

John J. Sie, senior vice president of TCI, said that the partnership will serve uncabled households with an attractive programming package and, like cable, without high up-front cost. It will also provide innovative nationwide services such as pay-per-view and, in the future, HDTV. "Our Extended Program Service will expand the television options across the country," Sie stated.

GE Americom, located in Princeton, N.J., operates the SATCOM satellite fleet -- 5 C-Band and 2 Ku-Band satellites that service cable television, broadcast radio and television as well as business information and government markets. GE Americom is a wholly owned subsidiary of the General Electric Company (NYSE: GE).

TORONTO (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Royal Trustco Limited today announced its seventh consecutive year of record performance.

Net income increased 25 percent to $265 million for the year ended Dec. 31 1989, from $212 million in 1988. Earnings per share increased 15 percent to $1.66 from $1.44 the previous year. Return on common shareholders' equity was 17.6 per cent compared with 17.7 per cent in 1988.

"These results reflect continued success in meeting our financial objectives despite higher interest rates, narrower spreads and an increase in loan loss provisions overseas," said Michael A. Cornelissen, president and chief executive officer. "These were partially offset by volume gains and we are well positioned to achieve the goals we've set for the 1990s, including doubling our profits again in the next five years. Our strategies include aggressive branch expansion in Canada and strategic growth in the western U.S. and overseas," said Cornelissen.

Total balance sheet assets increased to $39.8 billion at Dec. 31, 1989, from $28.5 billion a year ago, reflecting strong internal growth and the acquisition of Pacific First Financial Corporation in the fourth quarter of 1989. Total assets under administration at Dec. 31, 1989, were $128.3 billion compared with $96.7 billion the previous year.

Royal Trust has maintained its position as one of North America's most conservatively capitalized financial institutions. In 1989, Royal Trust issued $286 million of new common equity and further strengthened its capital base through preferred share and subordinated debenture issues totalling $345 million. At year-end, total capital was $3.2 billion.

Royal Trust provides a wide range of personal and corporate financial services in Canada and overseas through its 26 offices in key financial centers of the United Kingdom, Europe and Asia. Royal Trust now also operates in the U.S. Pacific Northwest through its subsidiary, Pacific First Financial Corporation.

PRESTON, MD (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Preston Corporation (NASDAQ: PTRK) announced today its operating results for the fourth quarter and year ended Dec. 31, 1989. For the year, the company incurred a net loss of $849,697 or $.15 per share versus net income of $7,346,988 or $1.27 per share in 1988. Operating income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, was $12.8 million compared to $24.1 million in 1988, and the company's operating ratio increased to 97.9 from 95.9 in the prior year. Revenues in 1989 were $618.3 million compared to $593.7 in 1988.

For the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, Preston reported a net loss of $4.2 million versus net income of $.8 million for the same period last year. On a per-share basis, the loss was $.73 for the quarter versus earnings of $.15 for the same quarter in 1988.

"A combination of factors contributed to the depressed results for the fourth quarter," said William B. Potter, chairman and president of Preston "including significant price increases in the cost of fuel, severe weather experienced throughout most of the company's operating territory resulting in higher operating costs and lower-than-expected tonnage and revenues and increased casualty reserves."

Further, noted Potter, "quarterly results were affected by decreasing tonnage in several business segments with Pioneer and Reeves being especially hard hit by the conditions in the automotive and carpet manufacturing sectors. Competitive pricing throughout the industry in response to slow economic activity reduced margins during the quarter for all of Preston's operating companies."

Potter said that, during the quarter, all of the operating companies experienced an increase in fuel costs which they were unable to pass on to their customers. Fuel costs rose by $2 million during the quarter as a result of a 61 percent increase in the price of fuel between October and December. Both Pioneer and Reeves have initiated fuel surcharges of approximately 5 percent in January to recover these costs.

"Claims and insurance expenses increased $4.4 million for the year and $290,000 for the quarter," said Potter. "During 1989 we increased casualty reserves by $4.2 million due to changes in circumstances related to prior years' claims." Potter noted, however, "that as a result of the company's improved safety programs, the number of casualty incidents has declined approximately 40 percent since 1987 and 25 percent since 1988, which should result in a reduction in future claims expense.

"During the first quarter, the LTL carriers will benefit from a 5 percent general rate increase. The emphasis in 1990 will be to retain this needed price increase, provide our customers with greater value, and continue to reduce costs through better quality."

Preston Corporation is a holding company which, through its subsidiaries, transports freight by truck for a wide range of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers. The subsidiaries include Preston Trucking Company, Inc. of Preston; Saia Motor Freight Line, Inc. of Houma, La.; Pioneer Transportation Systems, Inc. of Hurlock, Md.; Reeves Transportation Company of Calhoun, Ga., and Smalley Transportation Company of Tampa, Fla.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Bamberger Polymers, Inc.'s (AMEX: BPI) board of directors has announced that it will distribute all of its wholly owned subsidiary Interpak Terminals, Inc. to its stockholders through a stock dividend on a one-for-one basis with Bamberger's 3,121,633 outstanding shares of common stock. The distribution is subject to regulatory approval, but it is anticipated that the distribution will be effectuated during the last week of April, 1990.

Interpak Terminals, Inc. has been engaged for the past 14 years in the business of warehousing custom packaging and arranging for the delivery of thermoplastic resins for the account of others. Interpak had revenues of $11,700,000 in 1988 and a net profit of $700,000, or $.22 per share on a post-distribution basis. Interpak is expected to have, on a post-distribution basis, a net worth of $3,500,000, or approximately $1.10 per share. It anticipates that its revenues and net profits in 1989 will show an increase of 20 percent over 1988's results. It is expected that Interpak's common stock will trade in the Over-the- Counter market.

In commenting on the decision to effectuate the distribution, Herbert M. Pearlman, Bamberger's chairman, said that "the creation of Interpak as a separate public company, not controlled by Bamberger Polymers, will enable Interpak to broaden its market share in the warehousing and packaging field." This stock distribution will not have an effect on Bamberger's ongoing business operations.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Cellular Communications, Inc., (CCI) (NASDAQ: COMM) announced today that its total 1989 revenues exceeded $83 million including cellular service revenues of more than $72.5 million. Operating profit before interest, depreciation and amortization rose substantially in the fourth quarter and for 1989 as a whole. The operating profit before interest, depreciation, and amortization exceeded $5.0 million and $13.0 million for the fourth quarter and for the year, respectively, subject to audit and year-end adjustment.

Recently, the company learned that the Ohio Department of Taxation may attempt to impose a retroactive property tax assessment on all cellular carriers in the state of Ohio, which could result in an additional, one-time liability for the company of up to $5.4 million over and above amounts already accrued for this purpose during the years 1986 though 1989. The company noted that its prior accruals were based upon specific advice of the Department of Taxation.

The company intends to vigorously oppose such an assessment if it should occur, and it is reviewing with its legal counsel the best course of action to be taken in such regard.

TALLAHASSEE, FL (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Florida's Public Service Commission today granted Gulf Power Company an interim rate increase of $5,751,000, pending the outcome of the company's formal rate investigation now before the PSC. The company originally had requested $22.8 million in interim rate relief.

The utility's base rate increase of $5,751,000 results in a uniform percentage increase of 2.43 percent. Currently, a typical monthly bill for a residential customer using 1,000 kilowatts is $59.36, and with the interim increase of 92 cents, the new average monthly bill will be $60.28. This increase will be effective in 30 days.

The next proceedings in Gulf Power Company's rate case are customer service hearings, scheduled April 4 and 5. The meeting on April 4 will begin at 6 p.m. CST at the Pensacola Civic Center in Pensacola, Fla., and the meeting on April 5 will begin at 6 p.m. CST at the Holiday Inn-Mall in Panama City, Fla. All five PSC commissioners will be present at both hearings.

Technical hearings before the PSC will be held June 11-22 in Tallahassee, and the commissioners will vote on the issues involved in the rate case during a "Special Agenda Conference," set for August 9, 10 and 14.

In December 1989, Gulf Power Company filed its formal rate request with the PSC. At that time, the company requested a permanent increase of $26.3 million in annual retail revenues. If approved by the PSC, the request would raise the cost of 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity for residential customers by $5.41 per month, an increase of 8.75 percent.

LANDOVER, MD. (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Herbert H. Haft, chairman of the board of Trak Auto Corporation (NASDAQ: TRKA), today announced that sales increased 13 percent for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1990.

Sales increased to $275.7 million from $243.1 million for the same period one year ago. Sales for the quarter ended Jan. 31, 1990, increased 18 percent to $74.1 million from $62.8 million.

Theses increases were primarily due to eight net new stores for the three months and 34 net new stores for the 12 months ended Jan. 31, 1990. Additionally, increases were attributable to 9 percent and 6 percent increases in sales for the three months and 12 months ended Jan. 31, 1990, for stores open more than one year.

Trak Auto Corporation currently operates 309 stores in the Washington, Baltimore, Richmond, Va., Chicago, and Los Angeles metropolitan areas, compared with 275 stores in operation one year ago.

TALLAHASSEE, FL (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Florida's Public Service Commission today voted for a full revenue requirements proceeding for Florida Power & Light Company and ordered the utility to set aside $26,470,000 in a corporate undertaking, subject to refund, pending the outcome of the company's formal rate investigation initiated by the PSC.

Florida Power & Light Company is expected to file its minimum filing requirements (MFRs) to the commission no later than Aug. 1, 1990, and formal hearings will be scheduled at a later date.

Chairman Michael Wilson said since Florida Power & Light Company had not had a formal rate case since 1984, the time had come for a full review of the company's rates and charges, expenses, investments and operations.

In December 1989, the commission voted to reduce Florida Power & Light's rates by $38.5 million. The rate reduction, effective Jan. 1, 1990, for customers of Florida Power & Light, cut between 60 and 70 cents a month from bills for a typical residential customer using about 1,000 kilowatt hours a month.

Chairman Wilson said, "Had we not proposed this rate reduction in December the amount of money held subject to refund in the rate proceeding might have been higher, but because we already reduced rates by $38.5 million, we eliminated a great amount of Florida Power & Light's potential overearnings."

Florida Power & Light, the state's largest utility, serves 3 million customers in Florida, and had revenues of $4 billion last year.

DANBURY, CT (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Union Carbide Chemicals and Plastics Company (UCC&P) announced today that it has licensed UNICARB(TM) System Coating Technology to Akzo Coatings Inc. Akzo Coatings Inc. results from the purchase of Reliance Universal Inc. by Akzo NV and the subsequent merger of Reliance with Akzo Coatings Inc.

The UNICARB Systems, a major advance in VOC reduction technology, was recently introduced by Union Carbide. By replacing solvents with carbon dioxide, the UNICARB System reduces volatile organic compound (VOC) emissions from spray coatings by 30 to 70 percent, enabling many applicators to meet requirements of the proposed Clean Air Act amendments.

Dr. Martin Price, a director of research and development for Akzo Coatings Inc., of Louisville Ky., said, "Our initial laboratory tests indicate that Nitrocellulose and other formulations can be sprayed with the UNICARB System equipment to lower solvent emissions."

"We are currently conducting tests to determine what reduction in VOCs can be achieved without sacrificing quality and appearance," said Price. "Akzo Coating Inc. is dedicated to providing the best quality product at the lowest possible emission levels for our customers. The UNICARB System license is another example of our commitment to finding innovative solutions to the problems facing the paint and coatings industry."

Under the UCC&P license, Akzo Coatings will have the right to develop, manufacture and market coating formulations for the UNICARB System. Coating concentrates that are specially formulated to eliminate up to 70 percent of the solvents will be brought to spray viscosity at an application facility by being blended with carbon dioxide in specially designed UNICARB System equipment.

The UNICARB System introduces supercritical carbon dioxide to the coating formulation immediately before application, producing a sprayable coating with a superior finish. Unlike other VOC abatement systems that generate carbon dioxide, such as incineration, the UNICARB System recycles carbon dioxide emitted from other industrial processes. The carbon dioxide is non-flammable and readily available.

Tom White, business manager of the Solvents and Coatings Materials Division of Union Carbide said, "With increasingly stringent air emission standards being legislated, we are confident that the UNICARB System will prove to be the most economic, effective VOC abatement technology for spray coating applicators."

Akzo Coatings Inc., headquartered in Louisville, a major supplier of metal wood and plastic coatings, will join other licensees that will supply coatings to markets such as automotive, appliances, aerospace, truck and bus, wood and metal furniture, and structural steel.

DALLAS (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - For the third time since the Department of Transportation (DOT) started tracking airline performance, one airline has swept all three major categories. Dallas-based Southwest Airlines (NYSE: LUV), which last month achieved major airline status on its sales past the $1 billion mark, had the best records of the nation's 12 largest airlines in ontime performance, Customer service and baggage handling.

The DOT reported that more than 81 percent of the airline's approximately 25,000 flights for the month of December arrived on time, that it had only .19 Customer complaints per 100,000 passengers and that only 4.99 passengers per 1,000 reported any baggage problems.

"The employees of Southwest Airlines have again set a record in those areas most important to our customers, proving once more that it is possible to have the lowest fares and at the same time provide the best customer service," said Gary Barron, executive vice president and chief operations officer of Southwest. "I know that with Southwest's new status of 'major' carrier, the employees will continue to provide the superb customer service that has contributed to our success."

Known as the "maverick" of the airline industry because of its combination of low fares, no interline policy, short ground times and unparalleled profitability record, Southwest Airlines first captured the highly sought after DOT crown in the March 1988 report and became the first airline to ever do so. The airline repeated the event in the November 1989 report and remains the only airline since the DOT started tracking performance statistics to sweep all three categories.

Southwest Airlines currently serves 31 airports from California to Birmingham and Nashville and from Detroit and Chicago to the Rio Grande Valley of Texas. The airline recently announced it will begin service in April from California's Burbank airport, bringing to six the number of California airports served by Southwest. The airline also reported a record profit of $71,558,000 for 1989, up from its record profit of $57,952,000 for 1988.

SIA, the securities industry's trade association, represents more than 600 securities brokerage and investment banking firms in the United States and Canada. These firms account for approximately 90 percent of all securities activity in North America.

MINNEAPOLIS (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - The NWNL Companies Inc. (NASDAQ: NWNL) today announced that its board of directors has approved the purchase of up to $3 million in NWNL common stock to pre-fund this year's contributions to an employee stock ownership plan as part of the company's newly revised profit sharing plan.

"Based on our outstanding financial results for 1989, we have a great deal of confidence in the company's strength and we believe that this is an excellent time to invest in our company," said chairman and chief executive officer John E. Pearson.

Also approved by the board are amendments to the company's share rights plan which lower the threshold percentages at which rights may be exercised.

Pearson said that the changes bring NWNL's threshold percentages down from the levels at which they were set when the plan was established in 1988 to that of numerous other current share rights plans and that the changes are not a response to a suspected or known takeover attempt.

Each right entitles a shareholders to buy one-tenth of a share of junior participating preferred NWNL stock at a price of $100, subject to adjustment. The rights expire on Jan. 29, 1998, unless they are redeemed or exchanged before that date or the expiration date is extended.

As amended, the rights would become exercisable only if a person or group acquires 20 percent or more of NWNL's common stock or announces a tender offer which, if consummated, would give the offeror ownership of 20 percent or more of the company's stock. The board may delay exercisability in the case of a tender offer.

The company is entitled to redeem the rights at one cent per right at any time before a party acquires 20 percent or more of the company's common stock and during the following 30-day period, subject to possible extensions.

If a person or group acquires 20 percent or more of the company's common stock, after the end of the redemption period each right that has not been exercised (except rights held by the 20 percent shareholder or its affiliates, associates or certain transferees, which rights shall be suspended) will entitle the holder to purchase NWNL common stock at a market value of twice the right's exercise price, subject to possible adjustment.

If NWNL is acquired in a merger or other transaction after a person or group acquires 20 percent or more of its common stock, the holder of each unexercised right may purchase common stock of the acquiring company at a market value of twice the right's exercise price.

In certain instances, the company may exchange rights for NWNL common stock or reduce the 20 percent threshold to not less than 10 percent.

The NWNL Companies Inc. is a Minneapolis-based diversified holding company specializing in insurance and financial services. It has 12.9 million shares of common stock outstanding.

NEWPORT BEACH, CA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Phillip C. Thomas, president and chief executive officer of Mitek Systems Inc. (NASDAQ: MITK) discussed the company's performance as well as the future for the TEMPEST industry in a presentation to the Cruttenden Southern California Growth Stock Conference held here today.

According to Thomas, a recent independent study by Frost and Sullivan indicated that "sales during the five-year period from 1990 to 1994 of TEMPEST equipment within the government marketplace would exceed $4 billion, without regard to the growth that could occur in the commercial sector should TEMPEST become more visible to the business community."

Thomas explained that TEMPEST products are value-added computer products that comply with rigid specifications established by the U.S. government for use when processing or transmitting information in high-security situations. TEMPEST refers to the suppression of electronic signals normally emitted by computer products to prevent interception by unauthorized parties.

He stated that because of the size and growth potential of the TEMPEST market, Mitek became a TEMPEST value-added manufacturer in 1985 and has experienced the greatest growth of any independent TEMPEST company in the world. Mitek modifies computers, computer peripherals and digital facsimile machines from blue chip technology companies to TEMPEST specifications and markets them to original equipment manufacturers, systems integrators, government contractors, the U.S. intelligence community and NATO governments.

Commenting on the company's financial performance, Thomas said that over the last five years, Mitek has grown from less than $500,000 in revenues to more than $18 million. He said that fiscal 1989 profits of $400,000 were the highest in the company's history and that the first quarter of fiscal 1990 resulted in more than $200,000 in profits on $4 million in revenues.

As reasons to invest in Mitek, Thomas cited its profitability, strong management team, excellent reputation in an established customer base and rapid growth in a protected niche market.

Mitek Systems Inc., based in San Diego, modifies computers, computer peripherals and digital facsimile machines in compliance with U.S. government TEMPEST standards to prevent electronic interception by unauthorized parties. Mitek's value-added TEMPEST products are used by U.S. and NATO governments and private industry in high-security applications.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Jack E. Thompson, president of North American Metals Corp. (NAM), told a group of shareholders in Portland, Ore. last night that the Golden Bear Project poured its first bar of gold on Jan. 31, 1990.

Speaking at a shareholders briefing, Thompson outlined how the Project had overcome typical start-up problems and was treating ore. Design capacity has not yet been reached and some other difficulties, such as roaster feed system inadequacies, need to be solved. He expressed confidence that these issues will be resolved in the near future. In the meantime, the plant is operational and producing gold. Thompson emphasized that the search for additional ore reserves will be the key to the success of the Golden Bear Project.

Thompson also announced that the proposed shareholder rights issue has been withdrawn. The fall in the stock price and other complications which would keep NAM's United States shareholders from participating in the rights issue were cited as reasons for the action. Alternative financing methods are being explored and an announcement will be made soon.

Thompson also announced with regret the death of John Parker, a director since 1988. He commented that Parker's presence and good humour will be missed. The NAM board of directors appointed Laurie Curtis to replace Parker on the board. Curtis, an independent geological consultant from Toronto, brings additional geological expertise to NAM's board.

DALLAS (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - In response to unprecedented demand for its Detroit City Airport buy one get one free promotion, Southwest Airlines (NYSE: LUV) announced today it is asking its customers who have been unable to use the free tickets earned last fall to exchange those free tickets, originally set to expire on Mar. 9, for new tickets which will be good for unrestricted travel to any Southwest airlines destination within one year.

The airline said that Detroit customers earned the free tickets by traveling on Southwest before Nov. 17, 1989.

"The demand for travel from both Detroit airports far surpassed our expectations," said Southwest spokesman David Brown. Brown added, "While many people were able to fly to the city of their choice, a number of our customers could not make the trip by the March 9 expiration of the program. For those not able to take advantage of their free tickets, we have modified the offer to allow them to take up to a year for their trip -- and just as it was in the beginning of the program, the number of free seats is limited only by the number of seats on the aircraft, and our customers can fly to any of the other 29 cities served by Southwest Airlines."

Brown added that the airline inaugurated service from Detroit City Airport in July, 1988 and "We have been very encouraged by the number of people who found that City Airport is the answer for their air transportation needs. It has been an exciting and successful tenure for us at City Airport and we are looking forward to even greater success in the future."

Any customer wishing to obtain new tickets need only forward one original buy one get one free orange promotional ticket (no photocopies accepted) along with their address to: Southwest Airlines Co., Attn.: Director/DAL1CR, P. The call, which also helped celebrate Idaho's centennial year, was placed by Bob Potter president of the CDA area economic development corporation to Gov. Cecil Andrus at 4:45 p.m. Pacific Standard Time.

With the activation of the Coeur d'Alene system, U S WEST Cellular currently serves more of Idaho than any other cellular company. U S WEST Cellular has provided service in Boise since June, 1986.

The Coeur d'Alene system, the first of approximately 20 Rural Service Areas U S WEST Cellular plans to activate during 1990, augments existing service in Spokane, Washington. U S WEST Cellular customers in either city have access to both systems.

Coeur d'Alene coverage extends north to Athol, south to Worley, east to Fourth of July Grade and west to the Idaho/Washington border. The cities of Coeur d'Alene, Hayden Lake and Post Falls are included in the coverage area.

"This system helps represent Kootenai County's continued economic upturn with expansion of existing industries as well as the introduction of new ones," said Michael Smith, territory manager for the Northern Idaho system. "We're proud that the Coeur d'Alene system represents the first step in U S WEST Cellular's development of a seamless cellular network."

ROSEMEAD, CA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Southern California Edison Company is "encouraged" that a California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) staff analysis "finds that customer benefits of the proposed merger of Edison and San Diego Gas & Electric Co. (NYSE: SDO) could be in the range of $1.3 billion in the next decade," an Edison spokesman said.

The Division of Ratepayer Advocates (DRA), the consumer-advocate arm of the CPUC, earlier today said in testimony filed with the CPUC that while it opposes the merger as proposed, it could support the merger if certain conditions were agreed upon.

"Although we recognize that DRA does not agree with us on all of the $1.7 billion savings we have identified from merger efficiencies, we are encouraged that they have recognized there are significant benefits for electric customers of both Edison and SDG&E because of merger efficiencies " the Edison spokesman said. "This is the bottom line -- are consumers better off and is the public interest served? We believe it is."

"DRA has indicated its seeks further assurances that merger savings will be passed on to customers beyond 1994, the period in which the Edison-SDG&E merger filing proposes specific rate treatment. We believe this can be resolved," the spokesman said.

"Based on what we know so far about DRA's position on competitive issues and access to the transmission system of the merger utilities, again, we believe these issues can be resolved.

Edison "welcomes the opportunity to meet with DRA and others to try and work out solutions to their concerns on all issues," the Edison spokesman said. "Edison is encouraged with the DRA's position which, in effect, like the staff report of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, recognizes the consumer and public interest benefits which will result from the merger of Edison and SDG&E."

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The United States would ban the export of weapons to South America under a ''document of understanding'' developed for next week's four-nation drug summit in Cartagena, Colombia, administration sources say.

The accord also would commit the United States to supporting a sweeping plan to replace the multibillion-dollar cocaine trade in South America with legal commerce.

Administration sources say the document, being finalized in English and Spanish, was drafted by the United States with input from Colombia, Peru and Bolivia, where the world's biggest cocaine cartels operate.

''The 'Document of Cartegana' will be a document of understanding, about 15-16 pages,'' a source said. ''It will be accompanied by a shorter joint communique,'' which will summarize it.

Confirming a report Wednesday in USA Today, sources said that in addition to the weapon ban and economic aid, the accord would:

-Tighten controls on the export of chemicals used to produce cocaine.

-Increase efforts to combat the laundering of drug money.

-Provide for greater sharing of intelligence information.

-Bolster anti-drug education and treatment. (South America has long argued that the United States, the world's biggest cocaine consumer, must do more to reduce drug demand).

Colombian President Virgilio Barco, who will host next Thursday's summit, has complained that many narco-traffickers in South America are armed with weapons made in the United States.

Last year, the Bush administration, as part of its war on drugs, banned the import of foreign-made automatic weapons. But many of the rapid-fire guns produced in the United States go overseas to cocaine cartels.

Federal anti-drug chief William Bennett, testifying Wednesday before the House Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control, refused to provide any specifics about the administration's plans at the summit.

He said, however, that ''what we want out of Cartagena is a recognition and agreement that the four countries face a common enemy and need to take some common steps.''

''We are looking at across-the-board kind of action,'' combining economic and law enforcement, said Bennett, who will accompany Bush to the drug summit.

The presidential trip will draw heavy security in response to fears that the drug lords may seek to harm Bush. There have been reports that they have placed a bounty on his head.

Bush, speaking in San Francisco Wednesday after a luncheon address to the Commonwealth Club, said he is confident he will be safe. ''I'm not going to do something stupid or macho,'' he said.

The president said the trip is necessary to demonstrate support for Barco, who declared war last summer on the cocaine cartels.

''So it isn't whimsical or a desire to be in harm's way,'' Bush said. ''I think we have good arrangements and I think it is good, sound, anti-narcotic policy to support President Barco, who is doing an awful lot to protect our kids from the scourge of narcotics.''

Bush, in his proposed budget to Congress last week, recommended that the United States provide an additional $206 million in economic and military aid to the three Andean nations next year. They now get $217 million.

Bennett's two-hour appearance before the House panel was his latest in a series of congressional hearings he attended to defend the administration's proposed $10.6 billion war on drugs, a 12 percent increase over current spending.

He again heard criticism from Democrats that the White House was not willing to spend enough, particularly on education, and praise from Republicans, who said he was waging an effective fight.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., the panel's chairman, challenged Bennett's contention that Bush's Cabinet secretaries were effectively participating in the drug war.

But Rangel took time at the close of Bennett's comments to say, ''we wish you well'' on the trip to Colombia.

''We support you and the president,'' he said. ''The country wants your speedy return.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Scientists reported they have zeroed in on a genetic defect that appears to underlie life-threatening reactions to anesthesia, findings that may lead to better tests to avert anesthesia-related deaths.

Two research teams, working independently, said Wednesday they have narrowed down the location of the gene for inherited malignant hyperthermia - one of the major causes of death from anesthesia - to chromosome 19.

Between 1 in 12,000 children and 1 in 40,000 adults have the disorder, researchers said. When such people are given many common types of general anesthetics, their bodies overheat, their heartbeats speed up and their muscles essentially burn out from repeated contractions.

Before the introduction of a drug to offset the symptoms in the early 1980s, up to 70 percent of patients stricken by the adverse reaction died. Even with the new therapy, about 5 percent of affected patients die.

In two articles published in the journal Nature, one team from Ireland's University College, Germany's University of Munich and London's St. Mary's Hospital and another group from University of Toronto said they have found genetic markers that appear linked to malignant hyperthermia susceptibility, or MHS.

The findings were based on genetic studies of more than 20 families known to have a history of the disorder. Although the precise defect responsible for MHS is not known, the Canadians found evidence indicating the MHS markers lie in the same region as the gene coding for a key skeletal muscle receptor.

''These results ... provide a potential accurate and non-invasive method of diagnosis for MHS,'' wrote Ireland's Tommie McCarthy and his colleagues.

Dr. Jordan Miller, an associate professor of anesthesiology at University of California-Los Angeles medical school, agreed there is a ''great need'' for better tests to screen for malignant hyperthermia before patients undergo general anesthesia.

Currently, the only conclusive test for the disorder involves surgically removing a piece of muscle tissue and testing whether it contracts in response to certain chemicals, Miller said.

The test, which costs $2,000 to $3,000 per person, is generally done only in people who have a family history of life-threatening reactions to anesthesia, he said.

''Anything that could significantly reduce the number of patients that have to undergo such tests would be extremely worthwhile in terms of cost, pain and simplicity. It would also allow more people to be tested,'' Miller said.

Other possible indicators of malignant hyperthermia, such as the jaw becoming rigid when a person is given a muscle relaxant, are not exclusive to that condition and can be found in some people who can tolerate anesthesia, he said.

Miller said widescale screening tests for the inherited disorder probably will not be available until researchers pinpoint the exact genetic defect or defects. ''But this is an important first step,'' he said.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - A former resident of Covenant House said he helped the Rev. Bruce Ritter divert $175,000 from the runaway shelter's accounts for personal use, adding accusations of financial malfeasance to the unfolding sex scandal.

Paul Johnson, 33, told WNBC-TV Wednesday he cashed ''something in the neighborhood of $175,000 worth of checks'' that were written out to him on Covenant House accounts, and turned the money over to Ritter.

In a published account earlier in the day, Johnson accused Ritter of being involved in a six-year sexual relationship with him beginning when he was a 17-year-old runaway.

Frank Macchiarola, a former chief of New York City's school system, was appointed acting head of Covenant House Wednesday, taking over for the embattled founder of the nation's largest shelter for runaway youths.

Macchiarola, 48, also a professor at Columbia University's graduate school of business and a member of Covenant House's board of directors, will assume his new position immediately, board chairman Ralph Pfeiffer said.

On Tuesday, Ritter was ordered by officials of the Franciscan order to take a leave of absence from Covenant House which operates 17 shelters in the United States, Canada and Latin America, pending completion of a church inquiry.

The Catholic priest repeatedly has denied the allegations from three former teenage residents of Covenant House that they had sexual relations with him, labeling the charges ''garbage.''

Johnson, an admitted felon who is now the president of a finacial consulting firm, told the television station in a broadcast interview that he cashed checks for Ritter, who he said ''had come into my life at a time when I needed a father figure.''

He said he never thought of running off with the money from the checks he cashed.

''At 14 years old, what am I going to do with $10,000?'' he said.

The New York Post reported Wednesday morning that Johnson told the newspaper on Dec. 16 he was involved in a six-year sexual affair with Ritter that began in 1975, when he was a 17-year-old runaway living at the shelter.

The Post said it spent two months checking Johnson's story before deciding to publish it.

On Tuesday, state Attorney General Robert Abrams said he had opened a ''preliminary inquiry'' into the shelter, but an aide admitted ''nothing suspicious'' had been discovered.

In announcing Macchiarola's appointment, Pfeiffer said he ''has dedicated his life to children and their education. ... We are fortunate to be able to draw on his many strengths,''

Macchiarola, an affable, outgoing man, was city schools chancellor from 1978 to 1983. He also made an unsuccessful bid for city comptroller in 1989.

At an afternoon news conference at Convenant House's Chelsea headquarters, Macchiarola said he still supported Ritter despite the allegations.

''Right now, I believe Father Ritter,'' he said. ''I don't believe any of the allegations ... what we have here is a process that essentially snowballs.''

Macchiarola insisted he would not let the controversey surrounding Ritter damage Covenant House's mission.

''The organization is going to do what's right ... and to the extent that we do that, cover all the topics and issues we are concerned about, we will,'' he said. ''This is an advocacy organization for children, and as long as I'm here, that comes as our primary thrust and responsibility.''

He said he believed the organization's rules were ''sound,'' though he added that, ''all of this is going to force us to be careful again, to look again at the things we have done.''

The news of Ritter's temporary replacement came amid another allegation that a fourth former resident of Covenant House has claimed he had a sexual relationship with Ritter.

Covenant House was founded by Ritter in 1968, and now serves about 25,000 youths. Almost all of its $87 million annual budget - three times what the entire federal government spends on similar programs - is contributed by private donors.

The allegations against Ritter reportedly have led to a serious erosion of financial support.

They have also stained the reputation of the highly respected priest who was cited as an ''unsung hero'' by President Reagan in his 1984 State of the Union address and who received a visit in Manhattan from President Bush last fall.

(FEB. 8) UPI - In less than a second, Mitch Richmond ended 11 years of Golden State frustration and halted the NBA's longest winning streak of the season.

With 3-10ths of a second left in Wednesday night's game at Philadelphia, Richmond grabbed Winston Garland's missed shot and laid it in for a 113-112 Warriors' victory, ending the 76ers' string of 12 straight victories. Golden State had not won at the Spectrum since Jan. 31, 1979.

''It was a good shot and a good play,'' said Richmond, who finished with 32 points. ''We played a good game all the way through. To win it like that was great.''

Richmond was fouled by Charles Barkley on the decisive play. The Warriors' second-year guard missed the free throw, depriving Philadelphia of a chance for a timeout and a desperation shot.

''As soon as the ball hits somebody, the button (on the clock) has to be touched, the three-tenths of a second is gone and the game is over,'' explained Golden State Coach Don Nelson.

''We weren't going to go undefeated for the rest of the year,'' Barkley said. ''It (Richmond's basket) was one of those plays and we can't worry about it. One game doesn't put a damper on the 12 games we won.''

The smaller, quicker Warriors harassed the 76ers into 20 turnovers and had 13 steals.

''The one key factor in the game was our turnovers,'' said 76ers Coach Jim Lynam said. ''They were very active and knocked the ball loose. There were too many plays like that. They knocked the ball loose under the basket and scored on layups and they got the ball in the open floor and scored easy baskets.''

Chris Mullin scored 35 points and Tim Hardaway had 21 for the Warriors, who are just 5-18 on the road this year. Philadelphia had won 19 of its first 22 home games.

''Sometimes David does slay Goliath,'' Nelson said.

Barkley sank one of two free throws to give the 76ers a 112-111 lead with 19.4 seconds to play after the two teams went scoreless for nearly two minutes.

''We came in here confident we could play well,'' Richmond said. ''They did not match up well (with us) and we were confident we could run the floor and get easy baskets.''

Barkley led Philadelphia with 30 points and Hersey Hawkins added 16.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Elsewhere in the NBA Wednesday night, Boston routed Charlotte 146-125, Utah downed New Jersey 108-101, Phoenix edged Seattle 128-124 and the Los Angeles Lakers topped Chicago 121-103.

CELTICS 146, HORNETS 125

In Boston, Kevin McHale scored 31 points to lead seven Celtics in double figures and Boston capitalized upon an 80-point first half and 84-percent shooting in the third quarter. Charlotte, losers of nine in a row, are 8-36 overall and 1-20 on the road. Armon Gilliam led the Hornets' offense with 26 points. Boston's Larry Bird hit both free-throw attempts and has connected on 68 in a row, second-best in NBA history and 10 shy of Calvin Murphy's record.

JAZZ 108, NETS 101

At East Rutherford, N.J., Karl Malone scored 26 points and the Jazz handed the Nets their 10th straight loss. Thurl Bailey came off the bench to score 23 points. New Jersey was led by Sam Bowie's 23 points and 16 rebounds. Utah's All-Star guard John Stockton missed the game due to the flu.

SUNS 128, SONICS 124

At Seattle, Kevin Johnson scored 14 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter to lead Phoenix. The Suns led 124-116 but the Supersonics scored the next six points before Johnson hit four foul shots in the final minute to assure the victory. Jeff Hornacek added 30 points and Tom Chambers had 29. For Seattle, Derrick McKey had 26, Xavier McDaniel 23, and Dana Barros and Quintin Dailey 22 apiece.

LAKERS 121, BULLS 103

At Inglewood, Calif., James Worthy scored 30 points and Magic Johnson engineered a 16-4 burst to open the decisive third quarter as the Lakers won their fourth straight and extended their NBA-best record to 35-11. Johnson finished with 22 points and 17 assists. Chicago, which had won its previous four games with Los Angeles, was led by Michael Jordan's 32 points. The Bulls, losers of three straight, received a career-high 18 rebounds from Horace Grant.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Nearly all city school districts are counseling students on how to avoid drugs, AIDS and pregnancy, with many of the systems teaching about pregnancy in elementary grades, a survey indicated Thursday.

The Council of Urban Boards of Education, part of the National School Boards Association, conducted the survey in 52 districts including New York, Chicago, Boston, Cleveland, Miami, Pittsburgh, Washington, San Diego and San Francisco.

Of the districts, all but two had drug abuse prevention programs for students, and 32 systems had programs for staff members.

All but one district provided education on the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Thirty-eight had special policies for AIDS-infected students or employees.

Forty-three of the districts taught pregnancy prevention. Twenty-five began such instruction in elementary grades, and 15 started in secondary schools.

The findings were included in a 259-page report that also investigated such issues as dropouts, minority recruitment and early childhood education.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (FEB. 8) UPI - Black civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, visiting South Africa for the first time since 1979, said the world is waiting with ''bated breath'' for the release of jailed black leader Nelson Mandela.

''We must encourage the president of this country to seize this moment to rise above political circumstances in the name of history and conscience and the value of a new South Africa,'' Jackson said Wednesday in remarks to reporters at Johannesburg airport. The visit came just days after President Frederik de Klerk announced a program of sweeping racial reforms.

Jackson, on a 10-day tour of the country as a guest of the South African Council of Churches, planned to attend a breakfast with council leaders Thursday before joining a rally of the anti-apartheid umbrella United Democratic Front.

Calling Jackson ''a campaigner, a comrade in the struggle, a statesman in his own right,'' the Rev. Allan Boesak, an anti-apartheid leader, said it was especially exciting to welcome him in the current circumstances and urged him to help in keeping South Africa on the international agenda.

''We are living in exciting times in this country, times of great change, where we may even find ourselves on the verge of a historic breakthrough in the political situation,'' Boesak said, as he embraced Jackson and called him his brother.

Jackson, whose only other trip to South Africa was in 1979, said, ''I have come here with this invitation to observe and to share and to get a first-hand view on the ground of South Africa.''

The two-time U.S. presidential candidate called for unity among blacks and a coalition with those whites ''who care to do justice and love mercy.''

''Apartheid must go because it is a sin. It is morally wrong, and if it is morally wrong, it cannot be politically right,'' Jackson said.

''The world waits with bated breath for the day South Africa will be free and Mandela will be free,'' Jackson said. ''He seeks negotiation over confrontation ... democracy over apartheid ... a multiracial society over a racial one ... an open rather than a closed country. That is reasonable.''

Asked whether he wanted to visit Mandela in prison, Jackson said he hoped to see him free walking down the streets of Johannesburg, but added he had received no commitment from the government he would be able to see Mandela ''in his present status.''

Mandela, jailed since 1962 and convicted of acts of sabotage against the government in 1964, is being held in a suburban-style house on the grounds of the minimum-security prison in Paarl, set in the Cape wine-growing region.

De Klerk lifted a 30-year ban on the African National Congress, suspended judicial executions, lifted restrictions on more than 370 activists and eased the state of emergency in a bid to lure black leaders to the negotiating table and persuade the ANC to publicly abandon its guerrilla war tactics.

Since 1961, a year after its banning, the ANC has waged a limited guerrilla war of sporadic bombings and sabotage that climaxed in 1988 with numerous bombings in white urban areas.

Jackson would not comment on whether he had applied for official permission to see Mandela, and refused to answer repeated questions regarding statements made Tuesday by Foreign Minister Roelof ''Pik'' Botha.

Botha accused Jackson of taking both sides on the issue of economic and cultural boycotts of South Africa, and said the timing of his visit was poor, fueling speculation the government is unlikely to release Mandela while Jackson is in the country.

In talks with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in London Monday, Jackson advocated continued sanctions against South Africa despite Friday's reforms. Botha said that contradicted statements made by Jackson to the South African ambassador in Washington.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (FEB. 8) UPI - Right-wing groups have threatened Nelson Mandela's life, raising government concern for the jailed black leader's safety once he is released from prison, Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok said Thursday.

''(The) death threats are mainly centered around his release and they have been threatening to do certain things to him,'' Vlok said.

Mandela, captured in 1962 and sentenced to life imprisonment in 1964 on sabotage charges, is expected to be released soon. Government officials say he has a major role to play in helping to begin power-sharing negotiations aimed at resolving the country's racial conflict.

Vlok also asserted that there have been earlier threats on Mandela's life from within his ''own ranks,'' but the minister would not be more specific about the origin of those threats.

He said the government would be willing to provide the 71-year-old Mandela with security if he approves.

''We want him to get out of that prison and to walk the streets of our country as a free man and alive. We don't want him to come out and for there to be any problems,'' Vlok said.

When President Frederik de Klerk announced before parliament Friday that Mandela would be released soon, he said the African National Congress leader's personal safety was among the factors affecting the timing of his release.

Threats against Mandela have been made over the years but ''especially over the last year or two'' because of the black leader's role in talks about the the country's protracted racial conflict, Vlok said.

''We are concerned about that, and then of course the threats from the right,'' said Vlok. ''They don't make any secrets about that and we are concerned about that.''

(FEB. 8) UPI - A storm front dropped more snow and rain in the Pacific Northwest Thursday while dense fog and thunderstorms hit the Gulf Coast, but high pressure brought hints of spring to the nation's midsection and the South.

A Pacific frontal system moved across Washington and Oregon early Thursday bringing snow and rain to western areas and heavy snow east of the Cascades, the National Weather Service said. But forecasters said a warming air mass would keep the snow level well above major population areas.

A storm that moved in Wednesday night brought rain to Idaho, and some showers were reported in northern California, the NWS said.

Heavy fog and scattered thunderstorms dotted the Gulf Coast in Texas and Louisiana as above-normal temperatures prevailed in the Southwest. Presidio and Lajitas in Texas recorded highs Wednesday of 77 degrees as much of Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico enjoyed springlike 70-degree warmth.

The fringe of a Rocky Mountain storm system brought rain and snow showers to northern New Mexico, the NWS said.

High pressure brough fair skies and mild temperatures to the South, with the weather service reporting 48 degrees in Atlanta, 53 in Jacksonville, Fla., 46 at Charleston, S.C., 68 in Miami and 72 at Key West, Fla.

Unseasonably warm temperatures prevailed throughout the Midwest, with cloudy skies to the north in Wisconsin and clearing skies through southern Illinois and Missouri.

The weather service reported fog and drizzle through northcentral Wisconsin, at Green Bay and Wausau, where the temperatures remained above freezing at 36. Madison and Milwaukee reported cloudy skies and 40 degrees.

Cloudy skies were reported throughout Michigan, with temperatures in the upper 30s, reaching 39 degrees in Detroit. Skies were clear through Missouri, where Kansas City reported 51 degrees and St. Louis warmed up to 44.

A weak ridge of high pressure developed over New England early Thursday and patches of fog formed in northern parts of the region. Dense fog covered parts of central New Hampshire. Across the Granite State, temperatures ranged from the upper teens to low 30s.

Light fog also formed in parts of Vermont, where temperatures were in the low 20s. The rest of New England reported clear skies, with temperatures ranging from the upper 30s in eastern Massachusetts to the mid 20s in Maine.

Patchy fog roamed parts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and West Virginia, but skies were clear over Maryland. Temperatures ranged in the upper 20s through mid 30s.

MANILA, Philippines (FEB. 8) UPI - A strong earthquake shook the central Philippines Thursday, overturning a kettle of hot asphalt that scalded 22 workers at a construction site, authorities said.

The quake, measuring 6.0 on the Richter scale, struck at 3:15 p.m. and was centered in Bohol island, 350 miles southeast of Manila, the Volcanology Commission said.

The temblor rocked scaffolding at a 14-story building under construction in the central city of Cebu, spilling hot asphalt from an overturned kettle, burning 22 workers, police said. Their conditions were not immediately known.

Residents rushed out of high-rises in Cebu, the country's second-largest city, where the quake was felt for about 12 seconds, police said. Aftershocks were recorded after the main temblor, they said.

It was the strongest quake to hit the Philippines since Dec. 16, when a temblor with a magnitude of 7.3 hit an ocean trench off Surigao city in the southern island of Mindanao, killing two people.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (FEB. 8) UPI - Police fired tear gas into a crowd of some 2,000 black school children demonstrating Thursday against a boycott-breaking English cricket team touring the country, police and witnesses said.

Protest organizers accused police of beating the demonstrators and said there was ''chaos'' in the northern Johannesburg black township of Alexandra where the incident occurred.

Enforcing a ban on all protests that have no official rally permit, police stopped buses and taxis attempting to leave Alexandra for the Wanderers Cricket Stadium where the English team was to play Thursday.

The Alexandra Civic Association condemned ''the violent treatment used against people protesting peacefully,'' saying tear gas was fired and demonstrators were beaten after police blocked their departure from the township.

There was no immediate word of injuries.

Police spokesman Capt. Eugene Opperman said police stopped about 2,000 schoolchildren who had boarded buses in the township ''with the intention of going to Wanderers to protest.''

''The police confronted them and told them this activity they planned was illegal. When they disembarked from the buses, they started singing and dancing,'' he said.

Police then used tear gas after the demonstrators ignored a warning to disperse.

''This goes to show the South African police are serious in attempts to counter lawlessness and will uphold the laws of the country,'' the spokesman said.

Protests have dogged the touring English cricket team, led by former English captain Mike Gatting, since its arrival on Jan. 19 in defiance of an international boycott of sporting contacts with South Africa.

Police blocked approaches to the stadium and turned protesters away as they arrived. One small group managed to protest briefly near the stadium, chanting ''Gatting go home,'' but police ordered them to disperse and they drove away in a mini-bus.

A number of previous protests have had official permission but the Johannesburg town clerk turned down an application for Friday's protest.

BEIJING (FEB. 8) UPI - Chinese leaders, troubled by the latest stunning reforms in the Soviet Union, are expected to call a meeting of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo soon to devise a policy response, foreign diplomats said Thursday.

The official Chinese reaction remained low key, with a Foreign Ministry spokesman refusing to comment on the Soviet Communist Party's dramatic move this week to abandon its constitutional monopoly on power.

But in an editorial apparently in response, the Chinese Communist Party newspaper People's Daily warned Thursday that China would collapse without the party's leadership, saying ''only socialism can save China.''

Diplomatic analysts said the editorial was aimed at dampening any spark for renewed political unrest in China. Chinese leaders have taken a conservative and increasingly isolated political stance since last June's crackdown on the pro-democracy movement.

Despite the recent upheavals in Eastern Europe, which have concerned Chinese leaders, the analysts said China has been watching the Soviet Union more closely because the Soviet communist revolution, like that of China, was home-grown.

''This latest has made them really afraid,'' said a veteran East-bloc diplomat. ''They are worried that what has happened in the Soviet Union could cause a new challenge for them here.''

The state-run press has carried virtually nothing on this week's events in Moscow but Chinese are learning of them from an internal newspaper distributed widely to party members and from such foreign radio broadcasts as the Voice of America.

Several diplomats said there were signs the ruling Politburo would call a meeting in a few days to map a policy response. The leadership held similar meetings after earlier upheavals in Eastern Europe.

''They are going to have to find a way to defend themselves,'' a Western diplomat said.

Chinese leaders have been sharply critical in private of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for unleashing the political changes, but have publicly maintained the pragmatic improvement in relations that has continued since the two countries normalized ties last year.

In line with that, a Soviet government delegation arrived Thursday for talks on confidence-building measures on the border, including the reduction of military forces in border areas, East-bloc diplomats said.

The People's Daily editorial was ostensibly directed at the release this week of a Chinese party document issued internally last December that lauded China's ''democratic parties,'' small political groups that are virtually powerless.

But the editorial's shoring up of the Communist Party's importance to China, with reminders of the chaos the country faced before the 1949 revolution, appeared aimed at domestic reaction.

''In China, without the strong leadership of the Communist Party of China, new turmoil and wars would surely arise, the nation would be split, and the people, not to mention state construction, would suffer again,'' the People's Daily said.

The editorial sharply criticized the ''elite'' - meaning intellectuals and students - who it said ''stirred up the turmoil and counterrevolutionary rebellion in 1989,'' the official labels for last year's pro-democracy movement.

It charged the democracy activists were ''bent on depriving the Chinese Communist Party of the leading role ... and advocating the introduction of a multi-party system similar to parliamentary democracy in Western countries.

''The motive has been the dream of establishing a bourgeois republic in China,'' it added.

Since the crushing of the democracy movement last June, Chinese leaders have fought to restore the party's sharply diminished prestige, but have faced many of the same criticisms that the Soviet party has, including nepotism and corruption at the top.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (FEB. 8) UPI - The defense minister, reacting to growing protests in the country, asked the head of the Soviet command in Hungary Thursday to cancel all spring training exercises not confined to army garrisons.

The official news agency MTI said Defense Minister Ferenc Karpati summoned Soviet Col. Gen. Matvey Burlakov to brief him on military maneuvers on Hungarian territory in February, March and April.

Burlakov replied there were no major maneuvers - only driving and shooting exercises at the company level.

''Ferenc Karpati requested the Soviet commander not to hold any kind of maneuver or shooting exercise in the period between February and mid-April that would involve moving troops from their garrisons,'' MTI said, quoting Lt. Col. Laszlo Tikos of the Defense Ministry press department.

The request came amid growing protests by the political opposition against the Soviets holding military exercises during the period leading up to Hungary's first free elections March 25.

In neighboring Czechoslovakia, tens of thousands have protested at several rallies over the past few weeks demanding withdrawal of Soviet troops as soon as possible. Talks were under way Thursday in Moscow on a timetable.

Some 65,000 troops have remained stationed in Hungary since the failed 1956 uprising which was crushed by a Soviet invasion. Both sides have reached agreement that all Soviet troops will be withdrawn but a timetable has not been worked out.

The Hungarian Parliament has called for removal of all troops by the end of 1990 or early 1991 at the latest.

The opposition group Democratic Forum had protested against any Soviet military maneuvers during the election campaign. On Tuesday, the Soviet Southern Army Group had said no military maneuvers are planned during the next three months.

But later a spokesman for the command confirmed that ''several small ones, one after the other'' are scheduled between Feb. 1 and May 31.

On Wednesday, Prime Minister Miklos Nemeth said major maneuvers originally planned by the Warsaw Pact this spring was canceled following the Soviet-Hungarian negotiations on troop withdrawals.

BOSTON (FEB. 8) UPI - A fourth witness has claimed that police pressured her to implicate a black ex convict in the killing of a pregnant white lawyer, a shooting police now blame on the woman's husband, it was reported Thursday.

''They tried to put words in my mouth,'' Mary Smith, 43, a resident of the Mission Hill neighborhood where Carol Stuart was shot and killed last Oct. 23,, told The Boston Globe. ''They were trying to make me say things.''

Smith said she saw ex-convict William Bennett holding what looked like a silver gun the night of Oct. 23 in the neighborhood where the killing occurred. Smith said Bennett was wearing a black leather jacket, but that police pressured her to say he was wearing a black jogging suit.

Charles Stuart, who police now believe shot his wife and wounded himself, had told police that a black man in a jogging suit robbed and shot the couple. Charles Stuart jumped off a bridge to his death Jan. 4 as police were about to arrest him for his wife's slaying.

Three teenagers have already said police tried to coerce their testimony to implicate Bennett.

Authorities declined comment of Smith's charges because the Stuart case is still before a grand jury. Attorney General James Shannon's office is investigating allegations of police misconduct in the investigation.

Smith also told the Globe that she, her boyfriend, and her son have been assaulted several times for talking to police about Bennett.

Bennett was arraigned on a new armed robbery charge Wednesday after a victim saw him on a television report about the Stuart slaying, officials said.

Bennett, 39, pleaded innocent in Municipal Court to charges in the Sept. 5 1989, armed robbery of a yogurt shop and was ordered held on $25,000 cash bail. He has been jailed since November on $50,000 bail in the robbery of a video store Oct. 2.

Bennett, also from the Mission Hill neighborhood, was believed to be the initial suspect in the Stuart case. But police refocused on Charles Stuart when his brother, Matthew, went to them with evidence incriminating the Boston furrier.

Suffolk County District Attorney Newman Flanagan said information provided by Matthew and other Stuart siblings ''clearly exculpated'' Bennett.

BANGKOK, Thailand (FEB. 8) UPI - About 250 mutinous Cambodian soldiers, apparently fed up with the rigors of jungle fighting, seized and looted Cambodia's second largest port for two days before some surrendered and the rest fled, Thai military sources said.

The incident began Tuesday night when approximately 250 of President Heng Samrin's troops surrounded government offices at Sao Tong district and the Pak Klong port of Koh Kong province, said a military intelligence officer in Thailand's neighboring Trat province.

''There was looting, shooting and destruction of government and civilian property but there have been no reports of deaths,'' said the officer, who spoke on condition he not be identified. He said the extent of the damage was not known.

The mutiny appeared to confirm increasing reports of low morale and lack of discipline among poorly paid government troops who are fighting a three-part guerrilla coalition that includes the tough Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge.

Koh Kong, only about 10 miles from Trat by sea, is the country's second largest port after Kompong Som, and the main access route for consumer goods from Thailand.

The Thai intelligence officer said the troops were disgruntled at the contrast between their harsh lives in the jungle fighting the Khmer Rouge and the easy, highly profitable lives of traders and officials in the port town.

Provincial officials negotiated with the mutinous soldiers Wednesday, with some of them agreeing to surrender to the authorities, he said.

Some of the soldiers, however, seized fishing boats in the harbor and fled out to sea, apparently headed for Kompong Som, about 100 miles to the southeast, the officer said.

''A detachment of loyal soldiers has gone in pursuit,'' he said.

Earlier, Trat governor Pridi Tantipong confirmed there had been fighting in Koh Kong, but was unable to provide details.

The mutiny sparked a frantic exodus by foreign merchants and residents from Koh Kong, many of them fleeing to Trat. But officials said that by Thursday all had returned to Koh Kong and trade was returning to normal.

The Thai newspaper Thai Rath reported that Tanit Traivudh, a Thai member of Parliament who frequently trades with Koh Kong, was captured and held hostage by the mutineers.

A worker who answered the telephone at Tanit's house in Trat said the politician was in Cambodia, but the family had received a message that he was safe.

There have also been reports of growing dissatisfaction within the Cambodian army which has lost ground to the resistance in fighting since Vietnam announced that the last of its troops withdrew from Cambodia in September last year.

There are frequent complaints that the wealthy are able to bribe their way out of the military draft, while the sons of poor families are forced into the army.

The Khmer Rouge previously has reported larger mutinies by government soldiers, but this was the first that was observed by foreigners. It has not yet been reported by the Khmer Rouge.

The Cambodian government army is only 11 years old. It was placed in power in Phnom Penh by the Vietnamese Army that invaded Cambodia in 1978 and ousted the brutal Khmer Rouge.

DETROIT (FEB. 8) UPI - The Justice Department has filed a lawsuit in federal court charging General Dynamics Land Systems Inc. with defrauding the Army on material costs for the M-1 Abrams tank. Assistant Attorney General Stuart Gerson said the suit, filed Wednesday, sought damages under the False Claims Act.

Although the suit did not specify damages, Gerson said General Dynamics was advised prior to the filing of the suit that the government was seeking $8,558,400, an amount subject to trebling under the False Claims Act.

The suit alleged that General Dynamics failed to disclose a buyer's tape to Army negotiators for the fifth-year material costs for the M-1 tank. The tape listed by price and quantity nearly all of the parts which need to be purchased in order to produce a tank.

The suit alleged that General Dynamics told Army negotiators that the material costs would be $297,486 per tank when the company knew, from its buyer's tape, that the actual costs would be just $288,935 per tank. Company officials refused to comment.

The Army purchased 800 tanks during the course of the fifth-year production. The tanks are manufactured at the company's two facilities in Lima, Ohio and Warren, Mich.

Gerson said the case was investigated by the FBI, the Army's Criminal Investigation Division and the Defense Criminal Investigative Service. Last month, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney proposed to close the Detroit Army Tank Plant in September 1991 and shift its work to the Lima facility.

The revised figure for the previous week was 364,000 initial claims, the department's Employment and Training Administration announced.

The government also reported that during the week of Jan. 20 the rate of insured unemployment increased from 2.2 percent to 2.4 percent, with 2,480,000 workers claiming state unemployment insurance benefits, 199,000 more than the week before.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (FEB. 8) UPI - Civil rights activist Jesse Jackson urged President Frederik de Klerk Thursday to ''go all the way'' and replace four decades of apartheid rule with full democracy to prevent further turmoil in racially divided South Africa.

Jackson began his first full day in South Africa since 1979 by attending a prayer breakfast with senior South African church leaders, then prepared to tour the black satellite city of Soweto south of Johannesburg.

The two-time presidential candidate said de Klerk's reform package unveiled last Friday was ''marvelous'' but pointed out that black nationalist Nelson Mandela is still in prison and a 43-month-old state of emergency is still partially in place.

''He offered hope to those who have been disenfranchised, hope by unbanning various organizations, hope by repealing restrictions on the press, hope in the release of political prisoners even it it affects only 5 percent, and hope for the release of Nelson Mandela,'' Jackson said.

But he urged de Klerk, whose National Party has ruled the country since 1948, ''to seize this great moment in history and go all the way'' by abolishing the country's racist laws and implementing multi-racial democracy to bring the country out of international isolation.

''South Africa cannot go backwards,'' Jackson said. ''It will find chaos. It cannot stand still, it will find tension. It must go forward to a final peaceful and just solution.''

Jackson is on a 1O-day tour of South Africa as a guest of the South African Council of Churches. On his arrival Wednesday, anti-apartheid cleric Allan Boesak hailed the American as ''a campaigner, a comrade in the struggle in his own right.''

''We are living in exciting times in this country, times of great change, wehere we may even find ourselves on the verge of a historic breakthrough in the political situation,'' said Boesak, who embraced Jackson and called him his brother.

Jackson, whose only other trip to South Africa was in 1979, said the world is waiting with ''bated breath'' for Mandela's release.

Asked whether he wanted to visit Mandela in prison, Jackson said he hoped to see him free walking down the streets of Johannesburg, but added he had received no commitment from the government he would be able to see Mandela ''in his present status.''

Mandela, jailed since 1962 and convicted of acts of sabotage against the government in 1964, is being held in a suburban-style house on the grounds of the minimum-security prison in Paarl, set in the Cape wine-growing region.

De Klerk lifted a 30-year ban on the African National Congress, suspended judicial executions, lifted restrictions on more than 370 activists and eased the state of emergency in a bid to lure black leaders to the negotiating table and persuade the ANC to publicly abandon its guerrilla war tactics.

Since 1961, a year after its banning, the ANC has waged a limited guerrilla war of sporadic bombings and sabotage that climaxed in 1988 with numerous bombings in white urban areas.

Jackson would not comment on whether he had applied for official permission to see Mandela, and refused to answer repeated questions regarding statements made Tuesday by Foreign Minister Roelof ''Pik'' Botha.

Botha accused Jackson of taking both sides on the issue of economic and cultural boycotts of South Africa, and said the timing of his visit was poor, fueling speculation the government is unlikely to release Mandela while Jackson is in the country.

TOKYO (FEB. 8) UPI - Japan's top nonferrous smelter Mitsubishi Metal Corp. Thursday denied as "absolutely untrue" news reports that the company was involved in plans to purchase Brazil's external debt in exchange for gold mining rights in the Amazon.

"The report was absolutely untrue and we are deeply concerned that media attention is being given to this preposterous claim," Mitsubishi Metal President Takeshi Nagano said in a statement.

"Mitsubishi Metal categorically denies that it has discussed the idea of a debt swap with officials of any government," Nagano said. "In all our operations, including Brazil, it has been our policy to pursue only those ventures that have the full understanding and support of government."

The Brazilian news reports were also published in a leading Japanese economic newspaper. The Amazon region is known to be rich in mineral resources, including gold.

Mitsubishi said it had dropped plans to participate in a gold extraction project in the Amazon region as a result of a feasibility study conducted last year.

It said the study was made by a four-member team sent to the Amazon at the request from Brazilian company Rio Amazones Representative Ltd. to assess the feasibility of recovering gold from mine waste.

Akio Miyake, president of Rio Amazones Representative, later sounded out Mitsubishi Metal on the possibility of purchasing gold if it was produced by the Sera Pelada mine, the company said. Mitsubishi indicated that it would consider purchases as part of its normal operations as a refiner, the company said.

A six-member team from Mitsubishi's subsidiary Bishimetal Exploration Co., which was commissioned by Rio Amazones, conducted an on-site evaluation of the Serra Pelada mine between late November and mid-Juanuary. The outcome of the survey was still being analyzed and evaluated, the company said.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (FEB. 8) UPI - Moslem separatists with automatic weapons Thursday killed two paramilitary police officers as they made purchases in a small store, police said.

The attack came as most businesses and shops closed across the city in a strike over the deaths of two bystanders in a gun battle Wednesday in the Lal Chowk area between security forces and militants in a popular uprising for independence of predominantly Moslem Kashmir.

Authorities maintained an open-ended curfew that was imposed on Lal Chowk after the shootout.

Little traffic and few pedestrians moved on streets that remained heavily guarded by troops and paramilitary and local police.

In Jammu, the summer capital of the state, thousands of workers joined students to protest Monday's border crossing by Pakistani supporters of Moslem separatists in Kashmir.

The workers, representing a broad range of occupations, shouted anti-Pakistan slogans and denounced that country's ''interference in the affairs of India.''

More than 100 Pakistanis crossed the border Monday but were repelled by armed security police.

In Thursday's shooting, two members of the Border Security Force, one of two central government paramilitary police contingents being used to keep the independence drive in check, were shot dead while making purchases at a small store that opened despite the strike.

Police said that three Moslem militants toting Chinese-made assault rifles raked the pair with gunfire as they stood in the shop in the Chanapora area of Srinagar, the summer capital of northern Jammu and Kashmir state, 400 miles north of New Delhi.

The shopkeeper was wounded and taken to a hospital for treatment, police said. The assailants escaped.

Meanwhile, Saudi Arabia on Thursday appealed to India not to excarcabate the situation in Jammu and Kashmir and urged the New Delhi government to find a peaceful solution to the problem in accordance with the U.N. charter.

The appeal came in a statement issued by the Saudi Foreign Ministry that was broadcast over state-run Riyadh Radio.

''We appeal to the friendly republic of India to work toward a peaceful settlement of the conflict within the framework of the United Nations resolution and in accordance with the principles contained in the U.N. charter,'' the statement said.

Violence has persisted almost daily in Srinagar and other towns of the Kashmir Valley during the past three weeks despite the government's efforts to crush the pro-secession movement with tens of thousands of troops and other security forces.

Militants have bombed banks and government buildings and well-armed separatist snipers have fought with security personnel.

About 100 people - most shot by security forces - have died since the pro-secession violence erupted Jan. 20, according to some sources. The government officially puts the number of dead in the 30s.

The militants enjoy the support of virtually all of the region's 3 million Moslems, who believe their collective interests have been consistently ignored by the Hindu-dominated New Delhi government.

The separatists have also received verbal support from neighboring Moslem Pakistan, angering Indian officials and sending relations between the two long-time adversaries to their lowest point since a 1971 war.

India alleges that Pakistan has been training and arming the militants, a charge denied by Islamabad.

The two countries dispute each other's claims to Kashmir and have battled for the region during the three wars they have fought since 1948. India controls two-thirds of the rugged Himalayan region.

(FEB. 8) UPI - Prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange were mixed in moderate trading Thursday, with no clear incentive to drive the market.

The Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which tumbled 364.96 points Wednesday, recovered 214.37 points to close at 37,516.24. The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange index of all listed major stocks shed 5.21 points to close at 2,745.15.

An estimated 400 million shares were traded, compared with 470.32 million shares Wednesday. Losers outpaced winners 544 to 363, while 214 issues were unchanged.

Brokers said investors, discouraged by the weak bond market, concentrated on profit taking and most institutional investors retreated from the trading floor in the absence of strong incentives.

Most of the Nikkei's gains came from late selective buying and arbitrage trading in futures, brokers said. Gainers included machinery issues, foods and some textiles. Trading houses and some issues in the pharmaceutical sector also were higher. Steels were sold, along with some distribution issues and nonferrous metals.

Elsewhere in Asia, stocks closed sharply higher across the board for the fourth consecutive day on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange as both foreign and local institutional investors moved into the market.

The Hang Seng Index gained 58.88 points to close at 2,903.77, retreating from a high for the day of 2,908 due to profit taking in the last half-hour of trading. Volume was a high 1.98 billion shares, up from Wednesday's 1.1 billion.

Brokers said the upward trend was kicked off by overseas buyers who took an active part in the market. "The big investors have been waiting for the upward trend to establish itself," said Simon Chin, a research analyst at Citicorp Scrimgeour Vickers.

Brokers also said confidence regarding China has been improving gradually over the last few weeks as officials in Beijing reiterated the country's commitment to its open-door policy.

Gains were recorded aross the board, with property investment and commercial stocks getting most attention. The property sector rose 100.48 points, commercial and industrials were also up 65.09, utilities up 39.51 and the financial sector finished higher by 46.13 points.

Stocks closed mixed in active trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange, reflecting strong profit taking.

The Straits Times Industrial Index rose 4.12 points to close at 1,588.78. The narrower All Singapore Index shed 0.58 point to close at 440.17. Volume was about 214.1 million shares, compared with 203 million shares Wednesday.

"Bulls and bears are working equally strong in the market," an analyst said, predicting that the market would consolidate before moving into another rally.

On the trading floor, gainers included Wearne Brothers, Metro Holdings, Parkway TSR, Overseas Chinese Banking Corp., Hong Leong Credit, Parkway Holdings, and Straits Trading.

Among the losers were Overseas Chinese Banking Corp. (Foreign), Singapore Land, United Overseas Bank (Foreign), and Development Bank of Singapore.

In Australia, a late announcement that the Reserve Bank was further cutting interest rates failed to revive a lackluster trading session on the Sydney Sharemarket.

The All Ordinaries index rose a small 2.8 points to 1648.4. The index had lost 22.9 points Wednesday. Volume was 117.3 million, compared with 117 million shares Wednesday.

The decision to cut interest rates came as no surprise to brokers who said that the government's change in monetary policy was of little help to a dull corporate sector.

The market had been driven down Wednesday by the liquidation of Westmex, an investment firm.

Traders now were focusing on another possible business failure currently looming at Adelaide Steam, saddled with a $6 billion debt. Adsteam stock continued to fall Thursday, after losing 20 percent of its value in the past two weeks.

Other blue-chip stocks, including News Corp., were down, and banks were negatively affected by the rate cut, with both ANZ and Westpac among the losers.

The gold index also fell and was down 12.5 points to 1936, reflecting a softening international bullion market.

LIMA, PERU (FEB. 8) UPI - The resignation of the interior minister following the wounding of a presidential candidate by police has further agitated the already heated political climate two months before general elections.

Agustin Mantilla, the nation's top law enforcement officer, resigned Wednesday night just hours after the wounding of leftist presidential candidate Henry Pease.

Pease, candidate of the United Left coalition, was slightly wounded by police buckshot Wednesday during a campaign march in Lima.

Pease was marching with United Left congressional candidates and supporters in central Lima about 500 feet from the presidential palace when police fired tear gas, water cannons and buckshot to break up the rally.

Also wounded were three United Left congressional candidates, a member of Pease's security squad and a newspaper photographer.

The resignation left President Alan Garcia the task of appointing a new law and order chief to lead the nation's security effort in the two months before the April 8 election.

Guerrilla groups operating in Peru, including the powerful Shining Path, are expected to try to disrupt the election. Peru also has severe economic problems.

In his letter of resignation, Mantilla said the police action ''has no justification whatever.''

Mantilla said the leader of the police division involved in the incident had been fired and retirement was recommended for the officer whose unit acted against the marchers.

LONDON (FEB. 8) UPI - Stock prices were sharply higher at midday Thursday on the London International Stock Exchange, reflecting strong activity by major market movers.

The Financial Times 100-stock index rose 17.4 points to 2,324.8, compared with 2,311 points during the same trading period Wednesday. The FT-100 briefly rose to 2,326.1 points, its high in early trading.

The narrower top 30 industrial average was up 15.3 points to 1,841.5 points. Volume was about 236.3 million shares, up from 193.5 million shares at midday Wednesday.

Analysts said better-than-expected earnings reports from British Telecom and BOC helped drive the market upward. Traders also were reassured by better-than-expected results of Wednesday's refunding auction of ten-year notes and bonds by the U.S. Treasury, brokers said.

Concern remained, however, over the last round of refunding in which the U.S. Treasury is auctioning off 30-year bonds later Thursday, they said.

British Telecom, which reported an 11.6 percent increase in pre-tax third-quarter earnings, was up 12 cents to $5.18. BOC also reported an increase in earnings, up 6.5 percent in the quarter ended Dec. 31. BOC stock was up 15 cents to $9.09.

British Petroleum shed three cents to $5.76, reflecting concern over an oilspill off the coast of California by a tanker belonging to the giant oil company.

Insurance stocks recovered some of their losses earlier in the week, resulting from a storm over Britain. General Accident was up 23 cents to $19.60, Sun Alliance up seven cents to $5.32 and Royal Insurance up 14 cents to $8.63.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (FEB. 8) UPI - Investments totaling $530 billion will have to be pumped into East Germany over the next five years if the country is to achieve the same economic standards as West Germany, a weekly magazine said Thursday.

Quoting from an economic study, the West German magazine Stern said about 4,000 companies would be needed to participate actively in the economic rehabilitation exercise.

Quoting from an investment study it commissioned from a senior company consultant in Duesseldorf, Stern said that investments totaling $309 billion will be needed in the industrial sector alone. It said a total of more than $530 billion would have to invested in the East German economy, to bring it up to West German standards.

West German Economics Minister Helmut Haussmann said Wednesday he was confident that, "a German-German economic miracle, in both German states or in a unified state, is possible."

Stern said the consultant, Axel Boje, shared widespread optimism that in spite of East Germany's current economic crisis, the money would be well invested. Boje warned that "If we keep on hesitating, the Japanese will be there before us."

The Deutsche Bank said in a report that the East German infrastructure, although outdated, was still functioning much better than that of the other Eastern European countries.

The Bundesbank, the West German central bank, expressed similar optimism about eventual returns on investments and said that "on the whole, East Germany is potentially by far the most attractive country of all Eastern European countries for West Germans to invest in." Another banking expert said he believed, "the unification of Germany will open up an enormous growth potential.

On Wednesday, the West German government offered to start immediate negotiations with East Germany on a monetary union between the two countries, largely seen as a step toward reunification.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said he wanted to act as fast as possible in a bid to restore confidence in the East German economy and to help stem a daily migration of about 2,000 East Germans to West Germany.

The Deutsche Bank report said East Germany needed quick economic successes to slow down the exodus, which otherwise "will have fatal consequences for the East German economy."

In the negotiations on a monetary union, the West German government is expected to suggest adoption of the West German mark by East Germany but insist that East Germany adopt West Germany's economic system and legislation and hand over monetary control to the Bundesbank.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The American apparel industry, which proudly sews ''Made in the U.S.A.'' labels on its products, has been hurt by U.S. government policies that favor foreign competitors, a study said Thursday.

The study, prepared by the Economic Policy Institute, concluded that the federal government has ''given away'' large portions of the U.S. apparel industry in pursuit of military or diplomatic goals.

''Having lost half of its domestic market, the U.S. apparel industry is now teetering between survival and extinction,'' the study said. ''It would not take much to push many of the remaining firms out of domestic production.''

With 1.6 million production workers, the U.S. textile and apparel industries employ more Americans than any other industry, including steel, automobiles and chemical refining combined.

The study said the setbacks suffered by the nation's apparel industry in recent years have been a result of government policies that treat clothing makers as a ''sunset industry,'' or one that has fallen into a tailspin and can no longer compete with low-cost foreign labor.

Many of the competitive advantages enjoyed by foreign clothing makers result from subsidies and industrial policies carried out by national governments and international agencies to shift apparel manufacturing away from industrial nations and toward developing countries, the study said.

Much of this assistance, the study found, comes from the government of the United States.

For example, the study found that an apparel manufacturer can get more U.S. government assistance in the form of engineering help, training programs and marketing aid for manufacturing in the Caribbean than for manufacturing in Los Angeles or North Carolina.

Richard Rothstein, the report's author, said the federal government has been ''reluctant to enforce'' agreements to control the growth of apparel imports from developing nations.

Rothstein also said the demands by the U.S. government and international banks that debtor nations repay their loans have led to depressed wages in these developing countries. This, in turn, results in lower cost goods, which are exported to the United States.

The study calls for the federal government to improve its enforcement of import growth restraints and to provide to domestic apparel manufacturers the same assistance granted to foreign competitors.

''With effective enforcement of exiting controls to restrict the growth rate of imports and with the addition of some important but internationally acceptable public policies to promopte the apparel industry's domestic viability, U.S apparel manufacturing could provide significant value and domestic employment for the foreseeable future,'' Rothstein said.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Two of the classiest names in retailing, Marshall Field and Sak's Fifth Avenue, were placed on the auction block Thursday by B.A.T. Industries PLC, which is fighting a hostile takeover and hopes to fetch $1 billion each for the chains.

Chicago-based Marshall Field and New York-based Sak's are the latest in a long line of department stores that have been put up for sale in recent months in the midst of a retail-industry ruckus.

B.A.T., the London-based conglomerate that is trying to fend off the unwanted advances of corporate raider Sir James Goldsmith, is seeking an amount for the two retailers that is roughly equal to their annual sales, analysts said.

Whether the chains will attract bids with such values is a matter of some debate since "B.A.T. is trying to sell assets at a time when there are a lot of assets on the block," said Barbara Wedelstaedt of Duff & Phelps Inc. in Chicago.

"They may have to take a haircut in this type of selling environment," she said, adding that Sak's may end up going for as little as $800 million and Marshall Field for $700 million.

Indeed, Sak's, with 46 stores, and Marshall Field, with 24 outlets, have plenty of company on the auction block. Bloomingdale's, the flagship franchise of Campeau Corp.'s troubled U.S. retail operations, has been up for sale since September when Campeau disclosed cash-flow troubles that eventually led to a Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing last month for its ten department store chains.

Last week the company said it may not sell Bloomingdale's after all. Bidders, analysts said, have failed to line up in the $1 billion price range that Campeau was seeking.

Furthermore, analysts said the bankruptcy filing has left potential investors sizing up other Campeau retail properties, which include Burdine's, Jordan Marsh, Stern's, Maas Brothers, Rich's, The Bon Marche, Lazarus, Goldsmith's, and Abraham & Straus.

Also sporting a for-sale sign is Bonwit Teller, owned by Australia's L.J. Hooker Corp., which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection for its U.S. retail operations last year and subsequently liquidated B. Altman & Co. after failing to find a buyer for it.

B.A.T. acquired Marshall Field, which operates in Illinois, Ohio, and Texas, in 1982. Sak's, which has a nationwide franchise, was purchased by B.A.T. in 1973.

WARSAW, POLAND (FEB. 8) UPI - Poland's industrial output plummeted nearly 21 percent in January compared with a year ago and inflation was far above the 45 percent target, government figures showed Thursday.

The figures indicated the Solidarity government's tough austerity program is taking hold but a government expert said it was premature to predict a recession.

Industrial output dropped by 20.9 percent compared with January 1989 and dropped more than 10 percent from a month ago, the Main Statistical Office said in a report published in Thursday's newspapers.

The Solidarity government introduced a stabilization plan in January to overhaul the ailing economy with emphasis on curbing an inflation rate estimated at 650 percent last year.

The plan envisaged a mild recession with a 5 percent drop in output for the whole of 1990.

Food processing and light industries suffered much more significant decreases. Food processing plunged 40 percent from last January and 16.3 percent from last month. Light industrial output dropped 30 percent and 10.8 percent respectively.

''There is some recession which the government did forecast, but there is no sense of panic,'' said Andrzej Krajewski, an advisor in the Finance Ministry. ''Assessing a (stabilization) program of such a dimension after one month would be premature.''

The government newspaper Rzeczpospolita, commenting on the figures, said the drop in production of goods supplying the consumer markets was ''very worrisome,'' but pointed out January 1989 was an extraordinarily productive month, which may have made the latest figures appear worse.

''Despite the bad indicators, it seems, we shouldnt panic,'' the paper said.

Exports dropped 16 percent and imports by 12 percent compared with last January.

Prices rose 60 percent overall, compared with the government plan of 45 percent.

Salaries in five essential sectors of the economy rose only by 1.3 percent or $65, against December. Adjusted for hikes of consumer goods, that meant a drop of 40 percent in real wages, twice more than what the government had planned, Rzeczpospolita estimated.

Some 56,000 people were unemployed, but many plants stopped or slowed production and put their employees on unpaid leave due to declining demand caused by higher prices. Among those affected were employees at shoemaking textile and fertilizer plants.

But many previously coveted goods like appliances, cars or tractors are now readily available.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told Congress Thursday President Bush's gamble of diplomacy with China is starting to pay off, but he ran into a volley of criticism over his secret missions to the leaders who ordered the massacre at Tiananmen Square.

''The president has isolated himself from Congress,'' Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., told Eagleburger at a House Foreign Affairs Committee hearing. ''His policy has no credibility.''

Eagleburger defended Bush's decision to send him and Gen. Brent Scowcroft, the president's national security affairs adviser, on two secret missions to Beijing to condemn the crushing of the pro-democracy movement last June and to press for political moderation and human rights reforms - conditions he said are necessary for Sino-American relations to be productive.

''Overall, I hope it can be said that the steep decline in U.S.-China relations has been arrested, and that there is movement in a positive direction,'' Eagleburger said.

''The administration knows that not enough has been done. We never expected to reverse events overnight.''

Republicans and Democrats were skeptical.

''We do not have to send our top people to China to apologize for these (China's) horrendous policies,'' Gejdenson said.

''This is one of the most misbegotten missions in American diplomacy,'' said Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y.

''The high moral ground of human rights has been seriously undermined,'' Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., said.

Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla., ranking Republican William Broomfield of Michigan, and Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, criticized the Beijing leadership but said Washington cannot abandon its strategic interests in China.

''We cannot write off a billion people because of our horror over its human rights' record,'' Fascell said.

Broomfield said Bush was prudent to send Eagleburger and Scowcroft to Beijing to maintain high-level communications and to press for human rights.

''This wasn't appeasement, damn it, it was statesmanship,'' Broomfield said.

Leach said China's government ''may be oppressive, lack democratic legitimacy, but it cannot be ignored. What is at issue is not indignation, but a question of judgment.''

Eagleburger, who testified Wednesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the opening to China is paying off through the lifting of martial law and Beijing's pledge not to sell ballistic missiles to countries in the Middle East.

The visit came less than a month after the June 3-4 army crackdown of pro-democracy demonstrators in Tiananmen Square that Beijing said resulted in hundreds of deaths. Independent observers put the death toll in the thousands. The massacre caused revulsion in Washington and prompted Bush to order political and economic sanctions against China.

But Bush said he did not want to isolate the world's most populous nation or set back the reform movement backed by many officials in the Chinese government. He sent Scowcroft and Eagleburger to Beijing to spell out the American position.

''In the president's judgment, it was important to tell the Chinese leadership how serious we took the events at Tiananmen Square, that the relationship was not going anywhere if the situation remained status quo '' Eagleburger told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday.

''I happen to believe it makes sense for us to go there and tell them that. I do not believe that was a gesture.''

The July visit was ordered ''to convey an undiluted message from the president to the Chinese leadership about America's horror over Tiananmen '' he said.

But the Chinese released videotape and pictures of Scowcroft toasting the Chinese leaders during the second secret visit, exposing the mission.

Critics such as Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said Bush's emissaries and his policy amounted to ''kowtowing'' to Beijing by seeking strategic advantages at the cost of human rights.

In the toast, Scowcroft warned of forces trying to divide China and the United States, but also called for respect for human rights in Beijing.

''All the talk of clinking glasses, surprise announcements, and warm toasts misses the point,'' Eagleburger said.

''The Chinese leadership needed to know how they could improve their relations with the United States, and we told them. I do not believe it is proper to accuse us of 'kowtowing.'''

Eagleburger said the United States has vital global political and economic interests with China, and that it would have no leverage on human rights and other reforms there if it has no real communications with Beijing.

''In our view, we need to keep faith with the people and the institutitons of China that can move the society toward reform. We seek to soften the blow to the Chinese people brought about by the crisis in China.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said Thursday he opposes a bill to cut the Social Security payroll tax by an estimated $55 billion during the next two years.

''I frankly think that that kind of an increase in the deficit without a replacement of revenue lost would push interest rates up in this country, and would encourage a slide in the dollar and I think we'd have serious problems with it,'' said Bentsen.

Bentsen's opposition as head of the committee will make it much harder for Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., to pass his proposal to cut the Social Security payroll tax.

The Senate Finance Committee held a second day of hearings on the bill on Thursday.

The Bush administration opposes the tax cut, but supports its own plan to use the $65 billion Social Security surplus as a way to offset the estimated $130 billion federal budget deficit until fiscal year 1993.

That is when the budget is supposed to be balanced under the Gramm-Rudman law. After that, the administration wants to use the tax to help reduce the national debt.

Administration budget director Richard Darman, testifying before the Finance Committee, said passage of Moynihan's plan ''risks creating fiscal policy havoc'' by either requiring a combination of spending cuts or tax increases to offset the cost of the bill.

''Accordingly, we must respectfully reject the recent proposal of Senator Moynihan,'' said Darman. ''We do not mean to suggest that there is not a problem to be dealt with, we mean only to suggest that Senator Moynihan's latest proposal seems to give up on the problem (of what to do about the Social Security surplus) just when the political system is preparing to deal with it.''

Moynihan's bill would roll back the Social Security tax increase that went into effect Jan. 1, cutting the rate from 6.2 percent to 6.06 percent. It would cut the tax to 5.1 percent next Jan. 1, establishing a pay-as-you-go system for future retirees and eating away at the surplus.

Congress and the administration has used the surplus to mask the size of the true federal deficit, a practice prompting both Democrats and Republicans to propose legislation prohibiting use of the surplus.

Bentsen has stressed his concern for the loss of revenue associated with the Moynihan proposal, but noted he was speaking for himself and not for other Democratic leaders.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell, of Maine, revealed no opinion. ''I haven't made a decision. We are reviewing the matter.''

A Democratic task force headed by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., is studying the Moynihan proposal and could release its findings next week.

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA (FEB. 8) UPI - Members of Romania's main political parties met Thursday to decide their candidates for a council that will govern the nation until May 20 general elections, participants said.

The first gathering of the National Unity Council is to take place Friday, when its 180 members are scheduled to elect a Cabinet. The body was created after widespread demonstrations calling for the resignation of the National Salvation Front provisional government, which seized power during the bloody December overthrow of dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

Members of the 30 parties that will participate in the council said sessions were under way throughout the Romanian capital to decide which candidates to pick. The National Salvation Front has been apportioned 90 places in the council with the remaining 90 divided between its political rivals.

Radu Campeanu, spokesman for the main opposition National Liberal Party, said his party supported privatization of the nation's industries, currently state-owned concerns.

It was the first announcement of a platform position by an opposition party since the National Salvation Front unveiled its manifesto for the May polls Tuesday. The front hopes to win with sweeping reforms to create a market-based economy.

Opposition groups had opposed the monopoly hold of the front because many of its members were in the former communist government. They believed its controlling position gave it an unfair advantage for the elections. The instability threatened to erupt into civil war, but was defused when the front agreed to the caretaker council.

TOKYO (FEB. 8) UPI - Mitsubishi Motors Corp. said Thursday it will build a new vehicle proving ground with cold climate testing facilities on Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido.

The Tokyo-based company said the $13.8 million project calls for construction of a six-mile high-speed circuit, cold climate test course, cross country course and other facilities.

Construction will start in early 1992 in the town of Otofuke in southern Hokkaido, the company said. The new facility will be the company's third major testing ground. The existing facilities are all located on the main island of Honshu.

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN (FEB. 8) UPI - Sweden's Social Democratic minority government Thursday announced a sweeping austerity package that the opposition dubbed the declaration of an economic state of emergency.

In a proposal put before Parliament Thursday, Finance Minister Kjell-Olof Feldt called for a two-year freeze on wages, prices and municipal taxes, mandatory arbitration and a ban on strikes.

Wildcat strikers would be forced to pay the equivalent of $800 in fines, and companies will pay allowances during the first two weeks of employee illness in a measure designed to save the state $1.5 billion.

''The government is in panic and is pulling the emergency brake. They should get off the train instead. Resign,'' said Ingemar Eliasson, spokesman for the Liberal Party.

''These proposals are like the declaration of a state of emergency,'' said Margo Ingvardsson of the Communists VPK.

Conservative Party spokesman Lars Tobisson described the package as ''the old form of East Bloc politics.''

''While those of the East Bloc are taking off the socialist straitjacket and introducing market economies, the Swedish government is going the other way,'' Tobisson said.

''If parliament turns down any of the suggestions, the government will resign,'' Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson said Thursday in an attempt to push the measures through a reluctant house.

''The Social Democrats won't administer a deteriorating economy. We will not accept our suggestions being felled in Parliament,'' said Carlsson.

''We're rushing at full speed into a cost crisis and we suggest the package is introduced immediately,'' Feldt told Parliament Thursday.

''It is tough medicine and a deviation from the Swedish model of free wage negotiations, but it is necessary,'' he added.

''It is impossible to have wage increases of 10 to 20 percent when production only increases by 1 percent. If the merry-go-round continues, the wage market will end up in anarchy.,'' Feldt said, adding that Sweden's situation was comparable to that of Britain's ''Winter of Discontent'' in 1979.

''Then wildcat strikes and a chaotic labor market caused a reaction and gave the power to the conservatives,'' Feldt said.

Feldt said he wanted a parliamentary vote on the package Feb. 13, but the government is forced to win support for the package piecemeal among the five opposition parties who criticized the bill Thursday.

Sweden is fighting one of Europe's highest inflation rates at 6.7 percent while several unions have demanded major wage increases. Inflation for 1990 is forecast at up to 9 percent and latest figures from Sweden's Department of statistics show industrial wages rose 10.5 percent last year.

The austerity proposal came Thursday as bank employees entered the 11th day of an all-out strike and lockout with demands for a 20 percent raise. Sweden's Municipal Employees Union, which counts more than 110,000 members has called a strike next week.

But if Feldt's strike ban proposal is passed the municipal strike, which will cripple local administration, will be stopped after only one day.

Swedish governments have pegged prices nine times in the last 15 years in attempts to hold down inflation.

The last time a prize freeze was used was in 1987 and economists have blamed 6.3 percent inflation in 1988, the third highest in Europe, on that freeze.

Sweden's central labor union organization reluctantly backed the government plan Thursday.

''It is a failure for the labor market, but something has to be done. If nothing is done, we will experience violent inflation which will hit the under-paid hardest,'' said union President Stig Malm.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (FEB. 8) UPI - NATO's top official said Thursday German reunification and NATO's continued existence are ''perfectly compatible'' but warned Soviet security concerns must be addressed by the Western allies.

''The Soviet Union can be sure that we take their ideas seriously, and more, we will respect their legitimate security interests,'' said NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner.

''Special arrangements could be devised to take account of Soviet security interests with a united Germany as a member of the Atlantic Alliance,'' he said in remarks prepared for a Thursday night speech in Hamburg.

That arrangement, he said, could include ''a special military status for the territory of the German Democratic Republic (East Germany) or perhaps an agreement not to extend military integration to that territory.''

East and West Germany, separated since the end of World War II, are moving toward a reunification but some East German officials have questioned whether the new German state should belong to either NATO or the Warsaw Pact.

East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow last week proposed a neutral Germany with its capital in Berlin, an idea quickly rejected by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

''A drifting, neutral Germany cannot be a solution, given the country's geostrategic position and its political, economic and military potential '' said Woerner, who was West German defense minister before becoming NATO chief. ''It would not even be in the enlightened self-interest of the Soviets. The history of the last two centuries demonstrates this.''

This week, the West German Cabinet agreed to begin talks with East Germany toward a unified currency to help prop up East Germany's collapsing economy.

''German unity will come,'' Woerner said in the speech to a foreign-affairs group in Hamburg. ''What politicians and diplomats can do is recognize these facts and develop a framework so that the process is smooth and harmonious.

''German unity and membership of the Atlantic Alliance are perfectly compatible within a security architecture which would preserve European stability in the interest of the Soviet Union as well as of other states '' he said.

''The members of the Alliance must, as a matter of urgency, incorporate such considerations into a common concept for progress toward German unity '' he said.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (FEB. 8) UPI - Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens arrived in Prague Thursday to re-establish diplomatic relations with Czechoslovakia after 22 years.

The resumption of relations will take place at a ceremony Friday.

The official news agency CTK said that after World War II Czechoslovakia favored the existence of Israel as an independant state and immediately recognized it following its formation in 1948.

Czechoslovak-Israeli ties cooled when the communist leadership put on trial and executed several people in the 1950s for alleged links with ''Zionist anti-state centers'' and fabricated evidence showing they were involved in a plot to overthrow communism rule.

After Israel's victorious war against Arab nations in 1967, Czechoslovakia joined all East Bloc countries but Romania in severing diplomatic ties with Israel.

Hungary resumed full diplomatic relations with Israel last fall.

The Czechoslovak revolution in November that ended one-party rule gave new impetus to re-establishing bilateral relations.

Noncommunist President Vaclav Havel and Foreign Minister Jiri Dienstbier advocated quick resumption of the relations.

The first concrete result of the improved climate was an agreement signed in January between Czechoslovak Airlines and the Israeli airline El Al on the opening of a Prague-Tel Aviv route in June.

Later this month, Israel will re-establish diplomatic ties with Poland, and talks are under way with Bulgaria and East Germany to do the same.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Robert McGlotten, the AFL-CIO's top legislative strategist, said Thursday labor will push a progressive agenda in the new session of Congress, ranging from child care and family leave to civil rights reform and pension protection.

McGlotten refused to list priorities, saying Congress will set the agenda and labor will address it on a day-to-day basis.

He also said the AFL-CIO will continue to oppose proposals to lower the capital gains tax rate.

The government taxes capital gains at the same rate as regular income, but proponents of a cut, including President Bush, want those benefiting from capital gains to pay tax at a rate less than regular income.

''People feel very strongly about capital gains,'' said McGlotten. ''The question is whether or not those who are against capital gains make those who are for it give something for it.''

McGlotten said labor would look at various proposals for what that ''something'' might be, including modifications of a proposal by Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., to reduce the Social Security payroll tax.

''It is not on our agenda,'' McGlotten said, noting the federation supports the Moynihan concept, but, like many others, is concerned about the loss of revenue resulting from a cut in the payroll tax.

McGlotten also said the labor movement will push for an override of Bush's veto of legislation last November to form a panel to investigate the strike by union workers at Eastern Airlines last year.

''It is going to be awfully hard,'' he said of the veto override attempt. He said that while the override forces have picked up some 15 votes in the House since Bush's veto, ''we still need another 20 to be there.''

He said the vote won't come until after Congress takes its spring recess. ''And the question is whether there will still be an Eastern then.''

McGlotten also said the federation remains ''very cautious'' about the so-called ''peace dividend,'' resulting from political change and an easing of tensions in Eastern Europe.

The labor climate under Bush is ''day-to-day,'' said McGlotten.

''With George Bush you have to look every day,'' he said. ''Its easier to talk to them but everyday you have to look again. With Bush you're not sure what weapons to bring to the table - a howitzer, an AK-47, a baseball bat or no weapon at all.''

ANKARA, TURKEY (FEB. 8) UPI - An explosion and fire ripped through a coal mine in northeastern Turkey killing at least eight people and leaving another 68 trapped and presumed dead, authorities said Thursday.

Wednesday's explosion at the Yenicelter coal mine 210 miles northeast of Ankara caused a shaft to cave in where the miners were working.

Officials said rescue operations began almost immediately and eight bodies were recovered. Some 68 miners still trapped underground were believed dead because of a fire that swept through the mine following the blast.

Rescue operations had to be halted because of the fire, Minister of State Mehmet Yazar told reporters. ''There is almost no hope left to save those trapped inside,'' he said.

Kemalettin Cakir, a director of the Yenicelter mine, told the semi-official Anatolian News Agency the trapped miners were probably dead from suffocation or burns.

Two miners working at a higher level at the time of the blast were saved, officials said.

The explosion occurred after a gas pressure buildup in the mine was reported, but the miners were sent in when the pressure dropped, sources at the mine told reporters.

The miners expressed fears about the deadly gas buildup before they were sent in, and mine officials may be chargred with negligence, the sources said.

Most of Turkey's annual production of 4 million tons of bituminous coal comes from the area where the Yenicelter mine is located.

A total of 72 people were killed in two earlier explosions in the Yenicelter mine in 1965 and 1967. The mine was opened in 1955 and currently produces about500 tons of coal a day.

MANAMA, BAHRAIN (FEB. 8) UPI - John Kelly, U.S. assistant secretary of state for Middle East affairs, arrived in the island state of Bahrain Thursday from Qatar, on the fifth leg of his seven-nation Persian Gulf tour, officials said.

The tour comes as the United States reportedly is drawing up new plans to defend vital oil routes through the Gulf in light of a reduced Soviet threat and continuing calm on the Iran-Iraq war front.

Kelly began his tour in Saudi Arabia on Saturday, then flew to the United Arab Emirates, Oman, Qatar and finally Bahrain.

Gulf Arab reaction to the apparent switch in U.S. defense policy was not immediately clear. But one Gulf Arab government official said Washington should now concentrate on helping Gulf states defend themselves by providing them with the military hardware.

In the past, the U.S. Congress has been reluctant to approve sales of sophisticated military equipment to Gulf Arab states for fear the weapons would end up being used against Israel, even though Western-oriented Gulf Arabs have insisted the arms would be used to prevent the Gulf war spilling over into their oil-rich statelets.

Iran and Iraq signed a U.N.-brokered cease-fire after their eight-year war in Aug. 1988, and there have been no serious violations of the truce reported since then.

The New York Times and The Washington Post, quoting a classified Defense Department document signed by Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, said U.S. military leaders had been told to scrap plans for defending Iran in the event of a Soviet drive toward Gulf oil fields.

The new guidelines said the new U.S. military focus in the Gulf should be securing oil supplies by defending the Arabian peninsula against regional threats that might be assisted by Moscow, the document said.

However, U.S. military officials said the newspapers had misinterpreted the report and the U.S. had not dropped plans to defend the Iranian oil fields.

The document said the goal of defending Iran in the event of a Soviet attack was the focus of intense U.S. military planning after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan in 1979.

The document quotes a senior U.S. Defense Department official as saying Iran's ruling anti-American clergy made it unrealistic to assume U.S. troops could deploy there in the event of a Soviet attack.

WRANGELL, AK (FEB. 8) UPI - A helicopter carrying Canadian mine workers from a remote location crashed in Alaska and six passengers died, the Federal Aviation Administration said Thursday.

The pilot and one passenger were seriously injured and a rescue helicopter picked them up and took them to Wrangell, Alaska, for treatment, FAA spokesman Paul Steucke said.

The Bell Jet Ranger, operated by Northern Mountain Helicopters of British Columbia, crashed 175 miles southeast of Sitka, Alaska, on a Wednesday afternoon flight from a Canadian mine to Wrangell, Steucke said.

The crash occurred in ''pretty decent weather'' along the Stikine River, Steucke said.

He said the National Transportation Safety Board was investigating.

Mines in British Columbia use Wrangell as a base of operations for flying crews and gear to mine sites.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Farm-state congressmen said Thursday one way to reduce the cost of the farm program would be to deny subsidies to well-off farmers but they also found pitfalls in the idea.

The Bush administration has requested a $1.5 billion cut in farm subsidy spending in fiscal 1991. Payment limits would be one way to reach the goal an official told a House Agriculture subcommittee, but he made no endorsement.

While subcommittee members grappled with how to meet budget targets, the farm program was under attack on another front. Rep. Richard Armey, R-Texas, who views the program as wasteful, has filed a bill to save $1 billion a year by cutting off payments to relatively wealthy farmers.

Subcommittee Chairman Dan Glickman, D-Kan., said an eligibility rule might be the fairest approach, if a cut has to be made in overall farm spending.

''I would prefer to protect the family farmer,'' Glickman said, later adding, ''I am more of the belief if we have to cut farm programs ... cut the eligibility of your wealthier farmers.''

Members of the subcommittee, who said they were worried about maintaining farm income, loudly opposed any further cuts in target prices, a key in determining crop subsidy payments. The two other commonly mentioned ways to reduce farm program costs are tighter payment limits or limits on the number of acres eligible for payments.

Deputy Agriculture Undersecretary John Campbell told the panel that all three were ''changes we have in mind'' - slightly stronger language than the administration has used in the past when it merely listed ideas.

Campbell said an eligibility limit based on a farmer's income was ''certainly something that can be thrown into the mix.''

Glickman asked the Agriculture Department to prepare statistics on how much money could be saved if there was an income-cutoff for payments. He said $1.2 billion was paid in 1988 to farmers with gross sales of $500,000.

Rep. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, called Armey's proposal ''cruel and unusual'' although there might be merit in an eligibility standard.

''My concern is what Mr. Armey doesn't know about farming may hurt all (farmers),'' Grandy said.

If large farm operations were no longer eligible for price supports, there would be no obligation for them to set aside part of their land, Grandy said. Huge amounts of land could be put back in production, possibly depressing grain prices.

House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, said eligibility rules might ignore reality because farmers often see only a small profit despite a large volume of production.

''It is important ... to provide a minimum level of support to allow our farmers to continue to provide us with the food and fiber that enriches our lives and supports our economy,'' de la Garza said.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Convicted federal tax cheat Leona Helmsley is armed with startling new evidence to prove ''she is absolutely and unequivocably innocent'' of charges that she evaded $750,000 in state taxes, her lawyers said Friday.

''I'm going to prove it. I've only begun to fight,'' said Helmsley, 70, who,with her husband, Harry, rules a nationwide hotel empire.

The lead attorney of her new defense team, Alan Dershowitz, told reporters he has gathered ''new evidence that was not produced in previous trials that will prove to everyone that Mrs. Helmsley is absolutely innocent'' of the state charges, which have not yet come to trial.

Dershowitz declined to reveal the new evidence.

The Helmsleys are accused in state Supreme Court in Manhattan of cheating New York state out of $750,000 in taxes by disguising $3 million spent to renovate their mansion in Greenwich, Conn., as corporate business expenses.

''You will be shocked when you hear the evidence,'' said Dershowitz, a Harvard University law professor best known for his successful defense of Claus von Bulow.

Helmsley was convicted on similar federal tax evasion charges in U.S. District Court in September 1989 and was sentenced to four years in prison of which she must serve 20 months before becoming eligible for parole. She was fined $7 million.

Her husband was deemed incompetant to stand trial in federal court, but his competency for state trial has not yet been determined.

Two former Helmsley aides who were convicted in the federal case have pleaded guilty in state court and are expected to testify against their one-time boss.

Helmsley, the iron-willed matron who former Mayor Edward Koch called ''the Wicked Witch of the West,'' said it felt ''lousy'' to be featured in a book called ''The Queen of Mean'' and to be known as the woman everyone loves to hate.

''It hurts a great deal,'' said Helmsley, holding her head high.

In court, another Helmsley lawyer, Sandor Frankel, asked Justice John Bradley to rule quickly on motions to dismiss the case on grounds of double jeopardy and immunity.

The double jeopardy motion is based on the argument that she has already been prosecuted in federal court for the same alleged crime. The immunity argument is based on her testimony before a grand jury investigating sales tax fraud by consumers who shipped their purchases out of state to avoid paying tax. Her lawyers claim the government's current indictment was improperly sparked by that immunized testimony.

Frankel also asked the judge to consider dismissing the case based on the ''severity'' of Helmsley's federal sentence.

Frankel asked for a speedy decision so that, if the motions are denied, Helmsley can go to trial as soon as possible.

''Mrs. Helmsley's position is that she is absolutely and unequivocably innocent of every charge,'' Frankel told the judge. ''The case should go forward as speedily as possible so that Mrs. Helmsley can be given an opportunity to vindicate her innocence in you honor's courtroom.''

Assistant Attorney General Alfredo Mendez said the state has been ready for trial since April 1988. Mendez said, ''You can't have a speedy trial if you file new motions. You can't have it both ways.''

He also said he did not consider Helmsely's federal sentence particularly tough.

''I can't believe the sentence is severe,'' Mendez said.

DAYTON, OH (FEB. 8) UPI - Sandra Lee Boles took a positive step out of a bureaucratic maze Thursday when she met Sandra Lee Johnson, the woman with whom she has shared an identity for 15 years.

Boles, of Dayton, met Johnson of Sunset, Utah, shortly before their appearance together on the CBS ''This Morning'' television program. The meeting came more than three years after Boles realized her credit and tax headaches were caused by the fact she shared a Social Security number with Johnson.

Both Boles and Johnson were born Sandra Lee Ferguson on May 3, 1959, and were assigned the same Social Security number. Their earnings have been combined under a common number since 1975.

''I don't believe they have a system for dealing with their mistakes,'' the Ohio woman told TV host Kathleen Sullivan. ''I've been fighting with Social Security for three years now.''

Boles, operations manager for media services at Wright State University, was featured in a Jan. 27 article in The Dayton Daily News that described her futile efforts to obtain her own Social Security number rather than share one with Johnson.

Boles said she became aware her Social Security number was not unique in 1987 when the payroll department at the university informed her the Internal Revenue Service was claiming Johnson failed to report her income from Wright State for 1984-85.

Boles said letters and calls to the Social Security Administration failed to untangle the mess. But after her story was published, the problem landed on the desk of Richard Rogers, branch manager for the Social Security office in Xenia.

Rogers said he has a new Social Security card waiting for Boles when she returns from her television appearance in New York. Johnson will keep the number the women shared.

Boles says her close encounter with the government is not over because she has to correct her records stretching back the 15 years she's been working as well as change her license, payroll and credit cards.

''Plus,'' she added, ''explaining this to the IRS.''

COLUMBUS, OH (FEB. 8) UPI - Vice President Dan Quayle came to Columbus in September to help Columbia Gas of Ohio publicize its natural gas-powered bus. Now the utility wants to charge customers $703,000 it spent on the event.

Columbia has filed documents with the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio, asking for permission to charge $428,839 in bus promotion costs to its customers in Ohio and the remainder to customers in Kentucky, Maryland, New York and Pennsylvania.

The promotional bill is nearly three times the price tag of the bus, which was developed by Columbia and a California gas company to promote a new market for natural gas and to help reduce big-city pollution.

At the publicity event last Sept. 8, Quayle delivered a brief speech, posed for pictures and honked the bus's horn.

Among the expenses Columbia listed in its PUCO filing is $17,803 for hors d'oeuvres.

The report on bus promotion expenses was filed with the PUCO as part of a $42 million Columbia rate-hike request. Company officials said the cost of developing the bus - about $250,000 - is not included in the rate case.

(FEB. 8) UPI - VIDEO REVIEWS:

MOVIES

''Lethal Weapon 2'' - Mel Gibson and Danny Glover are back as Detectives Riggs and Murtaugh, two decidedly diverse partners, in this explosive sequel that at times tops the original. They are still an unruly mix: Murtaugh (Glover) a solid, cautious family man, Riggs (Gibson), an unpredictable wild man, the true meaning of a ''loose cannon.'' Yet despite their constant verbal sparring, they make a formidable team, maybe even getting used to each other. Their target this time is a sinister South African (Joss Ackland) who runs an international drug ring while hiding behind diplomatic immunity. Assigned to protect a hyperactive accountant (Joe Pesci) who says he laundered nearly one-half billion dollars in narcotics money, Riggs and Murtaugh launch an obtrusive investigation that soon has them and their fellow cops earmarked for extinction. The film works well on many fronts - a good script that builds on the groundwork of the first movie and allows its characters to grow, terrific stuntwork and fine actors. Highly entertaining action adventure, though more violent than the original. 1989. 114 minutes. Warner Home Video. Rated R. $24.98.

''Parenthood'' - Just about anyone who is a parent - or had a parent - can relate to Ron Howard's bright domestic comedy-drama about the everyday trials and tribulations of family life. Steve Martin heads an exceptional ensemble cast well suited for a complicated but familiar plot that while sentimental at times is more noted for its funny vignettes about the tricky business of parenthood. The film revolves about members of Jason Robards' family - Martin, Mary Steenburgen, Rick Moranis, Tom Hulce and Dianne Wiest - and how they deal with their exasperating offspring and with each other. 1989. 124 minutes. MCA Home Video. Rated PG-13. (No suggested retail price.)

''Wired'' - The tragic tale of comic John Belushi, as told by Bob Woodward is a downer, a full-throttle nose dive into self destruction, one that makes for a grim, disjointed film. Much of the story is laid out in a sort of ''ghost-of-Christmas-past'' format - Belushi (Michael Chiklis) comes back in his ''afterlife'' to review portions of his rollercoaster life and drug-induced death, squired by his guardian angel, a New York taxi driver, no less (Ray Sharkey), while Woodward (J.T. Walsh) conducts interviews to ostensibly fill in the missing pieces. 1989. 112 minutes. International Video Entertainment. Rated R. $89.95.

''Ghost Chase'' - A light, youth-oriented comic fantasy about a ghost and a treasure hunt. A young actor (Jason Lively) finds inheritance from his late grandfather to be mostly junk, but, of course, is really a key to hidden riches, tracked down with the help of the ghost of the old man's English butler. 1988. 89 minutes. MCEG/Virgin Home Entertainment. Rated PG-13. $79.95.

VINTAGE VIDEO

Rita Hayworth, one of yesterday's great film beauties, called by some ''Love Goddess Of Hollywood,'' is shown to good advantage in four musicals from RCA/Columbia Home Video ($19.95 each). Her co-stars include Frank Sinatra, Gene Kelly and Fred Astaire.

In ''Pal Joey'' (1957), featuring some memorable melodies from Rodgers and Hart (''Bewitched, Bothered And Bewildered,'' ''The Lady Is A Tramp,'' ''My Funny Valentine''), Sinatra plays a flippant hustler trying to finance a nightclub while dividing his attention between socialite Hayworth and showgirl Kim Novak.

''Cover Girl'' (1944) teams Hayworth with Kelly in a familiar story of fame versus love, music by Jerome Kern and Ira Gershwin. Hayworth, a top dancer herself, is paired with Astaire in ''You'll Never Get Rich'' (1941) a musicomedy with a military backdrop and Cole Porter songs, and ''You Were Never Lovelier'' (1942), a light-hearted love story set in Argentina, tunes by Kern and Johnny Mercer.

VIDBITS

Baseball movies are making their pitch at the video stores these days, highlighted by the re-issue of one of the best of its kind, ''Pride Of The Yankees'' (1942), and the video debut of ''The Babe Ruth Story'' (1948) and ''Pride Of St. Louis'' (1952), with Gary Cooper as Lou Gehrig, William Bendix as the Babe and Dan Dailey as Dizzy Dean, respectively, all from CBS-Fox, $19.98 each. Meanwhile, Orion has reduced to $19.98 several recent hits, including ''Bull Durham'' and ''Eight Men Out.'' And, coming March 8, ''Field Of Dreams'' (MCA) ...

For younger baseball players, in the 8-14 age range, MasterVision has produced a 210-page paperback companion for its ''Little League's How-To-Play Baseball Video''. They make a good team. The book teaches the basics, step by step, as does the splendid 70-minute video, but from a different perspective with added and expanded sections on some trickier aspects of the game, and is an easy tote to the ballpark. CAIRO, EGYPT (FEB. 8) UPI - A newspaper for devout Moslems advised readers Thursday that a wife who refuses to have sex with her husband will be cursed by God's angels until she repents and that a husband has the right to beat her lightly.

Sheikh Ibrahim el Wakfa, a religious adviser to the Cairo weekly Allewaa al Islami, said divorce in a case where a wife refuses to have sex with her husband was a last resort.

''A wife who refuses sex with her husband will be cursed by the angels of God until she repents,'' Sheikh Ibrahim wrote.

''If she insists on refusing to have sex with her husband, he can divorce her, but only after advising her, leaving her to sleep alone and beating her up lightly,'' the scholar said.

Sheikh Ibrahim suggested that the husband ask for two witnesses, preferably one from his wife's side of the family and one from his side, to judge her behavior after he has beaten her up.

''If all this proves futile then he is allowed to divorce her,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Four of five Peace Corps volunteers who had been missing on Western Samoa in the wake of tropical storm Ofa have been found, the Pentagon said Thursday.

The storm hit the South Pacific island chain Monday, and the Pentagon said it was sending an Air Force C-5 transport plane with two UH-60 helicopters to help in the search for five missing Peace Corps volunteers in Western Samoa.

''All but one of the Peace Corps volunteers have since been located,'' Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said.

However, the volunteers were found before the Defense Department helicopters arrived on the islands. The C-5 carrying the choppers was held up by bad weather and reached Western Samoa on Thursday, Williams said.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (FEB. 8) UPI - Hungarian secret police used blackmail, threats and harassment to force unwilling victims into working for them, one former informer said Thursday.

Geza Kovacs, leader of a music group from the town of Esztergom in northern Hungary, said at a news conference he was co-opted in 1987 by the state security force through continual harassment.

The news conference was sponsored by the Federation of Young Democrats known as FIDESZ, a major target of police surveillance.

Kovacs said when the band became popular, its members were accused of spreading bad habits among their followers and were charged with various offenses.

Kovacs said he was subpoenaed by secret police seven or eight times and accused of ''incitement against the achievements of socialism.'' The last time he was summoned, he was handed a statement in which he was to pledge to cooperate.

''I had no choice,'' he said.

He was given the cover name Attila Budai and was told never to reveal to anyone, even his family, that he was working for the security force.

He was ordered to meet once a month with an officer named Balazs Szabo and hand him a written report which was always to begin with the sentence, ''I have heard it from a friend.''

Kovacs, a rather corpulent man in his late 20s, said the state security forces were interested in almost anything up to the summer of 1989, after which he was told to collect information specifically about opposition groups like FIDESZ, one of Hungary's most articulate political groups.

Police considered FIDESZ ''the loudest protagonist of a fast change in the regime,'' he said.

Kovacs estimated the number of informers at about 2,000, and said he knew one debriefing officer ran between eight and 10 informers.

''There was at least one such officer in all 19 counties of Hungary plus at least one in the capital,'' he said.

Kovacs said he met his debriefing officer for the last time in December, after he was ordered to spy on FIDESZ officer Tomas Deutch, ''one of my close friends.''

''It was horrible and disgusting to have to do it,'' he said. Instead, he approached the FIDESZ group in Estergom, a town on the Danube northwest of Budapest, and revealed who he was.

Kovacs said he was offered money, and once took $30 to pay for a police fine and to buy some underground papers for his debriefing officer.

Kovacs, who was tense and nervous at the news conference, said he hoped after the March elections his ''crime'' would be seen in a different light.

''It would be a good thing if other informers were to come out and reveal themselves voluntarily,'' he added.

In another development, a parliamentary committee appointed to look into the so-called Duna-gate political bugging scandal Thursday interrogated Joszef Vegvari, a major in the state security force.

Vegvari helped the Free Democrats and FIDESZ to reveal last month that police were still spying on Hungarians despite recent political changes. The surveillance reports went to certain Cabinet members and members of the presidium of the new Socialist Party, the successor of the Communist Party.

The target groups of electronic eavesdropping did not include the Socialist Party.

FIDESZ has appealed to parliament not to make the investigation ''long and tortuous,'' because Vegvari, who retired Feb. 1, is under terrible psychological strain.

Vegvari is accused of having committed a crime. He and another man allegedly arranged to photograph documents and the destruction of secret papers inside the headquarters of the secret police on Dec. 25.

VIENNA (FEB. 8) UPI - NATO announced Thursday key concessions to the Warsaw Pact on levels of troops, combat aircraft and tanks in Europe in a move aimed at removing obstacles to an agreement on conventional arms reductions.

The proposals, unveiled during two working sessions of the Conventional Forces in Europe talks in Vienna, bring NATO much closer to the Warsaw Pact's stance on several issues that have stalled the talks for a month.

''We have made moves in their direction,'' said a U.S. official close to the Vienna talks.

A senior NATO offical in Brussels, Belgium said the proposals were ''designed to introduce compromise elements and allow us to reach a deal quickly.'' Both sides have been pushing for a treaty on conventional forces reductions before the year's end.

The U.S. official in Vienna said the East's initial reaction was ''positive,'' but said the proposals are ''very complex, and they will have to study them.''

A formal response could come as early as next week when negotiators from 23 countries meet in Ottawa, Canada, for the Open Skies talks, the official said.

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner and President Bush will discuss the Conventional Forces in Europe, or CFE, talks and developments in Eastern Europe at Camp David this weekend, it was announced.

The new NATO proposal incorporates Bush's call last week for cutting U.S. and Soviet troop levels from 275,000 to 195,000, but it also adds Denmark and Hungary to the central European zone to which the ceilings apply.

NATO also proposed a new ceiling on combat aircraft of 4,700 for each side down from 5,700 proposed by NATO July 13.

In addition, the Western alliance shifted its stance on attack helicopters. The ceiling of 1,900 remains unchanged but in a concession addressing ''Soviet preoccupations in the helicopter field,'' the Warsaw Pact will be permitted to disarm, rather than destroy, many of its attack-and-support helicopters, the NATO official in Brussels said.

NATO did not propose a further lowering in the levels of tanks (20,000 each) and armored combat vehicles (30,000 each), but conceded to Warsaw Pact definitions for the two types of vehicles.

NATO hopes to quickly conclude an agreement in the Conventional Forces in Europe talks, which began in Vienna last March, with an eye toward ratification at a proposed 35-nation summit on Europe's future this fall, the NATO official in Brussels said.

Such a summit could also prepare a 1992 follow-up to the 1975 Helsinki Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, but ''it will not substitute for it,'' the official said.

The Open Skies conference, initially called to discuss reconnaissance flights, has quickly gained in importance through recent events. Besides providing a forum for Warsaw Pact reaction to the latest Conventional Forces in Europe proposal, the meeting will allow U.S. Secretary of State James Baker an opportunity to brief NATO allies on his trip to Moscow.

LONDON (FEB. 8) UPI - Stock prices closed higher Thursday on the London International stock exchange, responding favorably to the first two days of the U.S. Treasury quarterly refunding auction.

The Financial Times 100-stock index rose 23.6 points to 2,331, barely off its 2,331.2 high for the day.

The narrower top 30 industrial average was up 19.1 points to 1,845.3 points.

Volume was about 456 million shares, up from 368 million shares Wednesday.

Traders were reassured by better-than-expected results of Wednesday's refunding auction of 10-year notes and bonds by the U.S. Treasury, brokers said.

Analysts said a number of good earnings reports also helped drive the market upward.

British Telecom, which reported an 11.6 percent increase in pre-tax third-quarter earnings, was up 12 cents to $5.18.

Also in the telecommunications sector, Cable and Wireless rose 29 cents to $9.52 on rumors the company has been negotiating with the Chinese government for a major transaction involving its Hong Kong subsidary.

Reuters rose 39 cents to $17.92. The news and financial information services agency is soon to release its earnings, expected to meet shareholders' expectations.

Among the gainers were Imperial Chemical Industries, which reported strong earnings recently, and was up 24 cents to $18.53. In the property sector, Rosehaugh gained 53 cents to $5.95.

Insurance stocks recovered some of their losses earlier in the week, resulting from a storm over Britain. General Accident was up 24 cents higher to $19.60.

Grand Metropolitan PLC rose 15 cents to $10.25, following news its Alpo Petfoods was up for sale.

(FEB. 9) UPI - TODAY'S PEOPLE:

DAVIS DIVORCE IN THE WORKS: Patti Davis, Ronald and Nancy Reagan's estranged daughter, is now estranged from her husband, according to the New York Daily News. Davis, 37, has been living apart from yoga instructor Paul Grilley, who she married Aug. 14, 1984, for about a month, the News said. ''They are divorcing,'' a friend of Davis's told the newspaper. Davis's acting career failed to take off and she turned to writing novels - first with ''Home Front,'' an unflattering parallel of her family, and then ''Deadfall,'' a thriller about Nicaraugan policy - and neither pleased her parents.

ACTING LIKE A CHAMP: Boxer Mike Tyson was in a surly mood for his Tokyo news conference to promote Sunday's fight against James ''Buster'' Douglas. The heavyweight champ, who showed up 30 minutes late and in jeans and a T-shirt, bristled when a reporter asked if he had really hired a psychiatrist to help him prepare for the fight. ''Psychiatrist?'' Tyson snapped. ''I'm afraid you're wrong.'' The reporter assured him that she meant nothing derogatory and pointed out that plenty of athletes use therapy. ''No, I just fight,'' Tyson said to start a sentence that he finished with a four-letter word. Sources in the Tyson camp later confirmed he does indeed have a psychological consultant in his entourage but is sensitive about it ever since his ex-wife, Robin Givens, said he was emotionally unstable. Promoter Don King confirmed recent talks about Tyson taking on wrestler Hulk Hogan but played down the matter, saying it won't happen unless big money is involved.

HOWARD AND THE TOWER: Director Ron Howard and his wife, Cheryl, are asking lots of questions about the microwave tower that officials want to build near their home in Greenwich, Conn., to improve emergency communications. Howard, a television actor before going on to directing hits like ''Parenthood'' and ''Cocoon,'' is not opposed to the tower but wants to be sure it's safe and not too obtrusive, says their lawyer, Stephen Sugrue. ''The Howards fully understand that the need to improve radio communications for the police and fire department is a priority,'' Sugrue said. ''They do not have a 'not-in-my-backyard' attitude. They just want to ensure that as minimum a tower as possible is put up. Presuming the safety issues can be put aside, their concern is the aesthetics because this would be a pretty large tower.'' The proposed site of the tower is 260 feet from the Howards' property.

CAPITOL OAKS: The Oak Ridge Boys had a different kind of audience Wednesday - the members of the Tennessee General Assembly. The lawmakers gave the Oak Ridgers a standing ovation and passed a resolution that congratulated them for promoting ''wholesome family values.'' The group recently volunteered to help the state promote its adopt-a-highway program under which businesses and organizations pick up litter along designated stretches of state highways.

GLIMPSES: Olympic sprint champion Florence Griffith Joyner will be experiencing a different kind of speed April 21. She'll be behind the wheel for the pro-celebrity Grand Prix of Long Beach, along with ''La Bamba'' star Lou Diamond Phillips, former Miami Dolphin Larry Csonka, retired baseball star Rod Carew and Greg Evigan of ''My Two Dads'' ... Frank Sinatra and Don Rickles will play a Sept. 2 fund-raiser to benefit the new Italian Community Center in Milwaukee ... Tennis ace Steffi Graf of West Germany tore ligaments in her right hand while skiing in St. Moritz, Switzerland, and will be off the tour until April.

MINNEAPOLIS (FEB. 8) UPI - Grand Metropolitan PLC said Thursday it has entered into discussions about the possible sale of ALPO Petfoods, saying the subsidiary does not fit its corporate strategy.

''We've had several serious inquiries,'' Grand Met spokeswoman Mary Carroll said, adding that they were ''unsolicited'' and that any time frame for a possible sale was ''pretty indefinite.''

She said the company would not disclose the names of any possible buyers.

ALPO, which is based in Allentown, Pa., has 1,400 employees.

Morgan Stanley & Co. of New York has been retained to advise Grand Met, which did not disclose any potential buyers.

ALPO was acquired by Grand Met as part of the Liggett acquisition in 1980. It has annual sales of about $400 million, and produced a profit before tax and interest of about $45 million in the year ended Sept. 30, Grand Met said.

Ian Martin, chairman and chief executive officer of Grand Met's food sector in Minneapolis, said that while ALPO, the sixth-largest petfood company in the United States, is profitable it doesn't meld with the British conglomerate's business plans.

''Profit growth has been achieved by ALPO in this highly competitive market through expert brand management, tight quality and cost control and successful add-on acquisitions,'' Martin said in a news release.

''Grand Met's strategy is to develop as an international operator in branded food, drinks and retailing, together with related property activities. Within each of these sectors, the aim is to upgrade and concentrate on the development of those businesses and brands with the greatest long-term potential.

''A careful review has taken place of the role of ALPO within the Grand Met portfolio of food brands, as a result of which it has been decided to explore the possible sale of ALPO and the long-term use of realized funds in the expansion of our other food interests as and when opportunities arise.''

He said Grand Met intends to pursue the international development of brands such as Haagen-Dazs, Pillsbury, and Green Giant, where it sees ''major opportunities.''

ALPO makes dog and cat food and related products under the ALPO brand in the United States. It also manufactures Jim Dandy and Blue Mountain dog and cat food in some states.

Grand Metropolitan PLC has annual sales of over $15 billion. U.S. subsidiaries include Burger King, Carillon Importers, Haagen-Dazs, Heublein, Paddington, Pillsbury and Pearle Inc.

SOWETO, SOUTH AFRICA (FEB. 8) UPI - Civil rights activist Jesse Jackson urged President Frederik de Klerk Thursday to ''go all the way'' and replace four decades of apartheid rule with full democracy to prevent further turmoil in racially divided South Africa.

Jackson began his first full day in South Africa since 1979 by attending a prayer breakfast with senior South African church leaders, then toured the black satellite city of Soweto south of Johannesburg.

Speaking to about 1,000 teachers at Funda (Learn) College, who chanted ''Viva Jesse Jackson'' and ''ANC, ANC (African National Congress),'' Jackson likened the conditions of his upbringing to apartheid.

''As an African American, when I grew up in Greenville, South Carolina we lived under the laws of apartheid. We had to go to the back of the bus, we could not use the same water fountains as whites... the same bathrooms.

''I went to jail for trying to use a library. So we've known jail,'' Jackson said. Suffering bred character, and character faith,'' he said.

''Amandla'' (power), Jackson called at the end of his address, using the cry of militant black nationalists, to receive the answering ''awethu'' (to the people) from his audience.

Jackson and his entourage drove through light rain under a pall of smog caused by Soweto's many coal and wood cookers to a shack in one of the poorer quarters checkered with patches of maize.

The convoy, which included the cars of as many as 100 journalists, ignored all traffic signals on its way past astonished onlookers in the city of 2 million blacks.

Later internal ANC leader Walter Sisulu, who accompanied Jackson on the tour, and his wife Albertina invited Jackson, his wife Jacqueline and his son Jesse to tea in their Soweto home.

The two-time presidential candidate said de Klerk's reform package unveiled last Friday was ''marvelous'' but pointed out that black nationalist Nelson Mandela is still in prison and a 43-month-old state of emergency is still partially in place.

''He offered hope to those who have been disenfranchised, hope by unbanning various organizations, hope by repealing restrictions on the press, hope in the release of political prisoners even it it affects only 5 percent, and hope for the release of Nelson Mandela,'' Jackson said.

"He is the freest man in the world because of mind and morality," Jackson said.

But at brealkfast he urged de Klerk, whose National Party has ruled the country since 1948, ''to seize this great moment in history and go all the way'' by abolishing the country's racist laws and implementing multi-racial democracy to bring the country out of international isolation.

''South Africa cannot go backwards,'' Jackson said. ''It will find chaos. It cannot stand still, it will find tension. It must go forward to a final peaceful and just solution.''

Jackson is on a 1O-day tour of South Africa as a guest of the South African Council of Churches. On his arrival Wednesday, anti-apartheid cleric Allan Boesak hailed the American as ''a campaigner, a comrade in the struggle in his own right.''

''We are living in exciting times in this country, times of great change, wehere we may even find ourselves on the verge of a historic breakthrough in the political situation,'' said Boesak, who embraced Jackson and called him his brother.

Jackson, whose only other trip to South Africa was in 1979, said the world is waiting with ''bated breath'' for Mandela's release.

Asked whether he wanted to visit Mandela in prison, Jackson said he hoped to see him free walking down the streets of Johannesburg, but added he had received no commitment from the government he would be able to see Mandela ''in his present status.''

Mandela, jailed since 1962 and convicted of acts of sabotage against the government in 1964, is being held in a suburban-style house on the grounds of the minimum-security prison in Paarl, set in the Cape wine-growing region.

De Klerk lifted a 30-year ban on the African National Congress, suspended judicial executions, lifted restrictions on more than 370 activists and eased the state of emergency in a bid to lure black leaders to the negotiating table and persuade the ANC to publicly abandon its guerrilla war tactics.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (FEB. 8) UPI - Police fired tear gas into a crowd of 2,000 youths at a black township and baton-charged protesters outside the British consulate Thursday, cracking down on demonstrations against a controversial boycott-busting tour of South Africa by English cricket players.

Thursday's protests came on the opening day of the English team's play in Johannesburg - midway through a tour that has provoked protests and clashes with police at nearly every stop where permission to demonstrate has been denied.

Police briefly detained eight members of the news media, including a CBS television crew, and accused unnamed reporters of helping transport the demonstrators to the cricket match. Police said there were no injuries but tour organizers reported 30 injured.

The skirmishes erupted as Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok defended President De Klerk's refusal to lift a 43-month-old state of emergency in its entirety, citing a ''politically volatile situation still existing among certain radical fringes on all sides of the spectrum.''

Vlok also denounced a Conservative Party threat to call a two-day work stoppage by segregationists to protest De Klerk's racial reform program.

He said white extremists threatened to kill jailed black nationalist Nelson Mandela on his release from prison.

Specifically referring to the party's threat to include police in the strike, Vlok said, ''At the moment what we need is calm, not emotional excitement in the country.''

De Klerk last Friday announced sweeping racial reforms that included lifting a 30-year ban on the African National Congress and restrictions on more than 30 other anti-apartheid organizations. He also said Mandela would be freed shortly but there was no indication when it would occur.

Mandela and officials of other anti-apartheid movements applauded De Klerk's moves but said they fell short of creating a climate conducive to the power-sharing negotiations he proposed in a bid to end the country's racial conflict.

Civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, on a 10-day tour of the country, visited squatter settlements in the black satellite city of Soweto Thursday and urged de Klerk to ''go all the way'' and abolish more than four decades of apartheid rule.

Gerrit Viljoen, the constitutional planning minister and chief negotiator with Mandela, told ABC News ''Nightline'' the state of emergency in the country was inhibiting political normalization. He said it was ''a question of weeks, a few weeks only'' before state of emergency would be lifted.

Enforcing a ban on all protests that have no official rally permit, police stopped buses and taxis attempting to leave Alexandra for the Wanderers Cricket Stadium where the English team was to play Thursday.

The Alexandra Civic Association condemned ''the violent treatment used against people protesting peacefully'' and said that demonstrators were tear-gassed and beaten after police blocked their departure from the township.

Police Maj. Gen. Roy During said in a statement police stopped 10 min-buses in Alexandra and fired a ''small amount of tear gas'' to disperse 2,000 people, mostly school children, intending to head to Wanderers stadium.

Outside the British consulate downtown, a group of about 200 demonstrators ignored orders to leave the area after delivering a letter of protest to a representative of the consul ''and were dispersed by means of a baton charge,'' police said.

''This goes to show the South African police are serious in attempts to counter lawlessness and will uphold the laws of the country,'' Capt. Eugene Opperman said.

Protests have dogged the touring English cricket team, led by former English captain Mike Gatting, since its arrival on Jan. 19 in defiance of an international boycott of sporting ties with South Africa.

Police blocked approaches to the stadium and turned protesters away as they arrived but allowed a pro-tour rally to take place instead. One small group managed to protest briefly near the stadium, chanting ''Gatting go home,'' but police ordered them to disperse and they drove away in a mini-bus.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - The warmer weather that drove down heating oil prices in January after their surge during the December freeze will continue through the rest of the winter, a meteorologist said Thursday.

John Davis, meteorologist with Shearson Lehmamn Hutton Inc. in Chicago, said the high-altitude jet stream flowing from west to east across the United States has stayed along the Canadian border since the first of the year serving as "a dam" preventing cold Arctic from moving southward.

Computer models indicate that this pattern will change about the middle of next week right on schedule for the 45-day pattern change that has been remarkably consistent this year, Davis said.

"All indications are that the jet stream will buckle in the western United States allowing cold air to surge down into the western portion of the country while the eastern portion remains relatively mild," Davis said in a telephone interview.

"Normally when the jet stream is pushed southward in the western portion of the country, the reaction is for the jet stream to move north in the eastern portion," Davis said.

The 45-day cycle of meteorological change doesn't always hold exactly, but this year Davis said, "It's been as consistent as I've seen it. It's been remarkable."

In mid-November, the formation of a high-pressure ridge was observed at high altitudes over the Atlantic - a so-called Greenland Block that only occurs once every five or six years, the meteorologist said.

The high pressure ridge resulted in air movements that moved the jet stream 800-1,000 miles further south than normal allowing cold Arctic air to follow, Davis said. The result was that Boston had its coldest December on record and New York City its coldest since 1917, he said.

Consequently, consumer heating oil prices rocketed by about 50 percent to around $1.50 a gallon, precipitating calls by northeastern governors for a federal investigation. Prices have since dropped to less than $1.20 a gallon in many areas of the Northeast where most of the heating oil is used.

The pattern changed around the first of the year, just about the time the initial 45-day cycle ended, with the jet stream retiring northward to the Canadian border and allowing warm air to surge northward, Davis said.

With the new pattern arriving right on schedule next week with the beginning of a new 45-day cycle pattern, "our best estimate" is that there will be colder than normal weather in the West and warmer than normal temperatures in the East, especially in the Southeast through the end of March, he said.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, CA (FEB. 8) UPI - More than 100 people gathered at dawn Thursday on the sand at Huntington Beach, ready to volunteer in cleanup efforts and hoping to catch a glimpse of an oil spill that threatened the pristine beaches of Southern California.

But except for about a dozen birds that had washed up on shore, there was little evidence of the nearly 300,000 gallons of Alaskan crude that spewed out of the American Trader Wednesday after the tanker apparently hit its own anchor, opening a hole in its hull.

''We were watching TV last night, when we heard about the spill and we came down here because we thought it was pretty major and we wanted to volunteer anyway we could,'' said Damon Hill, 18, one of about 20 University of California, Irvine, students who braved the morning chill to get a first-hand look at the spill.

But because of favorable winds, the oil had not washed up on shore during the night as authorities had feared. Crews were able to cap the spill in four hours.

The crude was also of a much lighter variety than the goo that killed thousands of birds and mammals in Alaska last March. Despite the spill, a half dozen surfers turned out a dawn to ride to two- to three-foot swells.

At the Huntington State Beach lifeguard headquarters, Victor Leipzig, a college biology instructor, and other volunteers had established a bird rescue station, where the injured fowl were being cleaned of oil debris.

During the night, 11 birds - their feathers slickened by the oil - had been picked up along the beach, Leipzig said. Five were dead, the others ''thoroughly soaked'' in oil, Leipzig said.

The birds included several western grebes, surf scooters, and a couple of seagulls.

''Lots of these birds are wintering birds, so there's more in this area during this time of year,'' Leipzig said. ''This is a very unfortunate time to have an oil spill off the Southern California coast.''

One of the birds had managed to fly about a quarter mile inland, before dropping to his death, his wings weighted down by oil.

From the shore, the crowd could see the 800-foot tanker 1 1/2 miles out, surrounded by two U.S. Coast Guard cutters and a cleanup vessel, Mr. Clean II, which carries a six-man crew and can hold 1,500 barrels of recovered oil.

''They say it was just a wasn't a major spill, but anything over five gallons is major,'' said Hill's companion, Maria Culberson, 19. ''All I know is I can see that tanker, and I can't do anything about it.''

The Coast Guard said 296,000 gallons (7,000 barrels) spewed into the ocean before the spill was controlled, but Mayor Tom Mays and other city officials late Wednesday put the spill at about 400,000 gallons.

''Most of the destruction you don't see from the shore,'' said Bob Skulnick, executive director of the American Oceans Campaign, an environmental group that has been lobbying for legislation to stop offshore oil drilling.

''That's because oil breaks down. Of what you see on top, 40 percent oil is underwater, where it kills plankton, fish and fish larvae.''

Although there was no immediate evidence of damage to the sea lions, seals and dolphins indigenous to the area, Leipzig said that populations of bottlenose porpoise may be endangered because they live near where the spill occurred.

He predicted more dead birds would wash up on shore during the next few days.

''I grew up fishing here on the pier and I had nightmares last night when I went to bed,'' said Jeff Thomas, 27, who walked down to beach from his house. ''I'm very thankful this morning that it's not a black beach.''

''I understand we need the oil, but we also need to get it tightened up there been too many spills lately.''

Skulnick said the spill could have been prevented if the tanker had a double hull, which enviromentalists have long argued should be required on such vessels.

(FEB. 8) UPI - Hungary is exercising its new-found independence from Moscow. Today, Hungary's defense chief asked the head of the Soviet command to cancel all Soviet military training exercises in Hungary NOT confined to army bases. The state-run news agency says a Soviet colonel met with Hungary's defense minister in Budapest to brief him on military exercises planned on Hungarian territory from February through April. About 65-thousand Soviet troops have been stationed in Hungary since the failed 1956 uprising.

There's a lot of unclaimed lottery money in Illinois. NO one has showed up to claim winnings that now total nearly 40-Million dollars. State lottery director Sharon Sharp says NO grand prize winner has come forward during the past six weeks, although at least six winning tickets were sold. She is asking all Lottery players to check their tickets, adding- ''They could be one of our six missing Millionaires.'' Winners have one year to collect their prizes before the money is returned to a lottery pool for future games.

ST. MORITZ, SWITZERLAND (FEB. 8) UPI - Steffi Graf, virtually unstoppable on the tennis court, injured her right thumb skiing and could be out of competition for as much as 10 weeks.

The 20-year-old West German is expected to be ready for the next two Grand Slam events, the French Open in May and Wimbledon the following month. The lengthy absence should not affect her No. 1 world ranking since Graf holds a commanding lead over Martina Navratilova.

According to a preliminary report, Graf is suffering from a stretched or torn ligament on her serving hand. Doctors said they will be able to make an exact diagnosis once the swelling diminishes.

The accident occurred Wednesday, three days after Graf won the Pan Pacific Open in Tokyo, extending her consecutive match winning streak to 49. Along with other sports celebrities, she was in St. Moritz to participate in a film, ''Fire, Ice and Dynamite.''

Last month she captured the Australian Open for the third consecutive year and she has won eight of the last nine Grand Slam events.

The Women's International Tennis Association announced in Miami that Graf has withdrawn from the Virginia Slims of Florida in Boca Raton and the Lipton International Players Championships in Key Biscayne, Fla., both next month.

''I was looking forward to playing in Florida as I live there when I am not at home in Germany,'' Graf said in a statement released by the WITA. ''I am disappointed that I will miss Boca and Lipton, but I hope to be ready to play the Family Circle event (at Hilton Head Island, S.C.) in April.''

Graf, who earned $1,963,905 in official money last year, will make up the tournaments she misses later in the season.

''Graf will be entering two additional tournaments on the Kraft General Foods World Tour in order to fulfill her 1990 commitments to qualify for the Virginia Slims Bonus Pool at the end of the year,'' said her agent, Phil de Picciotto of Advantage International.

Several other top women players have been hobbled by injury during the first few weeks of the new year. Gabriela Sabatini, ranked No. 3, was forced to default from the Australian Open with a sprained ankle, and No. 7 Mary Joe Fernandez, the loser to Graf in the Australian final, suffered a shoulder injury during the Pan Pacific Open.

Also, No. 15 Helen Kelesi withdrew from the Breyers Classic with a thumb injury.

Sabatini and Fernandez are expected to return at Boca Raton, and Kelesi should be back for the Virginia Slims of Washington beginning Feb. 19.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Reversing course, the administration said Thursday it willoffer its own proposal to strengthen civil rights laws because it disagrees with legislation proposed by civil rights groups and a broad bipartisan coalition in Congress.

The administration also tried to focus the debate on the divisive issue of ''quotas,'' as had been predicted by a bipartisan group of legislators in Congress who support the Civil Rights Act of 1990.

Introduced Wednesday, the proposed legislation is designed to overturn a recent series of Supreme Court decisions that limits the scope of civil rights laws in employment discrimination cases.

A spokeswoman for the Justice Department said Thursday the administration is drafting its own version of a law with a more narrow scope than the congressional proposal.

''There are disagreements, yes,'' with the Capitol Hill measure, introduced by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., said Deborah Burstion-Wade, a Justice Department spokeswoman.

''We're totally against quotas,'' she said.

Kennedy said, however, that the proposal does not address the contentious and emotional issues of quotas, minority set-asides or affirmative-action plans.

''The rhetorical smoke screen that our opponents are already laying down is a blatant attempt to divert this important civil rights debate into a dead-end debate,'' Kennedy said.

Civil rights groups support the congressional effort to make it easier for people who say they were discriminated against to win lawsuits. In a series of largely technical Supreme Court decisions, it has become harder to prevail in some employment discrimination cases.

The Justice Department proposed remedial legislation for two of five controversial Supreme Court decisions, saying the other three were ''rooted in the court's opposition to quotas, which we share.''

The partial administration turnabout is significant because last summer it insisted there was no need for new legislation. President Bush said then that Attorney General Dick Thornburgh had advised him that new legislation ''isn't necessary.''

As late as last November, Thornburgh's chief spokesman, David Runkel, said the Justice Department had reviewed court cases and determined there was no ''need for any major rewriting'' of America's civil rights laws.

Debate over the competing congressional and administration versions of remedial legislation will likely become the year's most contested civil rights battle.

Ralph Neas, head of the influential Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, said the administrtion's more limited approach is ''very disappointing'' and ''would fall far short of correcting the serious problems created by these decisions.''

The proposed congressional legislation is designed to overturn a series of decisions by the Supreme Court last year. The court, firmly in the control of conservatives appointed by Presidient Ronald Reagan, has scaled back on a number of important rulings.

While some of the decisions dealt with what may be viewed as technicalities, taken as a whole they make it much harder for victims of discrimination to win lawsuits.

TCZEW, POLAND (FEB. 8) UPI - Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said Thursday the country might rebel against the nation's economic austerity program, and he offered to take over for Communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski in the event of trouble.

Walesa's remarks came as he was answering questions from some 500 workers in the ball-bearing plant at Tczew near the seaport of Gdansk.

The Solidarity-led government of Tadeusz Mazowiecki introduced tough economic austerity measures in January, promising that after two or three months people would begin to see an improvement in the nation's economic situation.

The packet of measures, which is intended to put Poland on the road to a market-oriented economy, included price hikes of about 140 percent and a freeze on wages.

''You were promised improvement of the situation in next two or three months,'' Walesa told the workers. ''If there are no results, the people will turn out to the streets to change the program.''

Walesa said he had no ambition to take over presidency from Jaruzelski, but he said he would be willing to step into the job if his assistance was needed in putting an end to social unrest. ''I would take the job temporarily'' to avoid a tragedy, he told the workers.

The Solidarity chief also said he would urge Moscow to withdraw its 60,000 troops from Poland during a planned trip to the Soviet Union, where he may meet with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. He was invited Jan. 19 to visit the Soviet Union but details of the visit have not yet been finalized.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The Army said Thursday it revoked the Combat Infantryman's Badge awarded to 14 soldiers who took part in the Dec. 20 invasion of Panama because an inspection of records showed they were not in the infantry.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said the erroneous awarding of medals is not out of the ordinary and that the badges were revoked only because the men were not members of the infantry.

The medals were awarded to the men in Texas upon their return from Panama.

The awarding of the Combat Infantryman's Badge became a point of controversy following the intervention in Panama because women military police who took part in combat were not allowed to receive them.

The Army noted at the time that no one - men or women - were allowed to receive the badges unless they were members of infantry units.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (FEB. 8) UPI - Authorities captured the father-in-law of a convicted Honduran drug trafficker serving time in an American jail and nabbed two Colombians wanted for cocaine smuggling in the United States, police said Thursday.

In related news, drug cartel bombing victims will receive credit preferences to rebuild homes and businesses destroyed in the 232 narco-terrorist attacks last year, Finance Minister Luis Fernando Alarcon announced Wednesday.

Alarcon estimated the bombings, which started last August after the government launched an all-out offensive on warring drug cartels, had cost the economy some $380 million, shaving about 1 percentage point off the 1989 gross national product.

In Wednesday's arrests, police grabbed Jose Antonio Estupinan Archilla, father-in-law of convicted kingpin Jose Ramon Matta Ballesteros, with some $170,000 in northern Bogota.

Matta Ballesteros, who escaped from a Colombian jail in 1986, was captured and extradited to the United States by Honduran authorities later the same year, triggering anti-American riots in Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital.

Nationalist protesters burned the U.S. consulate and several people died in the disturbances.

Matta Ballesteros is serving a jail term in the United States for ferrying cocaine and marijuana north from Colombia for the Cali drug cartel, headed by ex-banker Gilberto Rodriguez Orejuela.

Estupianan is not wanted in the United States but authorities said they wanted to investigate the source of the U.S. cash he was carrying. Under Colombian law, individuals are prohibited from carrying foreign money not registered with a state bank.

Authorities also captured Wednesday two Colombians, Raul Hernan Buchelli and his brother, Guido Luis Buchelli, in northern Bogota. They are wanted in the United States on drug trafficking charges and are believed linked to cocaine rings in Bogota and Medellin, Bogota newspapers reported Thursday.

Neither of the two Colombians are on the Justice Department list of 12 most wanted and authorities would not say which state wanted them.

Meanwhile, the bullet-riddled body of a retired army lieutenant colonel was found outside Bogota Tuesday. The body of Luis Jaime Lopez Zuluaga, 55 was covered with a white sheet on which was written, ''For killing innocent people on the HK,'' referring to the Avianca 727 jet liner downed by a drug cartel bomb last November, killing 110 people.

The jet was blown out of the sky on a flight from Bogota to Cali Nov. 27 and authorities blamed a bomb, apparently planted under an empty seat by drug cartel terrorists, for the explosion.

The killing of the former army man, who retired 11 years ago, is the latest in a string of murders in Bogota and Medellin that have claimed some 50 lives in the last month.

Authorities attribute them to vendettas among battling drug cartel hit squads and an effort by the kingpins to eliminate evidence against them.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - America's worldwide dominance of science and technology may be slipping as other nations close the gap in areas long considered bastions of U.S. excellence, a report concluded Thursday.

''The United States is strong presently in science and technology. We have been the leader for more than 40 years. And we still are,'' said Mary Good chairman of the National Science Board, which issued the report.

''At the same time the advantage that we had in the past is also gone. History tells us that nations go up and nations go down. But they truly can go down. If we don't get serious ... there's a real risk of a slow slide toward second-rate status,'' she told a news conference.

The 401-page ''Science and Engineering Indicators'' report concludes, ''We need a new national commitment to provide human, financial, and physical resources commensurate with the importance of science and technology to America's future.''

The report is issued every two years by the policy-making board of the National Science Foundation to help government, industry and academic leaders evaluate science and engineering in the nation based on a variety of criteria.

Although there were some promising areas, this year's report found a number of troubling signs, including:

-In 1988, U.S. inventors received 52 percent of the U.S. patents granted while foreigners received the remaining 48 percent - the highest share of U.S. patents ever granted to foreigners. The peak year for patents granted to Americans was in 1971.

-While the United States still spends more on research and development than the next four industrialized countries combined, international competitors such as Japan and West Germany spend more in relation to their total gross national product.

-American students in grades five, nine and 12 perform poorly during international competitions in math and science compared with other industrialized nations and ''even some Third World countries.''

-Increases in graduate enrollment in science and engineering slowed from an average annual rate of 2 percent from 1980 to 1987 to 1 percent from 1987 to 1988.

-While 20 years ago America had a far larger fraction of its labor force in science and engineering than any other country, ''today a number of our competitors have employment fractions comparable to ours, and are increasing their numbers of scientists and engineers more rapidly than we are.''

-The U.S. rate of civilian-oriented research and development as a fraction of the gross national product is only about two-thirds that of Japan and West Germany.

''The leading science indicators indicate caution in a number of areas,'' said National Science Foundation Director Erich Bloch.

DEARBORN, MI (FEB. 8) UPI - Ford Motor Co. announced Thursday it is recalling about 650 1990-model L-series trucks to correct a possible defect that could result in a loss of steering control. The trucks covered by the recall are equipped with the optional tilt-telescopic steering column.

In some cases, Ford said, a nut and bolt assembly clamping the steering coupling to the steering column may not have been properly tightened and could loosen after extended mileage, resulting in a loss of steering control.

Dealers are being asked to remove the existing bolt, nut and lock washer assembly and install a new bolt and self-locking nut of a higher hardness grade material, said John P. King, manager of the Parts and Service Engineering Office in Ford's Parts and Service Division.

Owners will be notified by mail and asked to return the vehicles to their dealers to have the work performed at no charge, King said. Of the vehicles affected, 466 are in the United States and 198 in Canada.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - A delegation from the Soviet Union's legislative Defense and State Security Committee watched a display of democracy Thursday - members of the House berating Air Force officials about major U.S. weapons.

The 10-member delegation from the Supreme Soviet's defense panel, accompanied by translators and staff members, are on a two-week visit to the United States. Last summer, a delegation from the House Armed Services Committee made an unprecedented trip to the Soviet Union.

The Soviets, as their American counterparts did in the Soviet Union, will visit military installations. Thursday's agenda also included a Pentagon tour, meeting with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, informal discussion with House panel members and an evening reception on Capitol Hill.

A booth for translators was set up in the House committee room, and while the visiting delegation was pulling out pocket cameras and photographing one another in the citadel of U.S. democracy, the two translators did just the same.

''We are pleased to be able to demonstrate our democracy in action,'' Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., told the delegation. The Soviets then saw a vigorous display, with Aspin challenging Air Force officials over the Bush administration's arms control position, considering the changes in Eastern Europe and likely cuts in the defense budget.

And Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., a veteran House liberal, sharply criticized such prized Air Force programs as the B-2 bomber and the rail-mounted MX missile and truck-mounted Midgetman missile.

But he broke up the crowd when the said:

''I've been in Congress for 20 years and for 19 of those 20 years we kept hearing, 'The Russians are coming. The Russians are coming. The Russians are coming.'''

He continued, ''I kept saying the Russians aren't coming. I now realize I made a mistake. The Russians have come, but they did not come in a spirit of war. They are here in a spirit of openness, communication, understanding.''

The committee's senior Republican, Rep. Bill Dickinson of Alabama, said, ''So many things have changed in such a short time. That sort of makes one's mind reel. I really never thought we'd have a visiting delegation from the Soviet Union sitting in on our hearing.''

Dickinson drew some chuckles as well when he said committee members were more used to seeing ''Pravda and Tass (reporters) sitting in the back, and perhaps even the KGB, I don't know.''

The visiting delegation was headed by the Supreme Soviet committee's chairman, Vladimir Lapygin, 65, a scientist noted for his work on aviation systems and space technology, particularly the Soviet space shuttle, Buran. He is also a specialist in ICBM guidance systems.

The deputy chairman is Col. Valeriy Ochirov, 38, a decorated veteran of the war in Afghanistan.

During its tour, the group also is visiting the Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, Navy and Marine units in San Diego, Calif., a Minuteman 2 missile site, the Strategic Air Command in Nebraska, and an F-16 plant in Texas.

The tour wraps up with a visit to the Kennedy Space Center and Disneyworld in Florida.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Oscar-winner Anthony Quinn underwent a coronary bypass operation Thursday that surgeons said would not affect the veteran actor's career.

Doctors at Mount Sinai Hospital took about four hours to perform the heart operation on the 73-year-old Quinn, said his New York publicist, Kathy Benvin.

''The doctors said it was a routine operation,'' she said. ''He has a very strong heart and there were no complications. They say he will have no trouble continuing his career in all respects.''

Hospital spokeswoman Elaine Blankenship said Quinn was listed in critical condition, but explained that was the normal description for patients who had undergone such major surgery.

Benvin said Quinn had complained of ''discomfort'' for the past few weeks, and his doctors had decided the heart surgery was necessary.

The tall, craggy-faced Quinn, who makes his home in Manhattan, has been working steadily in television and the movies, as well as at his painting and sculpturing.

The veteran of 120 movies just completed NBC-TV's ''The Old Man and the Sea,'' to be broadcast next month. His latest movie, ''Revenge,'' in which he co-stars with Kevin Kostner, was to be released this month.

In October, Quinn had a major exhibition of his paintings and sculptures at the Plaza Hotel.

His Academy Awards came for ''Viva Zapata'' in which he played a man who, like his father, was a Mexican revolutionary, and ''Lust For Life,'' when he portrayed the painter, Gauguin.

But he is probably better remembered for his roles as Zorba in ''Zorba the Greek'' and as Bombolini in ''The Secret of Santa Vittoria.''

SACRAMENTO, CA (FEB. 8) UPI - Three days after he was told to resign or face possible expulsion for a political corruption conviction, state Sen. Joseph Montoya said Thursday he will give up the office he has held for 12 years.

An aide to the Whittier Democrat said Montoya would announce his resignation Thursday afternoon before a group of supporters and friends at the La Puente City Hall, where he began his career in government in 1968.

Mike Duffy, chief of staff for the former La Puente city councilman and mayor, would not comment further.

On Monday, the Senate's powerful Rules Committee unanimously stripped Montoya of his committee assignments and asked him to resign his office by the end of the week or face possible expulsion.

Senate leader David Roberti, D-Los Angeles, said he believed there were enough votes in the Senate to expel Montoya, a claim confirmed by interviews with numerous senators.

Under the state Constitution, Montoya could have been expelled from office by a two-thirds vote of the Senate - a provision that has not been used since four senators were expelled in a bribery scandal in 1905.

The senator still qualifies for a state pension of about $22,000 annually.

Montoya was found guilty last week on seven of 10 counts of racketeering, extortion and money laundering. A federal jury deliberated only four days before finding the 50-year-old senator guilty of accepting money from a bogus company - part of an elaborate FBI sting operation - to ram a bill through the Legislature.

Montoya, the first legislator indicted as a result of the investigation, has said he plans to appeal the verdicts and is ''confident of my ultimate vindication.'' His sentencing is scheduled for April 26.

Democratic Assemblyman Charles Calderon of Montebello already has announced his candidacy for the seat held by Montoya.

Montoya was elected to the California Senate in 1978 as a self-proclaimed good government candidate, defeating an incumbent under FBI investigation but never indicted.

The self-described ''poor kid'' who made good was used to winning uphill battles.

Before being elected to the state Assembly in 1972, Montoya was a county social worker trying to raise a young family on just $14,000 a year.

But by the time he became ensnared in an undercover FBI investigation in 1988, Montoya owned 19 pieces of real estate throughout California valued at a total of $2 million.

Now, Montoya is selling off that real estate and has reimbursed his campaign fund thousands of dollars that he had siphoned from it for personal uses. Two expensive defense attorneys have taken many of his resources.

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (FEB. 8) UPI - A businessman armed with a Soviet-made AK-47 rifle entered a house in a northern Nicaraguan town, killed six people, wounded another and held several people hostage for six hours, Radio Sandino said Thursday.

Radio Sandino said businessman Orlando Canales Sandoval entered the house of Maura Huete Wednesday night in Barrio Hermanos Zamora neighborhood of Ocotal, about 155 miles north of Managua, and began shooting.

Later, Canales held several people hostage, Radio Sandino said.

''The Sandinista (government) police arrived at the place and managed to convince Canales by 4:30 a.m. today (Thursday) to hand himself over to the Nicaraguan Red Cross and free the rest of the poeple,'' said Radio Sandino which did not specify the number of hostages.

Lt. Col. Leonel Sanchez, chief of the Ocotal police, identified Canales as a local businessman, and said the motive of the crime was unknown.

Sanchez said that six people were killed, including Huete and her 7-year-old child.

Marcelino Mayorga, a witness, said the body of one of the six victims was found on the street outside the house, indicating that Canales may have started shooting before entering the house.

''After handing over hostages, Canales Sandoval continued to shoot inside the house and also against the Sandinista police,'' Mayorga said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Members of the House Armed Services Committee berated senior Air Force officials Thursday about the B-2 stealth bomber and two mobile missiles during a dispute over arms control policy and defense spending.

A visiting delegation from the Soviet defense committee watched as Air Force Secretary Donald Rice and chief of staff Gen. Larry Welch testified. The officers insisted they are not letting the U.S. position in long-range missile talks justify requests for strategic weapons.

Noting that world events are moving very rapidly, Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., said the defense budget and arms control package ''may be overtaken by events or a shift in public opinion.''

The U.S. position at the strategic arms talks contains a variety of counting rules for bombers, with penetrating bombers such as the stealth counted as one warhead against overall ceilings. Standoff bombers such as the cruise missile, B-1s and the B-52 with cruise missiles count as 10 warheads. The Soviets want to count the cruise missile platforms as having 20 warheads.

Aspin, who is promoting a change in the way bombers are counted - four warheads each - cautioned Rice and Welch that the Bush administration cannot use its arms talks position to justify the request for more B-2 bombers and two mobile missiles.

Aspin said Congress may not buy as many planes as the administration wants and might buy just one of the two missile systems.

President Bush's budget calls for $5.5 billion for five more B-2s intended to penetrate the Soviet Union in a war, the rail-mobile 10-warhead MX missile similar to the Soviet Union's already fielded SS-24, and the truck-mounted one-warhead Midgetman, similar to Moscow's already fielded SS-25.

''There are two ways to go. I would suggest we change the START (talks) position to make the thing consistent with where we're likely to come out in the budget process. The other option is to stick with the START position and use that as an argument to get the force structure,'' said Aspin, saying the latter option ''sticks in the craw.''

Aspin said the problem ''comes down very heavily on the B-2,'' a radar-evading plane that will cost at least $70 billion to build 132 of the planes.

Welch said that the ''underlying argument ... is to build a more stabilizing deterrent force upon which both sides agree.''

Rice said that all the weapons are part of the nation's modernization of its strategic weaponry and ''if it turns out that some elements are unaffordable in a particular time period, that does not obviate their value.'' He said weapons unaffordable now could be bought ''on a different timetable.''

One of the sharpest exchanges came when liberal Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif. said that the budget ''gave lip service to change, but when you remove the lip service, this budget could have been given last year, five years, 10 years ago. This presentation is still looking backwards.

''We have a deterrent. This is a war-fighting capability.''

Dellums said the United States could save the remaining $40 billion for the B-2 by lying, declaring that the plane exists in sufficient quantities and challenging the Soviets to prove otherwise.

''I've got a great sense of deja vu from the last time we discussed this '' said Welch, at which point Dellums interrupted to say, ''But the world changed.''

Welch then told Dellums that while there have been enormous changes in the world, ''There is no indication of the Soviets intending to do anything other than maximizing their strategic nuclear deterrent capability to the limits allowed by START. They are modernizing and they are modernizing much faster than we are.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (FEB. 8) UPI - NASA's Galileo probe is hurtling toward Venus for a velocity-boosting flyby Saturday to slingshot the robot craft back toward Earth and ultimately on to Jupiter in a three-bank celestial billiards shot.

With its high-tech instruments busy recording data about a planet they were never intended to study, the nuclear-powered $1.4 billion spacecraft will pass within about 10,000 miles of cloud-shrouded Venus at 12:59 a.m. EST Saturday.

The tug of Venus's gravity will boost Galileo's velocity relative to the sun by about 4,990 mph to 88,740 mph, putting the craft on course for a Dec. 8 flyby of Earth, the first of two encounters with the home planet that will finish ''pumping up'' the probe's velocity to slingshot it on to Jupiter.

Galileo project scientist Torrance Johnson at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., said the data gathered about Venus will be ''good, solid supplemental science to what we already know about Venus. I don't really anticipate any big surprises.

''The only place where we might get real surprises there is the plasma wave instrument may have an opportunity to pick up radio emissions from Venus lightning,'' he said in a telephone interview.

Galileo's round-about path to the solar system's largest planet was the result of decisions made in the wake of the 1986 Challenger disaster that left NASA without a shuttle-compatible booster powerful enough to boost the spacecraft directly to Jupiter.

Instead, Galileo, launched from the shuttle Atlantis on Oct. 18, was fired to Venus for the first of three gravity-assist flybys that will increase the probe's velocity enough to reach Jupiter in 1995.

Along the way, the spacecraft will aim its instruments at Venus and Earth for what amounts to bonus science observations, giving the Galileo project team a chance to test the probe's instruments and computers.

Galileo is the most sophisticated interplanetary spacecraft ever built, equipped with a battery of high-tech sensors that will study Jupiter from orbit. It also is carrying a small instrument package that will be dropped into the planet's stormy atmosphere to make direct measurements.

For the Venus flyby, data is being recorded on three tracks of a four-track tape recorder for relay to scientists on Earth in October.

''We're intending to have most of the instruments operational,'' said Johnson. ''The scan platform, both the (TV) imaging system and the near infrared mapping spectrometer, the NIMS, will be making fairly extensive observations.''

The NIMS experiment will be used ''to look for deep clouds in the atmosphere of Venus, the structure of the atmosphere, and the vertical distribution of things like water in the atmosphere.''

''The (television) imaging system will do most of its work after Venus closest approach on our way out when we're looking back at the lit side of the planet,'' Johnson said. ''What they're going to be doing is ... trying to understand the circulation of small features in the upper atmosphere of Venus.''

He said the pictures ''will not look much, if any, different from pictures of Venus people have seen before, but we have the opportunity to use what we've learned to design a better experiment to learn some things about the way the atmosphere works.''

One instrument aboard Galileo will make temperature maps of the upper atmosphere over the planet's south polar region - a first - and others will study how Venus interacts with the solar wind, a supersonic stream of electrically charged particles blasted away from the sun.

''Our dust collector is taking data continuously, too,'' Johnson said, to find out ''if there's anything going on with Venus's interaction with interplanetary dust, concentrating it or clearing a path in the inner solar system.''

In addition, Galileo's instruments are continuously recording the abundance of interplanetary dust and taking ultraviolet readings as it races along.

''So we're kind of doing tomography, doing a CAT scan of the inner solar system at ultraviolet wavelengths and measuring the very fine interplanetary dust particles ... as we go in and then come back out again by the Earth and then out to Jupiter,'' Johnson said.

SAN FRANCISCO (FEB. 8) UPI - The trial of the first federal judge in the United States ever charged with racketeering got under way Thursday, and defense lawyers accused an FBI agent of building a false case because of his dislike of the liberal judge's rulings.

In his opening statements in the trial of U.S. District Judge Robert Aguilar, defense lawyer Patrick Hallinan said FBI agent Thomas Carlon was the ''architect'' behind the case and was an outspoken opponent of liberal judges.

Government objections cut off further complaints by Hallinan against the agent.

Aguilar, 58, a 1980 appointee of President Jimmy Carter, is accused in an eight-count indictment of using his U.S. District Court office in San Jose in a racketeering conspiracy to obstruct justice.

If convicted, he faces up to 55 years in prison and $2 million in fines. He could also end up being impeached and removed from office by Congress.

Aguilar was one of the first Hispanic judges appointed to the federal bench in California. He is the first federal judge ever charged with racketeering and only the fourth federal judge indicted since 1980.

He is accused of trying to influence two other judges in criminal cases, lying to the FBI and leaking wiretap surveillance information to felons.

U.S. District Judge Louis Bechtle was flown in from Philadelphia to preside over the trial, which is expected to last six weeks.

Hallinan told jurors that Aguilar rose from grinding poverty and brought his concern for the disenfranchised, minorities and women to the bench.

''That engendered the consternation of prosecutors,'' Hallinan said.

Hallinan then began to outline the liberal rulings Aguilar had made against the government, including a decision that allowed homosexuals from foreign countries to be admitted to the United States.

But the defense lawyer was stopped by objections by U.S. prosecutor Ralph Martin.

''I only ask that you listen to agent Thomas Carlon, the architect of this prosecution,'' Hallinan replied.

Martin laid out the government's case against Aguilar in simple terms, describing how Aguilar allegedly helped his former secretary remain a fugitive in Mexico from 1980 to 1983 to avoid a prison term for tax evasion.

He also said Aguilar attempted to use his influence with two other judges to help Fresno multimillionaire Ronald Cloud in a $20 million bank fraud case and to help Teamster Rudy Tham overturn an embezzling conviction.

Martin suggested that Aguilar all but admitted his guilt to attorney Edward Solomon during a conversation in which Solomon wore a hidden tape recorder to help the FBI build its case against Aguilar.

But Hallinan told the jurors, ''Keep in mind: where is the motive? Where is the payoff? Why, why would Aguilar do what the government says?''

Also named in the June 13, 1989, indictment were Abe ''The Trigger'' Chapman, 83, who is related by marriage to Aguilar and is a reputed Mafia assassin of the 1930s; and Tham, 66.

Tham and Chapman face possible 10-year prison terms if convicted of single counts of conspiring with Aguilar.

In the past decade, three federal judges have been indicted - Harry Claiborne, Nevada, in December 1983; Walter Nixon, Mississippi, 1985; and Alcee Hastings, Florida, 1981.

Claiborne and Nixon were convicted of various charges. Hastings was acquitted.

All three were impeached and removed from office by Congress.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Jurors Thursday spent their third day of deliberations in the assault trial of reputed Mafia boss John Gotti examining evidence describing conflicting accounts of the shooting of a union official.

Gotti, 49, the reputed head of the Gambino crime family, is accused of ordering the wounding of John O'Connor, the business agent of Carpenters Union Local 608. The violence was allegedly ordered in retaliation for the trashing of a Gambino-owned restaurant built with non-union labor.

O'Connor, 53, was shot four times in the buttocks on May 7, 1986, by members of an Irish gang known as the Westies, which was trying to curry favor with the Gambinos.

Gotti and a co-defendant, Anthony Guerrieri, 60, an alleged Gambino solder are accused of assault and conspiracy.

Deliberations were apparently back on track at state Supreme Court a day after Acting Justice Edward McLaughlin told the bickering jury to stop attacking one another and try to work together.

Gotti, strutting through the courtroom while awaiting a verdict that could imprison him for life, joked about the tumultuous deliberations.

''They're going to convict Cherkasky, Schlanger and Ruggiero,'' Gotti quipped to reporters, referring to the prosecutors, assistant district attorneys Michael Cherkasky and Jeffrey Schlanger, and a deceased co-defendant, Angelo Ruggiero, an alleged Gambino captain.

Early Thursday, the jury asked for notes from a detective who debriefed the state's star witness, admitted Westie James McElroy. McElroy claimed he accompanied gunman James Schlereth to the scene of the shooting and witnessed its aftermath.

The jury also asked for the federal government's transcript of a secretly recorded 1986 jailhouse conversation between two admitted Westies, Kevin Kelly and Mickey Featherstone. The federal transcript shows them discussing the shooting but makes no mention of Schlereth. In fact, the transcript was used to convict Kelly of racketeering on the theory that he was the shooter.

The state produced a different transcript of the same muffled tape for Gotti's trial. The state transcript identified Schlereth as the triggerman and included the phrase ''He popped him.''

To explain the differing transcripts, a state tape expert, Edward Wright, said that after listening to the recordings for four years, ''the inaudibles became audible.''

But defense lawyers ridiculed the state for the changes. They said the comments were never made and the government inserted them into the transcript to make it fit the theory of the state case.

SOFIA, BULGARIA (FEB. 8) UPI - New Prime Minister Andrei Lukanov presented an all-communist Cabinet to the parliament Thursday after opposition groups spurned his offer to include them in a broad-based national unity government.

Lukanov, in introducing his nominees to the National Assembly, indicated the communists would press ahead with their program of radical democratic reform even if they had to do it alone. But he added he hoped eventually to win the opposition's support.

''The new government will serve national interests, not party interests,'' Lukanov said. ''We will rely on all political forces in the renovation and democratization of the country.''

The parliament overwhelmingly approved the entire slate of Cabinet nominees, which includes four holdovers from the government of former Prime Minister Georgi Atanassov. Atanassov resigned Thursday under criticism he mismanaged the economy.

Lukanov, who was elected prime minister Saturday, is one of the leaders of the communist party's progressive wing which emerged from last week's extraordinary congress in firm control of the party.

The liberals have introduced sweeping economic and political reforms since driving hard-line leader Todor Zhivkov from power in November, but their efforts to win support from Bulgaria's growing opposition movement have failed.

Zhelyu Zhelev, leader of the main opposition group Union of Democratic Forces, has twice rejected invitations to join the communists in a national unity government until promised elections are held in May.

Zhelev said the opposition would be reduced to the role of ''puppets'' in such a coalition because the communists still control all the levers of power in Bulgaria.

In a further blow to the party, the Bulgarian Agrarian Party - the only other legal party in the country and one that has been completely subservient to the communists since 1948 - announced Wednesday it also would not accept positions in the government.

Agrarian leader Viktor Vulkov said Thursday his party would support the new all-communist Cabinet, but would not participate in any government except one made up of representatives of all political groups in the country.

Loukanov, in his speech, said his Cabinet was ''open to other members and can be expanded.''

Referring to the failed negotiations on including non-communists in the government, he said his original intention had been to appoint five Agrarian party members and five others without party affiliation to Cabinet posts.

''Up to the last moment I had the optimistic feeling that the consultations were going well,'' he said. ''...Unfortunately this variant was not realized.''

Keeping their old jobs in the new Cabinet were Foreign Minister Boyko Dimitrov, Defense Minister Dobri Dzhurov, Interior Minister Atanas Semerdzhiev and Finance Minister Belcho Belchev.

CHICAGO (FEB. 8) UPI - Japanese carmaker Mazda Motor Corp. said Thursday it will sell its own version of Ford Motor Co.'s new Explorer sport utility truck starting this fall.

Mazda's version, called the Navajo, marks the first time a Japanese automaker will have an American manufacturer build a vehicle at a U.S. plant and sell it in the U.S. market. It underscores the global melding by automakers as they forge partnerships to cut costs and remain competitive in the 1990s.

The program also marks yet another association between Ford and Mazda. The two have been financial partners since 1979 when Ford bought a 25 percent stake in Mazda. But only recently have they begun joint collaboration on producing new vehicles.

The Navajo, shown during a preview for the Chicago Auto Show that starts its nine-day run Saturday, is essentially a rebadged version of Ford's Explorer to go on sale this spring as a 1991-model, replacing the Ford Bronco II.

The Explorer will be offered in a four-door as well as a two-door model. But Mazda will sell only the two-door version, excluding it from what is expected to be the most rapidly expanding part of that market segment. Ford and General Motors Corp. are introducing four-door trucks to compete with Chrysler Corp.'s Jeep Cherokee and import models, like the Toyota 4Runner.

In fact, Mazda expects to sell about 20,000 Navajos a year, only a tenth of the sales estimates for the Explorer. Still, Mazda is expected to benefit from the arrangement. Selling the two-door Navajo allows it to sidestep the 25 percent import tariff imposed on two-door trucks while putting the automaker into a new market segment.

"We need to be a full-line marketer," said Yoshi Taura, president of Mazda Motor of America Inc., noting that 1990 marks Mazda's 20th year in the U.S. market.

Both the Explorer and Navajo will be built at Ford's Louisville, Ky., plant, but their 4.0 liter V6 engines will come from Ford's Cologne plant in West Germany, Ford and Mazda said. Prices on either vehicle have not yet been announced, although they will most likely sell in the $18,000 range.

Earlier vehicle building partnerships between Ford and Mazda include Ford's Probe sports coupe, built at Mazda's Flat Rock, Mich. assembly plant. Ford's all-new Ford Escort and Tracer subcompact cars to debut later this year are heavily based on Mazda's subcompacts already on sale.

Mazda and Ford executives also confirmed they are studying the possibility of jointly building a pickup truck in the United States, probably at a Ford plant.

On other matters, Mazda executives said a task force is still reviewing plans to create a second sales channel to sell luxury cars in the United States, like its larger Japanese rivals.

However, Keiji Asano, senior managing director of Mazda Motor Corp., expressed concern about those sales networks that include Toyota's Lexus and Nissan's Infiniti divisions which opened late last year.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., introduced a $125 million bill Thursday promoting math, science and engineering education, calling it an essential first step in re-establishing U.S. ''economic pre-eminence.''

The legislation combines proposals from several senators and has attracted support from 13 co-sponsors, including Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, who pledged that the bill would get a ''high priority'' this session.

The bill, which authorizes $125 million in spending in 1991, would pay some college tuition for students who agree to become science and math teachers as well as set up 10 regional consortiums that would involve business and community groups in devising science, math and engineering curriculums.

Other provisions would create a National Institute of Teaching and Learning to develop teaching strategies, provide ''bootstrap grants'' for college science and math departments, train technicians and recruit minorities and women.

Echoing one of President Bush's goals for American schools, the legislation proposes that U.S. students be first in the world in math, science and engineering achievement by the next century.

In introducing the bill, Kennedy said most elementary school teachers are not ''fully qualified'' to teach science or math, a third of U.S. high schools do not teach physics and the ''situation is equally bleak'' at the college level.

The result, he said, is that America no longer ''sets the pace'' in science and engineering research, which in turn threatens the nation's economic future.

''Our current problems stem in large part from our under-investment in human resources,'' said Kennedy, who was flanked at a news conference by finalists in the Westinghouse Science Talent Search competition.

''We have what it takes to turn the situation around. It is entirely within our power to alter national priorities, make far-sighted decisions, and re-establish our educational excellence and economic pre-eminence.''

But sponsors of the bill emphasized it was a ''first step'' and ''not a panacea.'' Hatfield, for example, said he hopes future legislation would require that any government appropriation for research and development include money that would be used to educate future researchers.

MEXICO CITY (FEB. 8) UPI - A group of 32 leftist rebels, wounded in El Salvador's civil war and holed up for three months in a church, arrived in Cuba Thursday to receive medical treatment, the official Cuban news agency Presna Latina said.

In a dispatch monitored in Mexico City, the Cuban agency said that 32 rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, who had been holed up in a Salvadoran church since Nov. 7, arrived at Havana airport early Thursday, and were received by FMLN representatives in Cuba.

Francois Musy, representative of the International Committee of the Red Cross in El Salvador, said the disabled rebels were evacuated on a chartered flight.

''They left the country on a flight chartered by the ICRC (Red Cross),'' Musy told United Press International in a telephone interview.

In a similar operation on Oct. 7, 48 FMLN wounded were evacuated to Cuba. On that occasion the disabled guerrillas pressured the Salvadoran government to allow the evacuation by occupying the Mexican Embassy for four days after being holed up in San Salvador's Calvario Cathedral for six weeks. Troops guarded the church but respected the sanctuary of the rebel fighters.

''After three months of blockade of their refuge by the armed forces and police of El Salvador, the 32 wounded of the FMLN arrived in Cuba today to receive medical attention,'' Prensa Latina said.

Last week, the rebel group rejected a government amnesty offer to allow them to seek medical treatment in another country. The rebels said the acceptance of the amnesty, which was approved the Salvadoran legislature, would brand them as criminals rather than combatants in the country's decade-long war that has cost over 72,000 lives, mostly civilians.

Prensa Latina said that to date about 200 wounded Salvadoran rebels have received medical treatment in Cuba.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - CBS Thursday suspended TV essayist Andy Rooney for three months following an interview in which he was quoted as saying black people ''watered down'' their genes because the less intelligent have the most children.

Rooney's future after the three months was still in question.

''I have discussed with Andy Rooney the statements attributed to him,'' said David Burke, president CBS News. ''I have made it clear that CBS News cannot tolerate such remarks, or anything that approximates such comments, since they in no way reflect the views of this organization.

''I have suspended Mr. Rooney without pay for three months. At the end of that time, we will have further discussions about his future association with CBS News,'' Burke said.

Burke said Rooney ''has expressed his dismay that the values of CBS news have been called into question and offers his deepest apologies to any in our society who were given offense.''

Rooney, best-selling author and the droll commentator on CBS's ''60 Minutes,'' earlier denied he made the statements. He was not immediately available for comment.

The head of the NAACP termed the reported comments ''racist'' and ''mean-spirited.''

They were contained in a interview with a reporter with The Advocate, a biweekly homosexual newspaper based in Los Angeles.

The Advocate's New York correspondent, Chris Bull, said Rooney talked with him for about 20 minutes in a phone interview in mid-January.

''I've believed all along that most people are born with equal intelligence, but blacks have watered down their genes because the less intelligent ones are the ones that have the most children,'' Bull quoted Rooney as saying.

''They drop out of school early, do drugs and get pregnant,'' he reportedly said.

Bull said he did not make a tape recording of the conversation.

Rooney told the New York Daily News Wednesday, ''I'm not a racist,'' and dismissed the comments attributed to him as ''tacky.''

However, he added, ''I wouldn't be surprised if I got fired.''

It was the second racist flap CBS has found itself in two years.

In January 1988, CBS fired Jimmy ''the Greek'' Snyder as a commentator on ''The NFL Today'' show after he told an interviewer that blacks were better athletes than whites because they were ''bred to be that way'' during the days of slavery.

''I am certainly hopeful that Mr. Rooney did not make those statements,'' said NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks in a phone call from Baltimore.

''If indeed he made those statements, they are racist, mean-spirited, ignorant and ill-formed, and I would certainly hope that CBS would take appropriate action,'' he said.

Rooney's comments were slated to appear in the Feb. 27 issue of The Advocate, which claims a circulation of about 100,000.

Rooney told the News that in his interview with the Advocate reporter he said people with less education tended to have children who also tended to be undereducated.

He said that while that tends to be true of blacks, he did not believe it was a factor of race.

''Anyone who knows me knows I'm not racist,'' he said.

In the interview with the Advocate, Rooney also was quoted as saying he believes homosexuality has ''something to do with genes.''

He was harshly criticized by the homosexual community following comments perceived as anti-gay made during a CBS special called ''The Year with Andy Rooney'' that was broadcast Dec. 28.

On that program, Rooney said people recognized in 1989 that many self-induced ills, such as ''too much alcohol, too much food, drugs, homosexual unions, cigarettes ... (are) all known to lead quite often to premature death.''

Gay activists criticized Rooney for blaming homosexuals for AIDS and labeling gay relationships as a vice comparable to alcoholism or drug addiction.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. said Thursday it has laid off 140 employees in connection with the recent merger of the two pharmaceutical giants.

Further layoffs are expected, but it is "premature to speculate" on the exact number, said company spokesman Jerry Parrott. Bristol-Myers Squibb employs about 53,000 people, he said.

Of the layoffs, 88 were former Squibb employees based in Princeton, N.J., while others worked at the Bristol-Myers Squibb headquarters in New York, he said.

"It is part of the ongoing process of integration," Parrott said. "We have redundancies that are being eliminated. Some of this is inevitable." Both companies imposed a freeze on outside hiring around the time the merger was announced, he said. The merger was finalized in October.

The company previously has laid off 23 employees, he said. Layoffs will be made "evenhandedly" between former Squibb and former Bristol-Myers workers he added.

KARACHI, PAKISTAN (FEB. 8) UPI - Troops shot and killed two curfew violators Thursday, and gunbattles between government and opposition supporters and attacks by snipers left another six people dead and 14 wounded, officials said.

Authorities also recovered the bodies of seven more people shot on Wednesday, bringing to at least 57 the death toll from two days of unrest in the southern port of Karachi, Pakistan's largest city. More than 125 people have been wounded.

The violence was sparked Wednesday by a general strike in the city called by the Mohajir Qaumi Movement, an opposition party representing Mohajir migrants from India. MQM militants enforcing the strike fought gunbattles with troops, fired indiscriminately on passersby and set hundreds of shops houses and vehicles alight.

The MQM called the strike to demand the release of more than 100 of its workers it says have been kidnapped by members of the Pakistan Students Federation, a wing of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party. The PSF alleges the MQM student wing has adbucted about 80 of its members.

The MQM, which holds 14 National Assembly seats, signed an agreement with the minority PPP government after the November 1988 elections. But it joined the opposition in September, maintaining the Bhutto administration had failed to promote the interests of the Mohajirs.

Troops Thursday enforced indefinite curfews in 17 areas of the city to prevent a resurgence of the violence, officials said. They said the soldiers shot and killed two people, including a woman, violating the restrictions.

They said a gunbattle broke out between MQM and PPP workers during a funeral procession for one of those who died on Wednesday. One person was killed and four wounded in the exchange, the officials said.

Snipers killed another five people, including an eight-year-old girl, and wounded 10 others.

Militants also set fire to a flour market in one area of the city under curfew, the officials said.

Karachi was otherwise largely deserted with very few shops open in areas not under curfew. Almost all government offices remained closed and most public and private vehicles stayed off the roads.

A government spokesman in Islamabad said 42 people were shot and killed on Wednesday, including a soldier and four police officers, Hospital sources said more than 115 were wounded by bullets, stabbings or fire.

Both sides blame the other for the violence. The MQM has charged the trouble was sparked by gunfire from security forces, while the government said MQM workers fired indiscriminately to create chaos in the city.

Ethnic violence in Karachi and surrounding Sind Province in recent years has killed hundreds of people. The native Sindis resent the power and wealth of the Mohajirs, whose families migrated to Pakistan from India after the 1947 partition of the subcontinent.

The government last week accused India of sending hundreds of agents into Sind to provoke further unrest.

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA (FEB. 8) UPI - Ten of the 50 Chilean prisoners who tunneled out of a downtown Santiago prison to freedom are hiding in Mendoza but Argentine officials have no plans to arrest them, a local government official said Thursday.

The source, who asked not to be identified, told United Press International in a telephone interview that telephone calls from the former prisoners to family members in Chile enabled Argentine intelligence agents to locate the fugitives. He said that officials had no intention of arresting the escapees but gave no reason for the decision.

Other officials declined to comment on the report.

Mendoza, capital of the Andean province of the same name on the Chilean border, is located 660 miles west of Buenos Aires.

The prisoners, in a spectacular escape Jan. 30, used a tunnel 300 feet long and 1 1/2 feet high to flee the Santiago Public Jail, eight blocks from the presidential palace.

Seven of the prisoners were captured shortly after the escape.

The Mendoza security services traced the callers and were able to determine that one of the fugitives hiding in Argentina was Victor Diaz Caro, convicted of attempting to assassinate Chilean President Augusto Pinochet in September of 1986, the source said.

The investigations, coordinated with the Chilean consulate in Mendoza, concluded that at least 10 of the escapees were able to flee to Argentina, the source said.

The majority of prisoners involved in the escape were members of the Manuel Rodriquez Patriotic Front, an armed branch of the Communist Party. Military prosectutors had sought death sentences for some of the prisoners for their role in the Sept. 7, 1986 attack on Pinochet's caravan that left five bodyguards dead.

JERUSALEM (FEB. 8) UPI - An Israeli court ruled Thursday that an 84-year-old great-grandmother could refuse the amputation of her gangrenous leg even though doctors believed she would die without the operation.

Ruth Trabelsi, 84, said she wanted to ''enter the Garden of Eden with two feet.'' Relatives and rabbis had urged the Tunisian-born Trabelsi to agree to doctors' recommendations that one of her legs be amputated to stop the spread of gangrene.

''If she is not operated on her life will end soon,'' Dr. Amos Mazor, Trabelsi's physician, told Army Radio.

On Wednesday, a Magistrate's Court in Nazareth ordered a psychiatrist to examine Trabelsi, who has 258 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. The psychiatrist determined that Trabelsi was mentally competent and understood the implications of her decision.

Based on the determination, the court ruled Thursday that Trabelsi could refuse the operation.

During an emotional discussion in Judge Oded Gershon's chambers Wednesday, Trabelsi's son, Eliahu, told the differing sides in the case, ''What do you want from her? She's 84. Let her die in honor as she chooses,'' The Jerusalem Post reported.

The court case sparked much discussion in Israel over the legal and moral right of patients to refuse life-saving measures. In an effort to clarify Israeli law on the issue, a member of Parliament introduced legislation Wednesday that would give patients the right to refuse treatment once they received relevant information on their conditions.

''If (Trabelsi) does not agree to have the operation we cannot operate according to the law today,'' Mazor said after the court decision. ''We are trying to convince her, but so far we have not succeeded.''

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (FEB. 8) UPI - The European Investment Bank has already approved $1.2 billion in loans to Poland and Hungary and could soon help other Central and East European countries, officials said Thursday.

Future loans to Eastern Europe had not yet been set, but "we stand ready to help in a quite substantial way," said Ernst-Gunther Broder, president of the European Community financial institution.

The investment bank also supports the new European Bank for Reconstruction and Development and stands "ready to provide technical advice and logistical support," he told a news conference. The reconstruction bank got its start at last December's European Community summit, held in Strasbourg, France.

Total EIB lending in 1989 totaled $12.25 billion European Currency Units, or $15.07 billion, an increase of more than 20 percent over the 1988 level. All but $753 million was loaned within the 12-nation EC.

The loans to Poland and Hungary, to be spread over the next three years, were approved by the EIB board of governors in December to help those countries establish market economies. Initial loans will support transportation projects in Poland and telecommunications projects in Hungary.

Broder said East Germany could qualify for loans if the EC Council of Ministers and the bank's governors approve. East Germany would "automatically become a member" of the EIB if it joined the EC, he said.

European officials including Commission President Jacques Delors, the top EC administrative officer, say East Germany would be a special case if it were to apply for Community membership. Other countries will have to wait until after the Community has launched its unified market in 1993.

Broder said EIB loans would be made to Eastern European governments, as well as the private sector, if proposed projects had merit. "You cannot limit this bank or any institution to private sector lending in light of the situation involving these countries," he said. "There is a vital need for certain infrastructure developments and they have to take place."

The EIB president said much of the growth in the bank's lending total in 1989 stems from "needs related to the single market," especially transportation and telecommunications. Lending to improve the environment is another priority area for the upcoming year.

Of the $11.07 billion the bank borrowed, mostly in capital markets, European currencies accounted for 88 percent. The once obscure ECU, based on a "basket" of European monies, topped the list for the first time at 20 percent of total borrrowing. Use of ECU financial instruments is widening.

Italy received $4.59 billion of the $14.27 billion loaned within the Community, followed by the United Kingdom at $2.03 billion, Spain at $1.89 billion and France at $1.86 billion.

The $14.23 billion included $8.61 billion for regional development, $3.32 billion for community infrastructure, $2.09 billion each for environment and energy, and $1.23 billion for industrial competitiveness.

BONN, WEST (FEB. 8) UPI - Conservative West German politicians suggested Thursday the 1990 Nobel Peace Prize be awarded to residents of the East German city of Leipzig, who played a major role in the country's pro-democracy movement.

Erwin Huber, Secretary-General of the Christian Social Union party and Erwin Boetsch, also a senior CSU official, said Leipzigers had been ''an example of non-violent commitment to peace and human rights.''

In a letter to the Oslo-based Nobel committee, the conservative politicians said Leipzig residents had played a major role in ensuring that ''the miracle of a peaceful revolution without blood could take place'' in East Germany.

Hundreds of thousands of people took to the streets of Leipzig last fall at the height of pro-democracy protests that triggered the downfall of East Germany's hardline communist leadership.

About 100,000 people still assemble in the streets of Leipzig every Monday chanting anti-communist and pro-reunification slogans.

The two members of the CSU, the Bavarian sister party of Chancellor Helmut Kohl's Christian Democratic Union, said the prize should be given to the conductor of the Leipzig philarmonic orchestra, as a representative of the residents.

The conductor, Kurt Masur, had personally mediated between demonstrators and the authorities last fall to prevent any escalation of violence.

(FEB. 8) - Imagine an action adventure yarn in which the hero races the Nazis for possession of a valuable religious artifact, fighting every inch of the way, constantly in danger but eventually, despite the odds, emerging victorious.

Sound like Indiana Jones?

How about Rex Bennett?

Who? Steven Spielberg, it would seem, remembers him well.

Rex Bennett was a fictitious U.S. secret agent who foiled elaborate plots hatched by the enemy during World War II in a couple of those grand old Republic cliffhanger serials, now available on home video. Spielberg says those serials of the 1930s and 40s, which many an aging movie freak recalls from his childhood, served as an inspiration for the hugely popular Indiana Jones films.

One that could qualify in those terms is ''Manhunt In The African Jungle'' from 1943, in which Bennett (played by Rod Cameron) battles the Nazis for a sacred Arab scroll through 15 action-loaded chapters boasting ''over 40 fistic encounters.'' Rex, by the way, has four knock-down, drag-out fights in the first episode alone - but never loses his hat. Serial heroes rarely did. Neither did Indy.

Bennett took on a band of Japanese terrorists, their leader smuggled into this country disguised as a mummy, in the more substantive ''G-Men Vs. The Black Dragon'' (1942), making its home video debut. Bennett does lose his hat in this one, but wins the war.

Republic has a long list of serials available on home video, including the formidable ''Daredevils Of The Red Circle'' (1939) detailing the adventures of three circus performers who foil a madman's attempt to ruin the man who sent him to jail (with a dynamite conclusion to Chapter One) and ''The Adventures Of Captain Marvel'' (1941), the movies' first flying hero, still with enough of the old Shazam left to sell out at a big New York video store when it appeared recently on videodisc.

The old movie serials, while a unique medium and often prophetic, were never designed to be works of art. They were aimed at the young, meaning lots of movement, fights, car chases, more fights, an easily identifiable but mysterious menace, with as uncomplicated a plot as possible and the hero facing certain destruction at the end - until the next episode, of course. On those memorable afternoons of derring-do, life was a great adventure that always was continued next week.

''We have a whole group of people who remember going to see these on Saturday who just want to relive the moment, relive the experience,'' says Glenn Ross, vice president for marketing at Republic Home Video.

But, it's not just nostalgia.

''Serials are of interest to collectors, of course, because cliffhangers definitely are part of film history,'' Ross said. ''And, there is a new and very strong audience turned on by Indiana Jones.''

The serial is nearly as old as the American movie industry itself. By the middle of the second decade of the 20th century, silent serials were major crowd-pleasers from 1914, when Pearl White starred in ''Perils Of Pauline'', to 1930 when they gave way to sound. For the next 20 years, serials became a main Saturday afternoon attraction for theater loads of kids in the pre-TV era.

John Wayne once made a serial. So did Gene Autry, Boris Karloff and Jack Dempsey. Others who appeared in serials at various stages in their careers included Lon Chaney, senior and junior, Carole Landis, Leonard Nimoy, Bela Lugosi, Francis X. Bushman and the Dead End Kids. Phyllis Isley appeared in Republic's ''Dick Tracy's G-Men'' in 1939 and four years later, after changing her name to Jennifer Jones, won an Oscar for ''Song Of Bernadette.''

Olympic swimming champion Buster Crabbe became famous in the '30s in four Universal serials, three times as Flash Gordon and once as Buck Rogers. Ralph Byrd was an impressive Dick Tracy in four Republic serials about the intrepid detective. Olympic shotput medal winner Herman Brix starred in three Republic serials, then became a feature film regular as Bruce Bennett.

There were two Supermans, four Zorros, a Lone Ranger or two, Batman, Tarzan, Nyoka, space invaders and defenders and countless others caught up in that bygone age of heroes when, in between popcorn breaks, their perils were our perils.

Those were the days, my friend. Now, old serials have new life on videocassette and whether you view them as campy, creaky or with affection those Hairbreadth Harrys and Harrietts deserve a place in movie lore.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - In a reversal of previously optimistic forecasts for the U.S. housing industry, the president of the National Association of Home Builders said Thursday the industry could be headed for a recession this year.

"We are skating on very thin ice and we may be getting dangerously close to a housing recession," Martin Perlman, the association's president said at a news conference.

David Seiders, the association's economist, revised downward his estimates of annual housing starts to 1.38 million, about the same as last year, from 1.44 million after the recent upturn in interest rates.

Another factor leading the downward revision is the growing concern among builders that the thrift bailout billion approved last August has unintentionally caused savings institutions to reduce their real estate lending.

A provision of the bailout bill called for the immediate implentation of stricter lending limits to individual borrowers. The so-called "loan-to-one-borrower" provision has reduced to 15 percent from 100 percent the amount of its capital a thrift can lend. "This is causing a great deal of consternation in the marketpalce," Perlman said.

Construction delays and layoffs have become commonplace in the housing industry in recent months and perlman said he fears housing starts could fall by 60,000 to 100,000 units this year unless the lending restrictions are loosened.

Perlman, a home builder from Houston, said a drop of this magnitude would have a "tremendous ripple effect" throughout the economy. For example, a drop of 100,000 housing starts this year would cost 176,000 jobs in the construction and construction-related industries, $4.6 billion in lost wages, $1.5 billion in lost federal, state and local taxes and $160 million in lost local property tax, Perlman said.

Housing builders were on Capitol Hill this week seeking to convince lawmakers that the thrift bailout bill has unintendedly hurt the housing industry. The builders are seeking a gradual phasing in of the lending restrictions over a two year period.

On a brighter note, Perlman rebuffed real estate doomsayers who in recent months have predicted a collapse of housing prices. Perlman said housing values appear to have leveled from their peak in the mid-1980s, but he does not anticipate a dramatic decline. Even if a housing recession does occur, Perlman said one result would be an upturn in prices for existing homes.

He said builders in soft real estate markets are reluctant to reduce prices to attract buyers for fear such a cut could affect future appraisals. Buyers can, however, expect more incentives from builders.

"Home values have weathered the ups and downs of seven cycles since the end of World War II," Perlman said. "During those 50 or so years, housing has appreciated at a rate slightly above the nation's inflation rate."

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The Pentagon released previously unseen footage Thursday of Air Force AC-130 Hercules gunships firing cannon in devastating, precision fashion at Panamanian forces during the Dec. 20 U.S. invasion.

The videotape - released after a formal request by the television networks - was censored, however, as ''snippets'' were taken out for ''security reasons,'' Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said.

The videotape was taken by cameras aboard the gunships, and the military was concerned some of the footage might reveal too much about the capability of the AC-130, Williams said.

The Pentagon released about 12 minutes of black-and-white night footage that was shot during ''Operation Just Cause'' as the gunships circled more than 1,000 feet above Panama Defense Forces targets and unleased massive firepower.

The AC-130s have three weapons - 105mm howitzers, 40mm Bofors cannon and 20mm Vulcan cannon - and a computer that integrates them into a highly accurate fire-control system.

In the first sequence, an AC-130 fires a round from its howitzer into a building of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's PDF ''Comandancia'' or headquarters, and anti-aircraft artillery fire from the PDF can be seen in the footage.

The AC-130 then opens up on the buildings with the 40mm cannon in rapid fire, resulting in what appears to be a July 4 fireworks show. Rounds are seen going through the roof and blowing out windows, and fires are seen shooting up from the buildings.

The Comandancia was leveled during the invasion, and many of the 202 Panamanian civilians killed in the invasion were believed to have died in a neighborhood near the PDF headquarters. The footage released by the Pentagon shows no stray rounds being fired, however.

In a demonstration of the accuracy of the gunship, another sequence taken from an AC-130 near the Rio Hato region shows the aircraft scoring a direct hit on an PDF armored personnel carrier with a 105mm shell.

Another sequence shows an AC-130 attack on the Tocumen airfield, where the U.S. gunship scores three 105mm direct hits on a building housing PDF forces. A palm tree can be seen falling to the ground from the force of the explosions.

LONDON (FEB. 8) UPI - Brazilian President-elect Fernando Collor de Mello met Thursday with officials, businessmen and royalty and discussed ways to reduce his nation's crippling debt and allow more resources for preserving rainforests and their inhabitants.

Collor, who will take office on March 15, met Prince Charles and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher during his 24-hour visit to the British capital.

Collor, elected to office Dec. 17, will also visit Portugal and Spain on the final legs of a tour that has also taken him to the United States, Japan, the Soviet Union, West Germany, Italy and France.

Collor, 40, weathered protests in Britain over the decimation of the Amazonian rain forests and his nation's treatment of its native people. Concern was declared about the 9,000 remaining members of the Yanomami tribe, who are threatened with extinction by advancing gold prospectors.

About 50 members of Parliament signed a petition on the issues, and eight development agencies planned to deliver a letter to Collor to request action. Activists for a group named Survival International clustered outside Brazil's embassy in the city's plush West End, distributing leaflets and brandishing placards demanding protection for the Indians.

Collor pledged to respond to the heightened international anxiety in a lunchtime speech delivered to leading businessmen.

''I am well aware of the far-reaching consequences of this ecological drama that is unfolding,'' he said. ''This is a task for a generation, not a government ... I will endeavor to combat the political, ideological and even electoral exploitation of this issue.''

His speech otherwise dealt with the need to cure ''the immorality of hunger, unemployment, illiteracy, ecological devastation and poverty'' in Brazil.

Delegation officials said his talks with British officials largely focused on ways to allow Brasilia to divert more resources for enviornmental protection by easing its $115 billion external debt, the third world's largest.

The issues dominated his hour-long meeting with Thatcher, officials said.

''The talks concentrated mostly on the Brazilian economy, with Mr. Collor outlining his proposals for tackling the problems,'' an official at 10 Downing Street, Thatcher's official residence, said.

''There was some discussion of the enviornment, including rainforests, with the president-elect stressing the importance he attached to these issues,'' the official said, adding that the problem of drugs was also discussed.

Officials at Kensington Palace would not divulge any details of Collor's 30-minute private meeting with Prince Charles, but the heir to Britain's throne is a fervant supporter of conservation projects.

Prince Charles Tuesday criticized Brazil and Malaysia for ''waging a dreadful pattern of collective genocide'' against inhabitants of their rainforests, and proposed an international protection convention.

''The genetic reservoir of plant and animal life sharing our world provides us with the most perfect survival kit imaginable as we face the unknown challenges of the future,'' the prince said.

However, Prince Charles also said he did not ''see how developing countries can be expected to achieve sustainable development and at the same time meet huge debt repayments.'' Collor's meetings included talks with Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, deputy prime minister Sir Geoffrey Howe, the Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major and senior representatives of Britain's largest banks.

CHICAGO (FEB. 8) UPI - Rudnick & Wolf, a Chicago law firm whose practice focuses on international franchising, said Thursday it has joined two other companies in a new practice focusing on business and trade development in Eastern Europe.

Rudnick & Wolf joined with London-based Adlers and the Washington law firm of Brownstein Zeldman and Schomer to form a joint practice known as East Europe Law. The new practice initially will focus on Hungary.

"We think there will be, in time, very substantial business development in that area, and we think most of our clients in franchising, distribution and real estate development will be attracted to those countries," said Lew Rudnick, senior partner in Rudnick & Wolf.

"Hungary was the first oportunity that came our way and was the impetus for forming the association of the three firms. The Hungarians wished to attract both know-how and techology, as well as investment capital, and franchising and distribution systems and networks are a means of doing that," said Rudnick.

The three firms combined have more than 300 lawyers and a broad range of expertise in business, commerce and international trade. "We have known and respected each others' practices in the field of franchising and distribution for many years," Martin Mendelsohn, senior partner in Alders, said in a statement released in London.

"Because of that fact, and because each of the three firms also has a substantial commercial and international practice, this opportunity to collaborate in Eastern Europe made immediate sense to each of us,"

Mendelsohn said.

East Europe Law is involved in discussions with a Canadian law firm about joining the new practice, and expects to expand its participants and resources in the near future. It also plans to expand its practice across Eastern and Central Europe.

East Europe Law has signed a Cooperation Agreement with Tradeinform, an organization sponsored by the Hungarian Ministry of Trade. Tradinform has established the Hungarian Franchise and Distribution Center to hold seminars, identify business categories appropriate for franchising and distribution programs, and to prepare literature on franchising and distribution and on doing business in Hungary.

The Center also will identify Hungarian individuals and businesses who may be appropriate master franchisees and joint-venture partners, and aid Hungarian businesses seeking franchising and distribution opportunities outside Hungary.

Rudnick said several of his franchising clients had expressed interest in Hungary and Eastern Europe, but declined to name the interested firms. Generally, he said, computer products and services, tourist services and the automotive aftermarket are likely to be the most successful early entries into the Hungarian market.

"Computer products and services offers a major area for development for such companies as ComputerLand and MicroAge," Rudnick said. "I think there'll be a huge demand in Eastern Europe for personal and small business computers and software. That's a virgin market for computer companies."

McDonald's already is selling hamburgers to Hungarians, and Rudnick said he expects other major fast-food franchises, including Kentucky Fried Chicken and Burger King, to enter the market soon.

As for the opportunities for Hungarian firms to franchise their business outside Hungary, Rudnick observed, "There'll probably be some surprises, with some Eastern European companies getting into franchising systems of their own in Eastern Europe, or even Western Europe. "But in the early phases most of the flow is going ot be West to East," he said, "and a number of companies will have an interest in those markets."

MOSCOW (FEB. 8) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze made progress Thursday during talks on arms control issues and the future of Afghanistan, but they disagreed on Soviet shipment of jets to Cuba, said officials from the two sides.

The officials and their negotiating teams met for six hours Thursday and the negotiators continued with a late-night session as Baker and Shevardnadze and their wives met for a private dinner hosted by the Soviet foreign minister.

The talks are meant to lay the groundwork for the next superpower summit, scheduled to take place in Washington in June.

Baker is to meet Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Friday. U.S. officials said Baker may receive responses to some of the American proposals during the Kremlin session. They said initial Soviet reaction appeared to be positive.

''We threw a big wad of stuff at them and some of it will have to be checked out with their technical people. It's pretty complex,'' one American official said.

Shevardnadze described the talks as ''very serious negotiations, which are being held in a good, business-like manner,'' the Soviet news agency Tass reported. ''The discussion of the disarmament problem is proceeding fairly well,'' the agency quoted him as saying.

U.S. officials said Baker offered new ideas in moving the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks closer to completion. They said the Soviets offered a ''clarification'' that says they will sign a START treaty even if there is continuing disagreement about the U.S. ''Star Wars'' program and its relationship to offensive arms control.

Baker put forward new proposals for counting and limiting air-launched cruise missiles and ''non-deployed'' missiles which are ready to use but are not stored with the launchers, the officials said. In addition, there was a new formula for making sure data from missile launches can be read by the other country's monitors.

On conventional forces, the U.S. put forward proposals defining tanks and combat aircraft, a necessary step in deciding which ones will be scrapped and which will be permitted.

American officials said Baker raised the issue of the Soviet shipment of advanced MiG-29 fighters to Cuba. Baker objected to the introduction of such sophisticated weapons into the Western hemisphere by the Soviets.

Shevardnadze, according to the Americans present at the talks, responded that the Soviets had other views and other commitments. The subject was left there, the officials said.

There was agreement on another Central American issue, with both Baker and Shevardnadze saying that the Feb. 25 elections in Nicaragua must not only be free and fair, but must be seen to be free and fair.

Baker and Shevardnadze are to hold news conferences Friday evening to sum up their discussions. Baker is to testify Saturday before the International Relations Committee of the Supreme Soviet.

CAIRO, EGYPT (FEB. 8) UPI - The spiritual leader of Egypt's 50 million Sunni Moslems has banned as sinful a seven-volume cartoon version of the Koran that was designed to make the Moslem holy book more accessible for children and those who cannot read, a Cairo newspaper reported Thursday.

The weekly Allewaa al Islami, the only government-controlled newspaper for Egyptian Moslems, said Grand Sheikh Gad el-Haq Ali Gad el-Haq banned the cartoons because under Islamic religious law it is considered sinful to reproduce pictures of the prophet Mohammed.

The author of the works, Tunisian-born Moslem philosophy professor Youssef Sedik, has said that his cartoons do not include drawings of Mohammed because of the Islamic laws prohibiting pictures of the founder of Islam.

The government of President Hosni Mubarak, wary of increasing religious agitation as the country's economy deteriorates, generally adheres to the decrees of Gad el-Haq, who was appointed to the post of Grand Sheikh of Al Azhar by Mubarak.

The Western-oriented government previously has bowed to pressure from Islamic groups and banned kissing scenes and Egyptian belly-dancing from being shown on television. The government also has curtailed the sale of alcohol.

The Allewaa al Islami newspaper said Gad el-Haq has refused to grant an Italian and an Egyptian firm permission to release either a cartoon strip or an animated cartoon recording of the Koran.

''The Grand Imam has refused their request,'' the newspaper said. ''It is sinful to reproduce portraits of the prophets and companions of the Prophet Mohammed.'' A religious leader close to Gad el-Haq described the cartoon as the ''work of satan.''

Sedik, who lives in Paris, published the seven-volume cartoon version of the Koran, entitled ''If the Koran had been told to me,'' in December. An estimated 15,000 copies - in Arabic and French - have been sold.

Sedik has defended his work and said he hopes an English translation of the cartoons will be ready for sale in May of this year. The author said his work is intended to make the Moslem holy book more accessible for illiterate Moslems and children.

Conservative Islamic scholars and interpreters of Islamic law, including the Jeddah, Saudi Arabia-based 46-member Islamic Conference Organization, have attacked Sedik's work as distorting the Koran. Moslems believe the prophet Mohammad received the words he wrote in the Koran directly from God.

The cartoons have already been banned in Moslem Gulf states.

KENOSHA, WI (FEB. 8) UPI - Chrysler Corp. has found buyers for most of the vacant land left in Kenosha from when the company ended auto assembly, a real estate broker said. Robert Gintoft of James T. Barry Co. in Milwaukee said Wednesday deals should be completed by April 10 on most of the 245 acres of land and parking lots.

Gintoft said the land sales will lead to development, which will create hundreds of jobs. About 5,500 workers lost their jobs in December 1988 when Chrysler shut down assembly operations in Kenosha.

Gintoft said he could not identify the prospective buyers or their plans. He said most of the offers for the properties came from Illinois residents who were attracted by the low prices.

Gintoft said the Chrysler properties are scattered in five clusters in and around Kenosha. Four of the six buyers are from Illinois and the remaining two are from Kenosha, he said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The Senate approved Thursday a study of ''hate crimes'' - acts of violence based prejudices of race, religion, or sexual preference - a bill that Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said promotes homosexual rights.

The bill directs the attorney general to acquire data about crimes that reflect ''evidence of prejudice based on race, religion, sexual orientation, or ethnicity.'' The identify of a victim of such crimes cannot be disclosed.

The bill is virtually identical to one passed by the House, and their minor differences are expected to be worked out quickly.

''It will be the first time sexual orientation - and that means homosexuals - the first time sexual orientation will be marked out for protected status,'' Helms, the son of a law enforcement officer, warned the Senate.

''If I sound like I'm worked up, I'm worked up,'' he said. ''This is a total public relations gimmick, a cave-in to homosexual gay rights.''

Sens. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Paul Simon, D-Ill., often opponents on other issues, combined to defeat efforts by Helms to derail the bill, which was approved, 92-4.

They first offered an amendment that stated that nothing in the bill should be interpreted as condoning homosexuality. It passed 96-0, with Helms signing on as a co-sponsor.

But the Senate voted 77-19 to defeat an amendment by Helms that said the homosexual ''movement'' threatens the strength of the family in society and that state sodomy laws should be enforced in the best interest of public health.

''We are talking about repealing sodomy laws, which is a goal of the chief advocates of this legislation, the gay lesbian community,'' Helms said, calling the bill ''the flagship of the homosexual lesbian legislative agenda. They have said that over and over again.''

Hatch was unimpressed.

''I have not had one homosexual contact me to promote this bill,'' he said. ''This bill has no impact on homosexual rights. Nor does the bill encourage homosexuality. All this bill does is collect data on hate crime activity.''

''Hate crimes run the gamut from vandalism to package bombings,'' Simon said. ''In every form, they are insidious.''

The White House backs the bill, which is supported by the National Council of Churches, and various rights organizations.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said there has never been a greater need to determine the number and basis of ''hate crimes,'' such as the letter bombs that recently killed and maimed federal judges.

''This bill simply directs the attorney general to collect information. Period,'' Dole said.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Delta, Northwest and TWA Thursday launched a new venture, Worldspan Travel Agency Information Services, which will operate an independent computerized-reservation system for the three airlines.

"Worldspan will be the first computer reservation system to be developed and operated autonomously of its airline owners," said Cal Rader, chief executive officer of the new venture.

"Subscribing travel agencies will no longer share a reservation system that is also tailored for use by its airline owners," Rader said, "but a truly dedicated system designed to meet the needs of travel agencies and the traveling public on a worldwide scale."

Rader, who formerly headed Delta's own reservation system, Datas II, firmly ruled out any takeover rumor linked to the venture in which the Atlanta-based carrier holds the dominant stake.

"It is not a Delta takeover," Rader said. "It is the formation of a new computerized-reservation system to improve the good relationship with the travel agents and our customers."

The last major acquisition by Delta Air Lines Inc. took place in April 1988, when the carrier bought Los Angeles-based Western Air Lines Inc., to expand its West Coast operations.

Rader said Delta will have a 40 percent stake in the new venture, while Minneapolis-based Northwest Airlines Inc. will control 33.50 percent of the company and New York-based Trans World Airlines Inc. 26.50 percent.

The ownership was structured to reflect the airlines' respective size. Delta ranks fourth among U.S. carriers in passenger-miles, Northwest sixth and TWA seventh.

The three carriers had first disclosed their plan for the venture in late September and said they expect the new computerized-reservation system to be operational by 1993.

Rader said Worldspan will build a new computer facility, including a large mainframe, near Atlanta where Delta is headquartered and operates a large hub. The new data center will initially network the information handled by Datas II and Pars, the reservation system used by both Northwest and TWA.

"The new data center will cost between $25 and $28 million," Rader said. "The hardware, including the communications, will be in the $175 to $180 million range."

Rader said Worldspan has contacted International Business Machines Corp. and American Telegraph & Telephone Co. about developing the computer center.

"We have not established any relationship with any vendor, we do not favor anyone at this stage," Rader said. "We have talked to them to see if they could do it, and how they would do it."

The system will be operated by the airlines' staff currently allocated to the reservation systems. Worldspan's marketing operations will be headquartered in Kansas City.

"There will be 1,100 people working at Worldspan in the beginning, and we plan on having 2,200 people by the end of 1993," Rader said. He said the three airlines' combined computerized-reservation systems currently control 26 percent of the U.S. travel agency market, and reach 13,000 travel agencies worldwide.

Delta, which owns five percent of Swissair, is expanding in Europe where it will be the official carrier for the new Disneyland complex to open near Paris. Northwest is the U.S. carrier with the largest Pacific operations and could also expand in Europe where KLM Royal Dutch Airlines has been trying to get a stake in the U.S. airline.

Worldspan will also maintain the agreement currently existing between Pars Datas II and Abacus, a leading computerized-reservation system covering six Asian airlines.

Rader indicated that more airlines could join Worldspan with a cross-equity ownership with the six Asian airlines already under consideration. The airlines are Cathay Pacific, Singapore Airlines, China Airlines, Malaysian Airlines, Philippines Airlines and Royal Brunei.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The World Bank approved Thursday its first loan to China since suspending lending to that country after the June massacre of the pro-democracy movement in Tiananmen Square.

The earthquake-relief loan will be provided by IDA, the World Bank's concessionary lending affiliate, for housing, economic assets recovery, social services and physical infrastructure reconstruction in an area devasted by the October 1989 quake in the border area between the provinces of Shanxi and Hebei, the bank said.

The U.S. executive director at the bank's board voted in favor of the loan because it will help earthquake reconstruction efforts, a Treasury spokesman said.

Consideration of another operation proposed by the bank's administration, a $60 million loan for agriculture projects, was postponed, bank sources said.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday that the administration believes that ''it should avoid actions that would harm the Chinese people and would be prepared, on a case-by-case basis, to have the World Bank consider earthquake aid and other basic human needs loans to China.''

Eagleburger noted, however, ''We still not support a general resumption of World Bank lending (to China).''

The multilateral organization suspended its lending to China in June, when the Beijing government crushed the pro-democracy movement. At that time, the bank had about $780 million in loans to China set for approval.

In its past fiscal year from July 1, 1988, to June 30, 1989, the World Bank and the International Development Association lent China $1.3 billion.

The Bush administration has indicated that it is prepared to support resumption of World Bank lending to China on a limited basis, and for humanitarian purposes.

UNITED NATIONS (FEB. 8) UPI - Six countries announced plans Thursday to hold a summit of world leaders aimed at drawing up strategies to prevent the daily deaths of an estimated 40,000 children around the world.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said he will send invitations to all heads of state and governments to meet in New York Sept. 29-30 for what he described as a ''historic meeting'' to serve the needs of children.

''People everywhere should think how they can contribute to that meeting '' Perez de Cuellar said in announcing the two-day conference that is being prepared by representatives from 22 countries, including China, Bangladesh, the United States, the Soviet Union and Zimbabwe.

The six countries, headed by Canada and including Egypt, Mali, Mexico, Pakistan and Sweden, that initiated the summit meeting said in a news conference attended by Perez de Cuellar that children will not take part in the meeting.

Spokesmen said the summit would attempt instead to secure an unequivocal commitment from political leaders to serve the young population.

''Our three presidents and three prime ministers have dared to dream the seemingly impossible, too,'' said Canadian U.N. Ambassador Yves Fortier. ''They dream of a world in which parents are not, each day, confronted with the tragedy of burying some 40,000 children.''

Fortier said it will be a ''summit of do-able things'' that do not cost a lot of money and which will involve U.N. specialized agencies that have been dealing with issues related to child welfare.

Besides Fortier, the U.N. ambassadors from the five other countries also attended the news conference announcing the convening of the ''World Summit for Children.''

The U.N. Children's Fund, or UNICEF, said low cost preventive measures against childhood diseases such as measles, whooping cough and tuberculosis could save 50 million children from death in the 1990s.

The U.N. agency, which provides care for millions of mothers and children around the world, said most of the endangered children are in developing countries, but their counterparts in the industrialized world are faced with increasing dangers from drugs, crime, homelessness and neglect.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The United States, wrapping up its quarterly refunding marathon, auctioned $10 billion of 30-year bonds Thursday with the yield increasing to 8.5 percent - the highest since 9.11 percent on May 11.

Analysts reported Japanese investor participation, which was questionable before the start of the refunding Tuesday, faded possibly out of concern over Friday's report on wholesale prices for January.

The Treasury Department uses the cash it borrows through long bonds and other securities to keep the wheels of government churning and to pay off other notes reaching maturity.

The 30-year bonds, which mature Feb. 15, 2020, and have an interest rate of 8.5 percent, sold at an average price of $100 with 100 equaling the face value and 1 point representing $10 on each $1,000 investment. At the November auction, 30-year bonds yielded 7.87 percent.

The securities are sold mainly to large institutions - such as banks, pension funds, mutual funds and insurance companies - in this country and abroad. Individual investors also make purchases.

"Japanese participation was somewhat less than in the three-year and ten-year auctions," said Hugh Tran, director of fixed-income research at Deutsche Bank in New York. "Overall, it was not as people feared."

Raymond Stone, managing director of Stone & McCarthy Research Associates of Princeton, N.J., said, "The actual auction was kind of tentative. It was sloppy, which means there wasn't much bidding."

The Treasury Department also accepted $226 million of tenders for 30-year notes from Federal Reserve Banks for their own accounts. During the three-day quarterly refunding, the United States also sold:

- $10 billion of ten-year notes Wednesday with the yield jumping to 8.59 percent, the highest since 9.18 percent May 10. The ten-year notes, with an interest rate of 8.5 percent, sold at an average price of $99.40 and mature Feb. 15, 2000. The November 10-year notes yielded 7.94 percent.

- $10 billion in three-year notes Tuesday yielding 8.43 percent, the highest since 9.12 percent May 9 and better than November's 7.77 percent. The three-year notes, which mature Feb. 3, 1993, and have an interest rate of 8.375 percent, sold at an average price of $99.857.

Traders reported surprising global participation in the earlier auctions, with the Japanese buying a larger than normal number of three-year notes and small domestic investors trotting out to take advantage of higher rates.

Many analysts, however, were concerned about investor appetites going into the refunding. Interest rates have leaped on Japanese government bonds, and the January auction of $5 billion in 40-year bonds issued by the Resolution Funding Corp., the agency financing the bailout of America's savings industry, was disappointing.

But in an interview Thursday on Financial News Network, Elliot Platt, chief economist for Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, said Treasury yields are a "bargain," given the moderate rate of inflation and sluggish economy.

Although the refunding is over, Treasury Department officials have said there may be auctions of two-year and five-year notes to raise cash in the weeks before the April 15 income tax deadline.

CHICAGO (FEB. 8) UPI - Union chief Don Fehr crossed the country to brief players on baseball's lockout Friday, while owners headed for a meeting that may determine whether spring training camps open.

The owners are to gather at O'Hare Airport at 10 a.m. CST and, unless the climate changes, baseball's sixth labor stoppage in the last two decades could result. Talks between the parties are recessed until Monday, four days before the first pitchers and catchers report.

Fehr scheduled a Thursday meeting in Los Angeles and a Friday briefing in Phoenix to discuss talks that began Nov. 28 and have produced virtually no progress.

Meanwhile, the economic impact of the lockout has already begun. At least one club said it would have already begun moving to its spring training site. Another said it would have begun loading equipment Thursday.

The real losses would come next week, when hotels and restaurants in Florida and Arizona begin missing business that normally comes with spring training.

Baseball's basic labor agreement expired Dec. 31. Nine days later, the owners' Player Relations Committee told clubs not to proceed with spring training until the outline of an agreement develops.

Commissioner Fay Vincent, who is employed by the owners, has said he will not order camps open, as then-Commissioner Bowie Kuhn did in 1976. Kuhn lost his job for perceived failure to end the 50-day strike in 1981.

In 1985, then-Commissioner Peter Ueberroth received credit for ending a one-day walkout, even though he downplayed his role and others disagree on his contribution.

Some signs of strife are emerging from the owners' camp. Yankee owner George Steinbrenner has dismissed as ''pure bull'' the contention his club is responsible for escalating salaries.

''You look at the top 10 salaries in baseball and not one of them are the Yankees,'' Steinbrenner told the New York Daily News.

Pittsburgh Pirates President Carl Bargar has said the owners would endure a lockout to rid baseball of free agency. Bargar said free agency ''is leading us in the direction of the heavy media market teams - Los Angeles, New York, Chicago.''

Owners are seeking to restructure the contract with revenue sharing, pay for performance, and a salary cap. In a system similar to the NBA's, the owners propose to give the players 48 percent of their revenue from ticket sales and television contracts. That accounts for about 80 percent of management's income.

The players have not rejected the concept but object to a payroll cap and pay-for-performance, a system that would rate the players and determine salary. Players also ask why the current system must be changed.

Chuck O'Connor, general counsel for the owners' PRC, has acknowledged the clubs have a fund of more than $170 million should a lockout occur. Fehr said the players have a strike fund ''in the neighborhood of $90 million.''

ANCHORAGE, AK (FEB. 8) UPI - Two Coast Guard ship controllers on duty when the Exxon Valdez ran aground later tested positive for alcohol and drug use, but prosecutors argued Thursday the test results should be excluded from the trial of fired Exxon skipper Joseph Hazelwood.

Coast Guard watchstander Bruce Blandford had double the legal limit of alcohol in his system when tested the afternoon of the early morning accident. Hazelwood's lawyers suggested that he was under the influence of liquor while on duty and in charge of aiding the Exxon Valdez departure Mar. 23.

The tanker ran aground just after midnight Mar. 24, spilling 11 million gallons of oil in the worst spill in U.S. history.

Blandford told investigators that after his stressful shift during the wreck, he went home and had three or four bourbons with Coke during a 90-minute period. He was called back to work early that afternoon and ordered to give a urine sample.

His 0.203 percent alcohol reading was not consistent with moderate lunchtime drinking, defense lawyer Dick Madson said in a motion seeking to make Blandford's drinking a factor in the case.

The watchstander's alcohol level was ''consistent with the consumption of a substantial amount of alcohol over a long period of time,'' Madson said in court motions considered Thursday by state Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone.

Madson said the watchstander's high alcohol level ''further leads to the conclusion that Blandford may have been under the influence of alcohol while on duty at the Vessel Traffic Control center. His possible intoxication may have been a contributing factor to the grounding. This evidence has a direct bearing on the jury's evaluation of whether Capt. Hazelwood was criminally negligent or reckless.''

Hazelwood, 43, of Huntington, N.Y., is charged with operating the tanker while intoxicated, reckless endangerment, negligent discharge of oil and criminal mischief.

Prosecutor Brent Cole has maintained that Hazelwood's alcohol-impaired judgment was at the root of the wreck and spill, the worst in U.S. history.

Cole asked Johnstone to order alcohol and blood tests of the watchstanders inadmissible.

Additional tests taken on March 26 found morphine in Blandford's system and THC, the active chemical in marijuana, in the system of Gordon Taylor, the other watchstander.

Blandford relieved Taylor at the watch about 20 minutes before the Exxon Valdez hit Bligh Reef.

Alcohol has figured as the centerpiece of the trial, and Hazelwood's blood alcohol level 10 hours after the wreck was 0.61 - about 50 percent higher than the Coast Guard limit of 0.40 for mariners. The state considers a person legally drunk when their blood alcohol level is 0.10.

Alcohol was still the key to court testimony Thursday, but the focus shifted to drinking and drug use by the two Coast Guard civilians hired to watch tankers on radar, communicate with them by radio and generally assist arriving and departing tankers.

Blandford and Taylor have both been subpoenaed to testify in Hazelwood's trial, and Johnstone was expected to rule on whether their chemical tests would become known to the jury during questioning this week.

More witnesses testified Thursday that Hazelwood showed no sign of intoxication or alcohol impairment. The witnesses, a fellow crewman on the Exxon Valdez and a Valdez-based Exxon shipping agent who has known Hazelwood for 10 years, were both prosecution witnesses but asserted that the skipper was sober.

Exxon agent Patricia Caples said Hazelwood was in a jolly mood and appeared to have had something to drink but was not drunk.

Six witnesses have testified so far that they either saw Hazelwood drinking before he sailed or that they smelled alcohol on his breath, but none have offered any testimony that Hazelwood was intoxicated or impaired.

CHICAGO (FEB. 8) UPI - Ford Motor Co. Thursday introduced several new models that top executives say are crucial to its product plans during the next decade as the company strives to meet government-mandated fuel economy standards.

The nation's No. 2 automaker, during a preview for the Chicago Auto Show that opens Saturday, showed its first new Ford Escort subcompact since that car bowed in 1980.

Ford also unveiled the Mercury Tracer, the Escort's sister car. Both models are the result of a $2 billion program with Japanese carmaker Mazda of which Ford owns 25 percent.

It is the largest joint association ever between two carmakers, said Robert Rewey, Ford's vice president of North American Sales Operations, noting the partnership underscores the globalization of the car industry.

"In fact, it's probably true to say that, as the major auto manufacturers worldwide go global, the concept of 'the Big Three,' the concept of 'the Japanese' and the concept of 'the Europeans' quickly becomes dated," he said. "You could argue that there are eight or nine companies of several nationalities that are the major players in the world auto market," he added.

The new Escort and Tracer are heavily based on Mazda's subcompacts already on sale. They will be in showrooms later this spring, with annual sales pegged at about 500,000 units to give Ford a broad sales base of fuel-efficient cars.

Ford acknowledged it will make little if any money on the new Escort and Tracer, but it needs them to meet corporate average fuel economy (CAFE) levels and avoid paying millions of dollars in government fines. Ford also needs to maintain domestic production of such cars so it can continue selling its profitable, larger and less fuel-efficient models.

The new Escorts and Tracers will have well in excess of 75 percent U.S. content to help Ford meet domestic CAFE levels, now set at 27.5 mpg but expected to increase in coming years.

Both will be built at Ford's Wayne, Mich., plant, while Tracer models only will be built at its Hermosillo plant in Mexico, which has not been involved in the latest labor disputes at Ford plants in that country.

A week-long strike was settled at Ford's Chihuahua engine plant Thursday after workers walked out Feb. 1 because agreement on a new contract had not been reached. That plant makes 2.3 liter four-cylinder engines for Ford's Tempo and Topaz cars sold in the United States.

On Wednesday, Ford began firing about 2,200 workers on strike since December at its Cuatitlan plant, outside Mexico City, saying they had failed to show up for work and deriding their walkout as an "illegal work stoppage." That plant makes castings, engines, and cars for the Mexican market.

Ford also on Thursday showed the Mercury Capri, an Australian-built roadster slated to go on sale this June after a two-year delay in which the car was reworked for the U.S. market.

The Capri, which has four seats and a driver's side air bag, is expected to start at about $13,000, company sources said, or $800 less than the two-seat Mazda Miata, considered the Capri's prime competitor.

"The Miata is a toy, or a third or fourth car in a household used on weekends," said Ross Roberts, general manager of Ford's Lincoln-Mercury division. "The Capri is for people who will drive it to work every day. Ford is pegging Capri sales at about 25,000 units a year, vs. 40,000 sales for the Miata.

Also shown was a new sport utility vehicle called the Ford Explorer, which replaces Ford's Bronco II model. It will go on sale this spring as a 1991 model, with annual sales estimated at 200,000 units.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - The New York Stock Exchange has provided institutional traders with special telephone numbers for reporting incidents of program trading abuse, exchange officials said Thursday. The telephone numbers are part of the exchange's ongoing surveillance efforts, the exchange said.

The exchange, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and the Chicago Board of Trade also are conducting an analysis of several volatile trading days, said Richard Torrenzano, senior vice president for communications.

"If trading abuses are found to have taken place, the New York Stock Exchange will take appropriate enforcement action with respect to parties within our jurisdiction," he said.

Last year, the exchange, the Chicago Merc and the New York Futures Exchange began joint policing of the markets regarding intermarket front-running using programs and stock index futures and options on index futures, he said.

In the scheme known as front-running, traders with orders from customers profit by buying or selling stocks and stock-index futures or options before executing their customers' orders.

The surveillance was approved by the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. The Chicago Board of Trade adopted a similar surveillance program at the end of last year, Torrenzano said.

The New York Stock Exchange, along with the regulatory staffs of the other national securities markets, has regularly conducted surveillance for intermarket front-running betwen equities and stock or index options through a cooperative regulatory group called the Intermarket Surveillance Group, Torrenzano said. The exchange, through the ISG, has been conducting surveillance of stock options since 1980 and of index options since 1985, he said.

(FEB. 8) UPI - Reports out of Moscow say ''progress was achieved'' in the latest round of arms reduction talks between Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. The Soviet news agency Tass says both sides ''put forward new ideas'' during a three-hour meeting in Moscow this morning. U-S officials say Baker's new ideas dealt with strategic arms, conventional force reductions and a ban on chemical weapons. Two more rounds of talks are expected today.

NATO officials made a new proposal today during talks in Vienna on Conventional Forces in Europe. They want lower levels of troops and combat aircraft for both NATO and the Warsaw Pact. The proposal incorporates President Bush's call for further cuts in U-S and Soviet forces in central Europe. And for the first time, it includes NATO troops in Denmark, and Warsaw Pact troops in Hungary. NATO also wants a new ceiling on combat aircraft. Initial reaction from the Warsaw Pact is expected as early as next week.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger appeared before a House panel today to discuss President Bush's China policy. He defended Bush's decision to send him and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft on two secret missions to Beijing last year. Eagleburger says he and Scowcroft condemned China's crushing of the pro-democracy movement, and pressed for political moderation. The remarks drew criticism, with one committee member saying Bush's ''policy has NO credibility.''

Despite the poor economic performance, a goverment expert says it's too early to predict a recession.

NEWARK, NJ (FEB. 8) UPI - A New Jersey man was formally charged Thursday in what federal agents describe as a large counterfeiting scheme involving a copying machine.

Emmanuel Galaris, 28, faces up to 40 years in prison if he is convicted of all charges, Assistant U.S. Attorney Glenn Moramarco said. But his actual prison sentence would be less under new federal sentencing guidelines.

A federal grand jury in Newark handed up a four-count indictment charging Galaris with making and possessing counterfeit traveler's checks, possession of a Canon Color Laser Copier with intent to use it for counterfeiting, possession of counterfeit Traveler's Express money orders and possession of forged credit cards.

The investigation began after Galaris was arrested in November while allegedly trying to pass a bogus American Express travelers check at Disney World in Florida. He was arrested last week, and the Secret Service reported that $1 million in American Express checks and bogus money orders were seized from his home in Palisades Park.

A federal magistrate set $1 million bond last week, ruling that it must be secured by property. Galaris, who was free on bail on the Florida charge, has been held in the Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York since his second arrest.

Because Galaris used a sophisticated copying machine, he did not need to use elaborate inks or dies to duplicate the traveler's checks and money orders, the Secret Service said.

When he was arrested in Florida, he allegedly had $290,000 in counterfeit checks with him. The Secret Service reported finding $620,000 in checks and $390,000 in money orders when his home was raided.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - The dollar bobbed up and down in New York trading Thursday to finish the day mixed as the market mostly concentrated on jousting between the dominant West German mark and Japan's uncertain yen.

Sales of deutsche marks for yen in early trading for technical reasons drove the dollar up above 1.67 marks, where it "gamboled around" briefly before falling when a European player heavily unloaded dollars in New York Midland Bank PLC chief dealer Patrick Kerrigan said. At day's end the dollar had "gyrated in a three-quarters-of-a-pfennig trading range" Kerrigan remarked.

Participants have been hoping the yen will shake off its feebleness and move up on the mark and the dollar, even if some doubt is likely to hover over the yen until after Japan's parliamentary elections Feb. 18. Dollar dealings were overshadowed Thursday by heavy mark-yen play. "That was really the mover today," commented trader James Dempsey of the Bank of New York's foreign exchange desk.

In late New York trading the dollar was changing hands at 1.6660 German marks, up from 1.6565 Wednesday but off its day high. The dollar was quoted at 145.20 Japanese yen, down slightly from 145.41 yen.

Speculation focused on an upcoming meeting between Alan Greenspan, Federal Reserve Board chairman, and Bank of Japan Governor Yasushi Mieno. The yen was higher against the deutsche mark on hopes the Bank of Japan would raise its key interest rate, then fell on a report this would not happen.

Relatively successful results in the U.S. Treasury's quarterly refunding sale of 30-year bonds did not move the market, Dempsey said. Fears of a debacle had eased after auctions of three- and ten-year securities went well.

Traders were adjusting portfolios ahead of the release Friday of the U.S. government's producer price index. Kerrigan was looking for a hike in January of 1.5 to two percent, after December's 0.7 percent rise.

In New York the British pound eased to $1.6940 from $1.6970. Other dollar rates: 1.4875 Swiss francs, unchanged; 5.6655 French francs, up from 5.6390; and 1,240 Italian lire, up from 1,235.75.

The dollar moved up in Europe, closing higher in Frankfurt at 1.6690 German marks against 1.6535 Wednesday's close. It also climbed in Zurich to 1.4915 Swiss francs against 1.4815 the day before.

In Paris, Brussels and Milan the dollar moved up to 5.6635 French francs from 5.6330, 34.98 Belgian francs against 34.63 and 1,239 Italian lire against 1,233. In London the pound eased to $1.6875 from $1.6985.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $418.75, up slightly from $418.25 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $418.60 an ounce, up from $418.10. In Zurich gold fell to $418 an ounce from $424. In London gold declined to $417 from $422.75.

Republic closed cash silver at $5.33 an ounce, up from $5.325. Comex spot silver rose to $5.324 an ounce from $5.311. Zurich silver eased to $5.35 an ounce from $5.40. The metal dropped in London to $5.32 an ounce from $5.39.

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 8) UPI - Discounter Pic 'N' Save Corp. said Thursday it would buy up to 5 million of its common shares during the next two years because it believes the stock is undervalued.

The company, which operates 190 stores specializing in close-out merchandise, said the repurchases would be made on the open market and in privately negotiated transactions at undisclosed prices. As of Dec. 31, there were 35.5 million shares outstanding.

''Due to the negative perception of retail industry stocks now prevailing among stock analysts, the company has decided to institute an open market repurchase program because we believe that the company's common stock presents an attractive investment opportunity at current prices,'' said Lewis B. Merrified III, president and chief executive officer.

Last year, the stock traded at more than $18 a share, but its price has been depressed in recent months.

Stock in Pic 'N' Save was up 50 cents to $10.125 a share Thursday in early afternoon over-the-counter trading.

The chain plans to increase the number of stores to about 300 by 1993.

Earnings for the nine months ended Oct. 1 were $16.4 million, or 46 cents a share, off from $23.1 million, or 60 cents a share, for the year-ago period.

Nine-month revenues were $297.5 million, up from $240.7 million for the year-ago period.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - The narrow definition of the nation's basic money supply known as M1 rose $2.7 billion in the latest reporting week, while the broader aggregates M2 and M3 also grew, the Federal Reserve Board said Thursday. M2 gained $8.5 billion and M3 rose $5.3 billion.

M1, which is made up of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts - money that is available for immediate spending - rose to a seasonally adjusted average of $796.9 billion in the week ended Jan. 29 from a revised $794.2 billion the week before.

For the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $793.8 billion, a 6.0 percent rate of increase from the previous 13 weeks, the Fed reported.

The broader measure of money, M2, averaged an estimated $3,233.9 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $3,225.4 billion. M2 includes M1, plus passbook savings, small time deposits, including money market deposit accounts, consumer money market mutual funds and certain other short-term assets.

M3, which includes M2 plus large time deposits, repurchase agreements longer than one day at banks and thrifts, and institutional money market funds, averaged $4,049.4 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $4,044.1 billion, the Fed said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Unlike business executives, most school administrators think the American public school system is doing a good job according to a survey released Thursday.

The poll by the Allstate Insurance Co. and the American Association of School Administrators followed up on a survey of senior executives of Fortune 500 companies conducted last year by the insurer and the magazine.

''Executives and educators still often see the education world in different ways,'' said Wayne Hedien, Allstate's chairman. ''And these views are hampering our efforts to get America's learning curve pointed in the right direction.''

The 1989 survey found that 77 percent of the 404 executives rated the school system as fair or poor. Twenty-one percent said the schools were good and 2 percent said very good. None of the executives rated the schools as excellent.

But nearly all of the 385 school administrators said the schools were doing a good job. Five percent said they were excellent, 42 percent very good, 44 percent good, and only 8 percent fair and 1 percent poor.

Asked to grade the public school system, the executives gave a C minus, while the school administrators issued a B minus.

About three-fourths of the school administrators said education has improved in the last 10 years and were hopeful about the future. Two-thirds of the executives thought schools had deteriorated and were pessimistic.

Interestingly, despite giving the school system good grades, 58 percent of the administrators agreed that it is difficult for companies to find and hire employees with good basic skills.

The administrators thought the hiring problem has gotten worse in recent years, but were about divided on the prospects for improvement.

ASHLAND, OH (FEB. 8) UPI - Police said the body of a young girl found in a rural field Thursday morning could be that of a girl kidnapped near Cleveland more than four months ago.

The body, discovered by a jogger at 7:30 a.m. in rural Ashland County, about 160 miles southwest of Cleveland, was sent to the Cuyahoga County Coroner's Office in Cleveland, said Sheriff Kenneth Etzwiler.

The body bore a similar description to Amy Mihaljevic, the 11-year-old abducted Oct. 27 from a shopping center in Bay Village near Cleveland, he said.

''Due to the similarity with Amy, we sent the body to Cleveland,'' Etzwiler said. ''With the similarity ... (in) the age of this body and also the physical description and the color of hair, there is a possibility it was Amy.''

The body was decomposed and Etzwiler said his ''rough guess'' was that the body had been there since ''the latter part of November.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - A group of pediatricians began a two-year program Thursday to prevent infants from dying of dehydration caused by diarrhea.

Diarrheal dehydration is considered one of the most preventable diseases among infants, but it accounts for more than 500 deaths and 200,000 hospitalizations annually among children under five, experts said. Diarrheal dehydration is caused by the poor nutritional diet of the mother.

The national education effort will be heavily concentrated in the South, which consistently reports high infant death rates. The program comes one year after a report startled doctors by disclosing the illness caused one of the highest death rates associated with preventable infant mortality.

''Clearly diarrheal dehydration isn't the problem in this country that it is elsewhere in the world, but it is one of the leading reasons for visits to emergency rooms here in the United States,'' said Dr. William Greenough a professor of medicine at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and chairman of the International Child Health Foundation in Baltimore.

Diarrhea is a major cause of death in the Third World, where 4.5 million youngsters succumb to the disease annually, according to World Health Organization figures.

Greenough and a group of other physicians at private and public university hospitals have begun to promote the use of oral rehydration therapy to eradicate dehydration among infants. The simple formula, which can be produced for pennies, consists of water, sugar, sodium and potassium. However, Greenough said the cost to consumers would be around $4 a quart, which could be an impediment to poor women whose newborns typically become ill from dehydration.

The national effort, endorsed by the National Academy of Pediatrics, is funded by a grant from Ross Laboratories in Columbus, Ohio. The grant pays the cost of disseminating information, not the formula.

Rep. Mike Espy, D-Miss., whose state has the second-highest infant mortality rate in the nation after the District of Columbia, said Mississippi has gotten federal and state Medicaid money to pay for the formula for poor women. Other states are seeking money.

Greenough said diarrhea may seem ''a trivial nuisance, but it's also very deadly.''

''Fortunately, the simple solution is the best solution,'' he said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The Federal Communications Commission Thursday proposed to fine two subsidiaries of Nynex Corp. a total of $1.4 million for violations of regulations covering telephone companies and for overchanging customers.

The Nynex subsidiaries, New York Telephone Co. and New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., have 30 days to respond to the FCC's charges.

The FCC also proposed to cut the rates of the two NYNEX subsidiaries by a combined amount of $35.5 million to correct overcharges to customers.

The commission said that NYT and NET conducted transactions between 1984 and 1988 with their non-regulated unit Materiel Enterprises Co., designed to boost the overall profits of Nynex Corp., the parent company.

Nynex Chairman William Ferguson said the company wanted its customers to understand that ''there has been no intention of overcharging. We will, of course, abide by whatever decision finally comes out of this issue.''

The FCC's Common Carrier Bureau found that ''NYT and NET purchased equipment, supplies and services from MECO at prices that were inflated by $118.5 million. Approximately $35 million of these inflated costs were passed along to interstate payers.''

The commission proposed to fine NYT and NET a total of $1.4 million and reduce the company's future revenues by $35.5 million in their next access tariff filings with the FCC, in order to compensate interstate ratepayers overcharges enforced from 1984 to 1988.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Citing strong backing from Houston officials, an administrative law judge for the Transportation Department recommended Thursday that Continental Airlines be the designated carrier on a Honolulu-to-Tokyo route.

The recommendation by administrative law judge Ronnie Yoder put Houston-based Continental ahead of five other airlines vying for the route.

A spokesman for the Department of Transportation said a ''departmental decision maker'' would be named to make the final ruling on the route by May 23.

If Yoder's recommendation is approved, Continental would be authorized for seven round-trip flights per week between Houston and Tokyo with a stop in Honolulu for a period of five years, according to the department spokesman.

''Continental enjoys strong civic support from Houston and its selection will fulfill the expectations of the Houston parties and the department for single plane service'' to Japan, Yoder said in his ruling.

Yoder recomended ''backup authority'' to Phoenix-based America West Airlines for one year. Originating in Phoenix, the America West route would include stops in Las Vegas and Honolulu en route to Tokyo, but would only be authorized if Continental was unable to offer the service.

But Yoder expressed confidence the ''strong Houston support and relation to Continental'' would assure the service to Tokyo ''will actually be operated.''

Yoder added in his ruling that ''Continental offers real achievable fare incentives to Tokyo-Honolulu passengers by offering free domestic-beyond service to Los Angeles and its hubs at Newark, Denver and Houston.''

The four other airlines seeking the Tokyo route authorization were Aloha, American, Delta, and Hawaiian.

The route authorization was part of a 1985 agreement with Japan and was formerly served for parcel only by Federal Express, which had to drop it as a condition of its merger with Flying Tiger. The department spokesman said the original agreement also allowed passenger service so that Continental could conceivably begin its service as soon as the final ruling is issued in May.

ATLANTA (FEB. 8) UPI - The South has surpassed the Northeast as the nation's region where the AIDS epidemic appears to be growing fastest, officials reported Thursday.

''It got off to a slower start in the South, but now we have increases in the region due to the buildup in homosexual activity and an increasing drug problem,'' said Dr. Ruth Berkelman, chief of the AIDS Surveillance Branch of the national Centers for Disease Control.

Between 1988 and 1989, the total number of acquired immune deficiency syndrome cases reported in the South rose 22 percent - from 9,091 to 11,053, officials said.

The numbers mark the first time since federal health officials began monitoring the spread of the deadly disease in 1981 that the South has surpassed the Northeast in total number of cases reported in a year and the largest percentage increase.

The CDC defines the South as Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, West Virginia, Virgnia, the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

The Northeastern states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticutt, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania reported 10,718 cases in 1989, down from 11,574 cases in 1988. New York City contributed nearly half of the Northeast cases, with 4,397 cases reported in 1989.

The growing epidemic in the South apparently is being led by high rates of AIDS cases in large cities, officials said. There were 901 AIDS cases reported in Miami last year, 892 cases reported in Houston, 864 cases reported in Atlanta, 858 cases reported in Washington and 539 cases reported in Dallas.

Florida had the highest proportion of cases in the region, with 27.9 cases per 100,000 people. Georgia was second highest with 17.2 cases per 100,000 people.

In 1985, the South reported 1,397 cases in homosexual and bisexual men. In 1989, that number rose to 6,417. Cases among intravenous drug users in the South increased from 204 in 1985 to 1,750 in 1989, Berkelman said.

''A lot of the problem can be blamed on heightened drug activity in southern Florida,'' Berkelman said. ''When you add Miami, West Palm Beach with Fort Lauderdale alone, you are well into the thousands.''

Fort Lauderdale reported 603 cases and West Palm Beach 340 in 1989.

After the South, the Midwest and the U.S. Territories had the greatest increases in the numbers of AIDS cases reported from 1988 to 1989. Both regions reported 18 percent increases.

The total number of AIDS cases reported in the Midwest in 1989 was 3,436, up from 2,919 in 1988. The Midwest is made up of Ohio, Indiana Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota and South Dakota, Kansas and Nebraska.

In the U.S. Territories, including Puerto Rico, the number of reported cases jumped from 1,286 in 1988 to 1,516 in 1989.

The total number of AIDS case in the West in 1989 was 8,515, up from 7,324 in 1988, a 16 percent increase.

Los Angeles, where 2,305 cases were reported in 1989, and San Francisco where 1,816 cases were reported last year, accounted for nearly half of the cases in the West, which is comprised of Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, California, Alaska and Hawaii.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Attracted by a new tax-free benefit, Americans purchased $826 million in savings bonds last month, the best January sales volume for the popular investment since World War II, the government said Thursday.

The savings bonds, which pay variable interest rates based on the yield of 5-year Treasury notes, are guaranteed to earn interest for 30 years, and pay the face amount in at least 12 years. The current rate is 6.98 percent.

The January buying spree marked a 39 percent increase over December and a 2 percent increase over January 1989, with the total value of savings bonds held by the public breaking the $118-billion mark, the Treasury Department said.

''January was the first month in which bond purchases were eligible to earn tax-free interest, under certain circumstances, if the redemption proceeds are used toward the tuition and fees of post-secondary education

'' the department said.

To be eligible for the new tax-free status, the savings bonds must be purchased by those aged 24 years and older, and used for their education or the education of their ''dependent children,'' it said.

''In the year of redemption, bond proceeds must be offset by qualifying tuition and fees for a full tax exclusion,'' the department said.

In addition, the savings bond owner's income in the year the investment is cashed in must be no more than $60,000 for taxpayers filing jointly or $40,000 for single taxpayers to earn the full benefit, it said.

Those salary ranges are based on 1990 figures and will be adjust for inflation, the department said.

''The tax-free feature is just the latest of a number of features making U.S. Savings Bonds an attractive investment,'' it said. ''Backed by the full faith and credit of the United States, they are totally secure.''

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 8) UPI - Singer-songwriter Stevie Wonder, responding to a suit alleging he stole the Oscar-award winning song ''I Just Called to Say I Love You,'' testified Thursday he conceived the tune on a ride home from his mother's house.

Wonder testified in U.S. District Court that he came up with ''working'' lyrics, a chorus and music to the popular ballad on a drive back to his suite at a Hollywood hotel after a visit at his mother's San Fernando Valley home on July 15, 1976.

Wonder said the tune underwent numerous revisions before it was released in the 1984 movie ''The Woman In Red'' and won an Academy Award for best song in a motion picture.

The next year, the song became the object of a copyright infringement lawsuit brought against Wonder by a songwriter who claimed the singer had stolen the ballad after it was played for him several years earlier.

When he applied for consideration for an Academy Award, Wonder allegedly approved documents written by his lawyer that said the song was written for the comedy movie that starred Gene Wilder and the late Gilda Radner, a requirement that had to be met for Oscar consideration.

The same documents stated the ballad was not finished before 1984, a contention the suing songwriter, Lloyd Chiate, said is untrue.

Wonder, speaking in a soft vice, testified that he had recorded some ideas for the tune at a sound studio the day after his visit with his mother.

''I put down a chorus, with some lyrics, with words that I thought of at the moment ... not complete - with some 'ums' and some 'das' and some 'dos,''' Wonder said.

That recording, however, was lost and Wonder claims he only has a cassette recording of it made months later and given to a lead singer in a Japanese band called ''Bread & Butter.''

Wonder testified it was not until seven years later, while attending a screening of ''The Woman in Red'' before music was added to the film, that he was inspired to finish ''I Just Called.''

Wonder, who is blind, said the tune seemed appropriate for a scene he ''sensed'' in the movie in which Wilder is on the telephone to his wife in the film.

''I said to singer Dione Warwick that this gives me the inspiration for finishing up a song that I wrote that might be good for the film,'' Wonder testified.

Chiate contends the song is ''strikingly similar'' to one he co-wrote and had played for Wonder several times in the 1970s.

Chiate's attorneys described him as an established songwriter who has collaborated on such tunes as ''Magic Man'' by Fifth Dimension, ''You've got the Love'' by Marilyn MacCoo and Billy Davis Jr., and numerous Eddie Money songs, including ''Maybe I'm a Fool.''

Chiate, who also owns a guitar store in Hollywood, is seeking several million dollars in damages which he claims the song earned Wonder.

The suit filed in 1985 was originally dismissed by U.S. District Judge David Williams, but an appeals court reversed the judge's decision and the case was forced to trial.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Three senior U.S. commanders, including the general who commanded the Panama invasion where a military police company with women exchanged fire with Panamanian forces, rejected Thursday the idea of putting women in front-line combat units.

Gen. Maxwell Thurman, head of the Southern Command, Gen. Norman Schwarkopf whose Central Command is responsible for the Middle East region, and Gen. James Lindsay, commander of all U.S. special operations forces, were questioned on the proposition by Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The topic is likely to be widely discussed during work on the Pentagon's

1991 budget, and Nunn noted there may be a few votes on the issue along the line. Currently, law bars the assignment of women to combat units, but women routinely serve in support units, including flight crews and MP units that can come under fire.

''The law in my view does not need to be changed,'' Thurman told Nunn. ''There were cases in Panama where women came under fire and did what we trained them to do, but we train all people to be capable of reacting in a combat situation. I think the laws currently extant are great.''

He noted that in low intensity conflict fighting ''may ebb and flow and everbody's liable to get caught up in th fighting.''

And Thurman said the heavy loads carried by combat personnel are likely to be too heavy for most women to handle.

''The routine carrying of a 120-pound rucksack day in and day out in the nexus of battle (by women) is that which is to be avoided,'' he said.

Nunn countered that the argument will be that there are women who can carry the load, and Thurman responded: ''I know that's what the argument is going to be. ... It works well just like it is.''

Lindsay said he agreed ''with everything General Thurman said,'' and noted that what the women did in Panama ''wasn't closing with and defeating the enemy. There's a vast difference between defending yourself and closing with the enemy.''

Referring to the heavy loads troops must carry, Lindsay added, ''The fact of the matter is ... on the average I don't think that many women want to do that.''

And Schwarzkopf told the panel, ''I don't think anyone wouldn't say you'd lose some fighting ability if 50 percent of all of our infantry units were women.''

''We train everyone to defend themselves. If the situation gets to where the enemy is coming up the walls, I guarantee you everone will be defending themselves,'' he said.

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 8) UPI - British Petroleum, the owner of oil that gushed from a disabled tanker off the Southern California coast, said Thursday the vessel's owner, American Trading Transportion of New York, is responsible for the spill.

''The position under the law is the vessel owner has the responsibility,'' said John C. Morgan of BP America Inc. of Cleveland, a subsidiary of British Petroleum PLC.

''As (the) cargo owner, we are concerned,'' Morgan, senior vice president for crude trading and transportation, said at a news conference in Cleveland.

The Coast Guard said a 3-foot hole in the tanker American Trader, which was chartered by BP America, was possibly caused after the ship hit its own anchor as the vessel was maneuvering into place to unload its cargo into a submerged pipeline Wednesday.

Roughly 300,000 gallons of oil spilled.

Morgan said BP America chartered the vessel because the oil company is not considered a U.S. cocern, thus it is not allowed to own U.S.-flagged ships.

Morgan estimated that the spill involved about 7,600 barrels or 319,000 gallons. The oil was worth about $20 a barrel, or a $152,000.

Morgan gave no cost estimate on the cleanup work and said the company has no confirmation on the cause of the spill.

''There will be further damage to the somewhat tarnished reputation of the oil industry, which I hope very much we can mitigate by making a good response,'' Morgan said.

Officials at American Trading in New York were not immediately available to respond to BP America's position that it, as vessel owner, is repsonsible for the spill.

Tony Kozlowski, a spokesman for BP America, said the company had sent about 20 employees to the spill site to help with clean-up efforts in a ''consultant'' role to American Trading.

''We'll use all the resources we have to control the spill,'' Kozlowski said.

Kozlowski said that BP America had contacted boom companies and wildlife groups to offer assistance.

In a telephone interview late Wednesday, Sanford Schmidt, president of American Trading Transportation, said his company had sent a spill coordinator and a former ship captain to help with cleanup efforts.

''Of course we are doing everything we possibly can,'' Schmidt said. ''The ship is boomed off, so we obviously hope that no further oil will escape from the ship.''

The company, which has been in business more than 50 years, owns and operates tankers as its sole business.

Schmidt said there were some reports from his crew, which totaled about two dozen, that a swell had caused the ship to rise up then fall back on its anchor, but he said this information was still sketchy.

The National Ocean Industries Association issued a statement asserting that the spill should not be used as a reason to delay offshore leasing off the California coast or any other state.

The trade group said that since 1970, there have been only 10 oil spills in excess of 1,000 barrels on the outer continental shelf. None of those spills caused ''significant'' environmental damage, it said.

(FEB. 8) UPI - Oil prices eased down in a roller-coaster day of trading Thursday after a report that refinery "turnarounds" would begin earlier than usual in Europe as a result of unseasonably warm weather lowering demand for heating oil.

Demand for crude oil declines as individual refineries either stop or curb production to turn around their refining process to emphasize output of gasoline rather than heating oil and perform needed maintenance.

The authorative Platt's Oilgram reported that low heating oil prices and the resulting poor refining margins had prompted some refiners in northwestern Europe and the Mediterranean to advance their turnaround schedules.

Some European refineries have already reduced their intake of crude as a result of the warm winter and the poor demand for heating oil, Platt's said. "This is the season for turnarounds to start," said Bill Hinton of Stotler & Co. in New York.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for March delivery dropped 23 cents to $22.09 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange after hitting a high of $22.46 a barrel earlier in the day.

Hinton said higher WTI prices earlier were "a continuation" of the upward momentum generated late Wednesday when prices rebounded after a decline earlier in the day.

In addition to Platt's report, the downward movement of crude prices was aided by the fact WTI broke through the support level of last week's $22.11 low in the last hour of trading Thursday. "It was a combination of both," said Jerry Samuels, vice president of Shearson Lehman Hutton's International Energy Desk in New York.

April delivery WTI lost only three cents to $21.65 a barrel further narrowing the "spread," or price difference, between the March contract. This lowering of the relative value of the spot-month March contract reflects the market's belief that U.S. "refineries will be going through their turnarounds shortly," Samuels said.

WTI lost 15 cents on the U.S. Gulf Coast cash market to $22.15 a barrel. Home heating oil for March delivery fell 0.57 cent on the Merc to 55.32 cents a gallon while losing 0.95 cent on the New York Harbor cash market to 55.70 cents a gallon.

"Heating oil was weak because of the continued warm weather," Hinton said. John Davis, meteorologist with Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc. in Chicago, also said a new weather pattern is developing that indicates the warmer weather, which drove heating oil prices down in January after a surge during the December freeze, may continue through the rest of the winter.

Unleaded gasoline slipped 0.03 cent on the Merc to 61.17 cents a gallon while it remained level on the New York Harbor cash market at 60.50 cents a gallon.

Hinton noted there is a bias toward higher gasoline prices around this time of year. After usually bottoming out in December "the markets normally firm up to a high sometime from April through June" with the approach of high demand during the warm-weather driving season, he said.

On the European cash market, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent crude slid five cents to $19.60 a barrel. The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East exported mainly to the Far East - eased down two cents to $16.55 a barrel.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (FEB. 8) UPI - Investments totaling $530 billion will have to be pumped into East Germany over the next five years if the country is to achieve the same economic standards as West Germany, a study released Wednesday found.

The West German magazine Stern, which commissioned the study, said about 4,000 companies would need to actively participate in the economic rehabilitation.

Quoting from an investment study commissioned from a senior business consultant in Duesseldorf, Stern said that investments totaling $309 billion will be needed in the industrial sector alone.

The study said a total of more than $530 billion would have to invested in the East German economy to bring it up to West German standards.

West German Economics Minister Helmut Haussmann said Wednesday he was confident that ''a German-German economic miracle, in both German states or in a unified state, is possible.''

Stern said the consultant, Axel Boje, shared widespread optimism that in spite of East Germany's current economic crisis the money would be well invested.

But, Boje warned, ''If we keep on hesitating, the Japanese will be there before us.''

The Deutsche Bank said in a report distributed Thursday that the East German infrastructure - although outdated - was still functioning much better than that of the other Eastern European countries.

The Bundesbank expressed similar optimism about eventual returns on investments and said, ''On the whole, East Germany is potentially by far the most attractive country of all Eastern European countries for West Germans to invest in.''

Another banking expert said he believed ''the unification of Germany will open up an enormous growth potential.''

Wednesday, the West German government offered to start immediate negotiations with East Germany on a monetary union between the two countries, which is largely seen as a step toward reunification.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said he wanted to act as fast as possible in a bid to restore confidence in the East German economy and to help stem a daily migration of about 2,000 East Germans to West Germany.

The Deutsche Bank report said East Germany needed quick economic successes to slow down the exodus, which otherwise ''will have fatal consequences for the East German economy.''

In the negotiations on a monetary union, the West German government is expected to suggest adoption of the deutschmark by East Germany but insist that East Germany adopt West Germany's economic system and legislation and that it hand over monetary control to the Bundesbank, the West German central bank.

SPRINGFIELD, MA. (FEB. 8) UPI - Dave Bing, Elvin Hayes, Earl Monroe and the late Neil Johnston were elected Thursday to basketball's Hall of Fame.

They will be inducted in ceremonies May 15, joining 168 individuals and four teams in the shrine.

Bing, an All-America at Syracuse, played nine of his 12 years in the NBA with the Detroit Pistons. He spent two years with the Washington Bullets and one with the Boston Celtics.

''Without sounding cocky, I think I deserve it,'' Bing said. ''I've worked for it. The mere fact to be selected to such a prestigious organization means a hell of a lot to me because I think that's the pinnacle of any athlete's career,'' said Bing, 46. ''To be inducted into the Hall of Fame speaks very well to what I've tried to accomplish as a player.''

Bing averaged 20 points a game, played in seven All-Star Games and received MVP honors in 1976. His No. 21 jersey was the first retired by the Pistons.

Hayes, the ''Big E,'' played 16 seasons and was one of the game's great offensive threats.

He was a three-time All-America at Houston and College Player of the Year in 1967-68. The Rockets made him the No. 1 draft choice in 1968.

Hayes was traded to Washington and played on the Bullets 1978 championship team. He returned to the Rockets and retired after the 1983-84 season. Hayes earned Rookie of the Year honors and played in 12 All-Star Games.

Monroe, a dazzling player whose spins and high dribbles captivated fans, became known simply as ''The Pearl.'' He starred at Winston-Salem and was a first-round draft pick by Baltimore in 1967. He was traded to the New York Knicks, where he joined Walt Frazier in the backcourt and helped lead the Knicks to the 1973 title.

Monroe is the eighth person associated with the 1973 Knicks to be enshrined in the hall. In 13 NBA seasons, he averaged 18 points a game and added 2,416 assists.

Monroe and Hayes were en route to Miami for this weekend's NBA All-Star Game and were unavailable for comment.

Johnston, who died in 1978 at age 49 while playing basketball in Bedford, Texas, began his professional sports career as a baseball player, but switched to basketball because of a sore pitching arm.

During eight seasons with the Philadelphia Warriors, he led the NBA is scoring three times and played in six All-Star Games. An alumnus of Ohio State, Johnston's specialty was the hook shot. A knee injury forced him into retirement.

MILTON, FL. (FEB. 8) UPI - Religious freedom was the focus of questioning

Thursday during the first day of jury selection in the murder trial of an evangelist accused of convincing a mother to starve her 4-year-old daughter to rid her of demons.

Mary Nicholson, 39, is charged with first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse for allegedly convincing Darlene Jackson her daughter was possessed by six demons that could be exorcised through strict diet and discipline.

The indictment accuses Nicholson of ''torturing and maliciously punishing'' Kimberly McZinc, who weighed 25 pounds when she died. Authorities said she should have weighed 48 pounds.

Nicholson, a slender woman with short black hair, sat quietly with her hands together and a handkerchief in her hands as potential jurors were asked whether their religious beliefs would influence their decision.

During individual questioning by prosecutors, prospective jurors were asked if they felt the state should have authority to place restrictions on how someone practices their religion.

The defense lawyer countered by asking them if they thought it ''some weird type religion'' to believe someone can be healed by touching them or that people can be influenced by a diety ''to the point of speaking in tongues.''

From a pool of 30 jurors questioned Thursday, 27 said they had heard of the case or read about it. Of those, six said they had already formed an opinion. A minister was excused because he said he was familiar with the religious practice of ''deliverance,'' or ridding people of evil spirits.

The case before Circuit Judge George Lowery comes two years to the day after the death of McZinc. Opening arguments are expected to begin Monday.

Last March, the child's 33-year-old mother pleaded guilty to third-degree murder and child abuse while the jury was deliberating. She was sentenced in September to seven years in prison and vowed to testify against Nicholson.

Jackson and her daughter lived with the Nicholson family in a mobile home from July 1987 until McZinc's death. She claimed the evangelist cast a religious trance over her to convince her the toddler was evil.

Pediatrician Dr. Lelia Montes testified during the Jackson trial that McZinc ''was skin and bones'' when brought to the hospital, with bruises on her abdomen, groin, thighs, chest and legs.

''She was emaciated, like one of those Ethiopian children you see on TV,''

Montes said.

Assistant State Attorney Kim Skievaski, who has said he would not seek the death penalty, told jurors Jackson kept a diary that indicated that as early as September 1987 McZinc was denied food and given little to drink except her own urine.

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN (FEB. 8) UPI - A Swedish air force Viggen JA-37 crashed Thursday, the third accident involving one of Sweden's mainstay fighters in four days, a military spokesman said.

In Thursday's incident, the spokesman said two aircraft were on maneuvers outside Ostersund, 275 miles northwest of Stockholm, when one of the fighters suddenly dived and crashed. The pilot parachuted to safety.

The accident followed a similar one on Monday when a 22-year-old pilot was killed when his Viggen crashed during a training mission outside Lidkoping 185 miles southwest of Stockholm.

Another Viggen was forced to land without wheels Tuesday outside Ronneby, 250 miles south of Stockholm, when its landing gear failed to lower. The pilot decided not to eject and landed successfully without injury.

Sweden is currently developing a new fighter, the JAS-39 Griffin, which it hopes will replace the Viggen later this decade. But the prototype of the Griffin toppled over and crashed on landing after its sixth test flight Feb. 2, 1989.

The second prototype has not yet been airborne.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Researchers reported Thursday they have discovered a link between prostate cancer and a gene known to suppress tumor growth in a variety of other cancers.

Prostate cancer strikes about 106,000 U.S. men annually, and is the second leading cause of cancer death in men.

In a study published in the journal Science, researchers from University of California-San Diego said they have demonstrated inactivation of the retinoblastoma, or RB, gene may play a role in the development of prostate cancer.

The first cancer associated with defects in the RB gene was retinoblastoma a rare, blinding eye cancer in children. Since that discovery several years ago, the RB mutation has been linked to breast cancer, bone cancer and small-cell lung cancer.

Now, Wen-Hwa Lee and colleagues report they have found insertion of a non-defective RB gene appears to dramatically slow development of human prostate tumors implanted in mice. Those results indicate RB defects may be a key factor in triggering some types of prostate cancer, researchers said.

The discovery has no immediate practical applicaiton for treatment of prostate cancer in men. But the California team wrote that its results indicate ''restoration of normal RB protein in tumors could have clinical utility.''

Dr. Robert Bookstein, co-author of the study, also said the new finding ''gives us insight into genetic events related to prostate cancer, of which we know very little.''

(FEB. 8) UPI - In Miami today, a federal judge declined to rule on whether Manuel Noriega is a prisoner of war. But U-S District Judge William Hoeveler says he does have jurisdiction to try Noriega on drug smuggling charges. With Noriega in court wearing his khaki general's uniform, his lawyer said the former Panamanian dictator can't be tried because he's a P-O-W under the Geneva Convention. Judge Hoeveler rejected the defense claim.

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner says the continued existence of NATO is ''perfectly compatible'' with German re-unification. But Woerner acknowledges that the alliance may have to make special arrangements to take account of Soviet security interests if a united Germany remains in NATO. Last week, East German Chancellor Hans Modrow proposed a neutral unified Germany with its capital in Berlin, but the idea of neutrality was quickly rejected by West German leaders.

A top Democrat says he opposes Senator Daniel Moynihan's bill to cut Social Security payroll taxes and put the entitlement program on a pay-as-you-go basis. Moynihan estimates that his bill would trim Social Security taxes by 55-BILLION dollars during the next two years. But Texas Senator Lloyd Bentsen, the chairman of the Finance Committee, says that kind of increase in the federal deficit would push up interest rates and hurt the dollar. The Senate Finance Committee is holding a second day of hearings on the Moynihan bill.

Jury deliberations resumed today in New York City in the assault trial of reputed mob boss John Gotti. Last night, one jury member told the judge that one of the jurors ''brought a previous bias into the deliberations.'' The judge told the jury to come back today anyway, and to consider kinder and gentler deliberations. Gotti is accused of ordering the wounding of a union official in retaliation for the trashing of a mob-linked restaurant.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Stocks closed with slight gains in active trading Thursday, as the results of the final leg of the Treasury's quarterly refunding derailed the market's attempt to extend its rally.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which surged 33.78 Wednesday, rose 4.28 to close at 2644.37.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index closed down 0.22 to 184.09 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 0.79 to close at 332.96. The price of an average NYSE share fell four cents.

Advances led declines 776-694 among the 1,959 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Big Board volume totaled 176,240,000 shares, compared with 186,710,000 shares traded Wednesday.

Some analysts said results of the auction of $10 billion in 30-year bonds Thursday afternoon were slightly disappointing. Traders were looking for an average yield on the new bonds of 8.48 to 8.50 percent, and the average yield just squeezed into the range of expectations at 8.50 percent.

They said the news sparked some profit taking, which bit into the day's gains. At one point in early trading, the Dow industrials were up 24 points. Other analysts said they felt the pullback was not so much tied to the auction results, but was a normal consolidation of the gains Wednesday and early Thursday.

Gains in Treasury bond prices in anticipation of a more enthusiastic reception for the new bonds bolstered prices most of the day. In late trading, notes and bonds were up as much as a half point. But it was the extension of Wednesday's rally in oil issues that saved the market from ending up in the minus column.

Jeff Kaminsky, head of institutional sales trading at Mabon, Nugent and Co., said investors were starting to realize that demand for oil from Eastern bloc countries could be a real boon to oil companies if trade barriers begin to ease.

"Also, the price of oil has stabilized," he said. "Fluctuations are not as great as they had been and this has created a sense of calm and given people a better picture of what the future looks like."

On the trading floor, Varity was the most active NYSE issue, down 1/8 to 3 1/4.

Phillips Petroleum followed, up 3/8 to 26 1/2. Bank of New England was third, tumbling 5/8 to 5 1/4 after agreeing to take $17.5 million less for the sale of its leasing group to the Bank of Tokyo than the two settled on in November. The revision in the deal comes at a time when the bank, already hammered by enormous losses, is trying to sell off $6 billion in non-bank assets and is considering the sale of some units.

Among the blue chips, AT&T rose 3/8 to 40 1/4 and IBM fell 3/8 to 102 3/4. Both were among the most heavily traded issues. Exxon gained 1/8 to 48 1/8, Chevron jumped 2 3/8 to 70 1/4 and Texaco climbed 1 1/4 to 59 5/8.

Elsewhere in the oil sector, Unocal rose 3/8 to 30 1/4, Amoco gained 3/4 to 54 and Amerada Hess jumped 1 1/2 to 48.

In other trading, Rykoff-Sexton plunged five to 16 7/8. Late Wednesday the company said it expects to report a sharp drop in earnings for the latest fiscal quarter.

And Sea Containers sank 2 7/8 to 63 3/4 amid disappointment over a reported decision by its board to recommend a recapitalization plan to shareholders that would call for the repurchase of up to seven million of its shares at $70 each.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 210,724,240 shares, compared with 220,485,090 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange, but volume figures and the closing Amex Market Value index were unofficial due to computer problems at the exchange.

The Amex Market Value index rose 1.33 to close at 357.68. The price of an average share was unavailable. Advances led declines 284-258 among the 792 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 17,245,000 shares, compared with 15,319,290 traded Wednesday. Hillhaven led the Amex issues, unchanged at 1 1/2.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index closed up 0.53 at 427.32.

MOSCOW (FEB. 8) UPI - Azerbaijani militants fired at Red Army soldiers Thursday and stopped surrendering their weapons, as the security situation in the mutinous republic suddenly deteriorated nearly three weeks after the central government intervened in an effort to restore calm, the Soviet newspaper Izvestia said.

The government newspaper said attempts by border guards to re-establish full control of the Azerbaijani border with Iran were meeting resistance. Azerbaijanis burned down the 500-mile border of barbed wire and guardposts over the New Year holiday.

''About 200 Iranians and about the same number of Soviet citizens illegally cross the border daily,'' Izvestia said, adding that six ''trespassers'' opened fire on the border guards in the Jalilabadsky district on Tuesday night.

Izvestia said four of every five plants and factories were on full or partial strike Wednesday in the Azerbaijani capital of Baku as part of the vow by the Azerbaijani Popular Front to halt work until the 17,000 Soviet troops leave the Caspian Sea capital.

The army stormed into Baku almost three weeks ago to thwart what Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has said was an undisguised coup attempt by militants of the Azerbaijani Popular Front to take over the oil-rich Moslem republic.

Although a state of emergency and curfew were imposed as part of the use of military force in the capital, Baku's military commander, Vladimir Dubinyak, has said he would work to end the curfew and the state of emergency by the middle of February if gunfire stops and full calm returns.

But Izvestia said, ''The situation in Baku and other Azerbaijani cities has worsened after several days of relative calm. Attempts by local authorities and government authorities to regain control of the situation and assume the initiative have not yet been successful. Militants continue to urge people to strike.

''There are attempts to picket entrances to enterprises and bus depots. Only 18 percent of enterprises in Baku are functioning normally,'' the government newspaper said.

More alarming, Izvestia reported, was that militants, many of whom had formed vigilante armies during the recent fighting with the Armenians, had stopped handing in their weapons to authorities.

''The voluntary surrender of arms that (had) started in many regions of the republic was actually halted on Feb. 6-7,'' Deputy Defense Minister Valentin Varennikov told Izvestia.

He said that in the past 24 hours army units in Baku, Askeran and Shusha came under fire and that armed militants appeared in several villages, including Yukhary-Askipara, Ashagi-Askipara and Baganis-Airum in the Kazakh district.

Izvestia said opens calls were heard for an armed struggle in Lenkoran, a southern city on the Caspian Sea, where militants took over total control before the Soviet army invaded to install a new communist leadership in the republic.

Varennikov said extremists of the Azerbaijani front had stashed weapons in new arms caches as they did when preparing for their war against the Armenians.

Those hostilities were ended by Soviet army intervention and truces it brokered between the combatants.

Varennikov, who also is the commander in chief of Soviet land forces, said a secret arms cache found in the Shaumyan district near the disputed enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh contained 38 Kalashnikov submachine guns, one pistol and 30,000 rounds of ammunition.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - China, the No. 1 market for U.S. wheat exports, will be given the opportunity to buy an additional 1 million metric tons of wheat at subsidized prices, the Agriculture Department said Thursday.

It was the second time in two months that China has been offered wheat through the Export Enhancement Program, the major U.S. export subsidy program.

China has purchased 5.7 million metric tons of U.S. wheat since the marketing year opened June 1. There are 36.7 bushels of wheat in a metric ton, so the purchases equal 209 million bushels.

Although it is the world's leading wheat importer, China also is one of the world's largest wheat producers. Demand has outstripped its attempts to increase the size of its domestic crop.

Beijing was discouraged from seeking wheat at subsidized prices in the weeks following its bloody attack on pro-democracy demonstrators in June. No subsidized sales were made until Aug. 29.

Under the EEP, exporters are given bonus amounts of government-owned grain if they lower their prices in order to make a sale to a targeted country. The program was created in 1985 to counter tactics being used by U.S. competitors.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The U.S. share of the Soviet grain market may decline in coming years because of quality problems with American exports, a Soviet official warned senators Thursday.

The Soviet Union bought a record 21.7 million metric tons of U.S. corn and wheat, valued at nearly $3 billion, in fiscal 1989 and has purchased 13.7 million tons since the 1990 fiscal year began last Oct. 1.

''However, we must inform you that there still remain serious complaints about the quality of U.S. grain as far as we are concerned,'' said Michael Ageev, deputy chairman of Exportkhleb, the grain-buying arm of the Soviet government.

At a Senate Agriculture subcommittee hearing, Ageev said U.S. corn and wheat typically contain more foreign material, more broken kernels and greater irregularity in kernel size than grain his country buys from Australia, Canada or China.

Ageev urged more action by the United States to raise grain quality and warned that U.S. suppliers could suffer in the future. The Kremlin is experimenting with way to expand domestic production.

''We expect that in the nearest years, our imports of grain will begin to decline and if there is no improvement in the quality of U.S. grain, this reduction will be to a great extent at the expense of U.S. grain,'' he said.

In testimony prepared for the hearing, the North American Export Grain Association said the quality of U.S. grain has risen in the past few years and there was no need for legislation on the matter. There were only 24 complaints last year, it said.

A spokesman noted there are more complaints about grain quality when world demand is sluggish and concluded ''price, rather than quality, is the significant factor determining customer satisfaction.''

U.S. and Soviet negotiators are scheduled to meet in Vienna March 21-22 for the second round of talks toward a new long-term grain agreement.

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL (FEB. 8) UPI - A group of prisoners Thursday took 18 hostages, including 11 reporters, during a riot in a southwest Brazil prison, officials said.

The inmates later freed one of the hostages, Maria Angela Siqueira, a journalist who was eight months pregnant.

The violence broke out after police discovered a group of about 60 prisoners trying to escape through a tunnel at the Vitoria Detention Center, situated about 270 miles northwest of Rio de Janeiro, a statement from the government said.

The statement said inmates then set fire to matresses and took hostages in the confusion, including reporters sent to cover the attempted escape.

Among those captured were five members of the Pastoral Prison Commission of the Catholic Church and Sandro do Carmo, director of the church group Brazil State of the Holy Spirit.

The prisoners, reportedly armed with knives and firearms, said they would release their hostages if authorities provided them with seven revolvers, ammunition, bullet-proof vests, $25,000 and a helicopter with which to escape, the statement said.

After more than five hours of tense negotiations, the prisoners freed Siqueira.

''They are prepared for anything,'' the journalist said after her release. ''Something has to be done, because anything could happen. The prisoners have threatened several times to kill everyone.''

CAIRO, Egypt (FEB. 8) UPI - A Soviet Moslem spiritual leader praised Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's reforms, which he said had helped improve conditions for Moslems, during a conference in Saudi Arabia Thursday, news reports said.

''Seventy million Moslems in the Soviet Union are now experiencing a great improvement in their conditions following 60 years of stagnation under communism,'' Islamic leader Sheikh Talaat Tajuldin was quoted as saying by Egypt's Middle East News Agency.

Tajuldin did not comment however on continuing disturbances in Soviet Moslem Azerbaijan. Soviet troops stormed Baku, the Azerbaijani capital, Jan. 20 after more than 60 people, mostly Christian Armenians, were killed by Moslem Azerbaijani nationalists.

Tajuldin said Soviet Moslems now enjoyed a greater religious freedom than ever before.

''Last year, 50,000 copies of the Koran (Moslem holy book) were printed in the Soviet Union with funds from Islamic countries ... also a number of religious institutes have been officially inaugurated,'' Tajuldin said.

(FEB. 8) UPI - Sweden today announced a sweeping austerity package designed to combat a deteriorating economy. The proposal that was put before Parliament calls for a two-year freeze on wages, prices and municipal taxes. The government also wants mandatory arbitration and a ban on strikes. The opposition says the package is like declaring a state of emergency. Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson says that if any of the suggestions are turned down, ''the government will resign.''

Romania's main political parties are meeting across Bucharest to decide on their candidates for a council that will govern the country until elections in May. The new National Unity Council is to hold its first meeting tomorrow, when its 180 members are to elect a Cabinet. The council was created following widespread demonstrations calling for the resignation of the National Salvation Front. That's the group that seized power during the overthrow of dictator Nicolae Ceausescu in December.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The World Bank approved its first loan to China Thursday since suspending lending to the Asian nation after the June crackdown on the pro-democracy movement in Tiananmen Square.

The $30 million earthquake-relief loan will be earmarked for housing, economic assets recovery, social services and reconstruction in an area devastated by the October 1989 quake in the border area between the provinces of Shanxi and Hebei, the bank said.

The loan will be provided by the International Development Association, the World Bank's concessionary lending affiliate.

The U.S. executive director at the bank's board voted in favor of the loan because it will help earthquake reconstruction efforts, a Treasury spokesman said.

But consideration of a $60 million loan for agriculture projects, proposed by the bank's administration, was postponed, bank sources said.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday the administration believes ''it should avoid actions that would harm the Chinese people and would be prepared, on a case-by-case basis, to have the World Bank consider earthquake aid and other basic human needs loans to China.''

Eagleburger said, however, ''We still do not support a general resumption of World Bank lending'' to China.

The multilateral organization suspended its lending to China in June, when the Beijing government crushed the pro-democracy movement. At that time, the bank had about $780 million in loans to China set for approval.

In the previous fiscal year from July 1, 1988 to June 30, 1989, the World Bank and IDA loaned China $1.3 billion.

The Bush administration has indicated it is prepared to support resumption of World Bank lending to China on a limited basis and for humanitarian purposes.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - The Bush administration does not have a coordinated national policy to address global warming and has failed to provide direction for climate change research, a congressional study showed Thursday.

The General Accounting Office, the auditing arm of Congress, said federal global warming research has ''lacked effective central and strategic planning'' because the administration has not set goals nor designated a lead agency to coordinate activities now spread among numerous departments.

More ominously, the report also said some federal scientists have expressed concern that, without clear research objectives, some policymakers might ''improperly direct or influence the course and results'' of studies to suit political purposes.

The study came as Allan Bromley, the president's chief science adviser, went before a Senate subcommittee to defend the administration's performance on global warming.

Bromley said that, at President Bush's direction, he had set up a Cabinet-level working group on global warming that would coordinate all federal activities and reach out to industry for recommendations on how best to reduce carbon dioxide emissions, the primary ''greenhouse'' gas of concern.

He said the private sector remained an ''untapped resource'' in federal policy discussions on global warming and that U.S. companies could provide a wealth of recommendations on ways to conserve energy and, thus, reduce the burning of coal and oil, the main source of carbon dioxide.

Bromley also denied there is an administration rift over global warming policy despite reports that top officials clashed over the tone and substance of a speech Bush gave this week to an international climate change conference.

Of the alleged discord, he said: ''Unhappily, when the system leaks, what comes out bears not much relation to the facts.''

Bromley acknowledged differences over the speech, but he said that was the case with virtually every major presidential speech.

He also maintained administration officials basically agreed on a U.S. global warming policy that balanced environmental protection against economic considerations and concentrated in the short term on more research to improve scientific understanding of climate change.

But the GAO study said federal climate change research appeared to lack focus because top administration officials have failed to set clear goals or policies to guide such activities.

''We found the administration has not yet established a national policy or communicated a clear statement of goals or set of objectives governing global climate change,'' said the report, requested by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich.

''In addition, the administration has not developed an overall strategy that provides direction for federal agencies' global climate change activities,'' it said. ''The administration has not ... provided adequate guidance to agencies to effectively address the global warming issue.''

The report said Congress in 1987 directed the Environmental Protection Agency to develop and propose a global warming policy, but that EPA efforts were put on hold by the administration because, among other reasons, it wanted to wait for better scientific information.

''In the absence of executive direction clarifying responsibilities of federal agencies, climate change research activities and policy formulation were being conducted in an atmosphere that lacked effective central and strategic planning,'' the study said.

Beyond the lack of focus, the GAO said some federal scientists were concerned that the failure to establish research objectives for global warming studies could lead to policymakers to twist results for political reasons.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Citicorp Mortgage and its affiliates regained the title of top residential mortgage lender in 1989, posting $12.3 billion in originations, Inside Mortgage Finance said Thursday.

Citicorp, the top mortgage lender in 1987, easily edged out 1988's top originator, Home Savings of America of Los Angeles, last year, said the independent weekly newsletter that tracks trends in the mortgage market.

Home Savings dropped to third place with $11 billion in mortgage, while Great Western Financial of Beverly Hills, Calif., was the second-largest mortgage lender, with $11.1 billion.

Rounding out the top five were the Fleet/Norstar Financial Group in fourth place with $8.7 billion and First Nationwide Bank in fifth place with $5.5 billion.

Due to a drop in adjustable-rate mortgage lending as well as a restructuring of the thrift industry, most major thrifts saw their lending drop in 1989. Meanwhile, a number of large commercial banks and mortgage companies increased mortgage lending.

Great Western was the only thrift among the top 15 lenders that posted an increase in originations in 1989. Home Savings registered an 18 percent slide in production, while fifth-ranked First Nationwide Bank experienced a drop of 25 percent.

Among the top 15 lenders, commercial banks recorded some of the biggest mortgage lending gains in 1989. Eighth-ranked Bank of America increased its origination 63 percent to $4.4 billion. Tenth-ranked Security Pacific National Bank posted the largest increase of all top lenders, 208 percent, to hit $4 billion in residential mortgage originations.

Mortgage companies also posted some impressive increases. Fleet/Norstar boosted its originations by 61 percent in 1989, largely due to an active wholesale operation. Likewise, eighth-ranked Travelers Mortgage Services, showing a 63 percent jump to $4.4 billion in volume, and 13th-ranked Prudential Home Mortgage, showing a 23 percent rise to $3.7 billion in originations, owed some of their growth to increased wholesale activity.

Two of the more traditional mortgage companies, 10th-ranked Countrywide Funding in Pasadena, Calif., with $4 billion in mortgage origination, and 15th-ranked Margaretten & Co. of Perth Amboy, N.J., with $3.1 billion, posted increases of 33 percent and 99 percent, respectively.

Inside Mortgage Finance said consolidation among mortgage lenders appeared to be inching upward.

In 1989, the top 15 lenders accounted for 25 percent of the total market, up from 23.8 percent in 1988. The consolidation is expected to continue in 1990, the newsletter said.

MOSCOW (FEB. 8) UPI - The influential chief of the official newspaper Pravda warned Thursday of an imminent split in the Soviet Communist Party, saying it could come just days after the party leadership approved the end of monopoly rule.

Ivan Frolov, who also is a Central Committee secretary, said a group of radical communists led by Yuri Afanasiev and other prominent legislators, including firebrand deputy Boris Yeltsin, would decide Saturday whether to split off and form a new party.

Frolov, briefing reporters a day after a momentous party plenum adopted a sweeping democratization platform, confirmed reports that Yeltsin was the only one of 249 Central Committee members who voted against the document in a possible bid to distance himself from the communists and position himself for leadership of the new party.

The editor of the Communist Party's official newspaper predicted a purge of party hard-liners before the 28th Party Congress in early summer as Mikhail Gorbachev tries to stay ahead of the quickening pace of change in his country.

Politburo member Alexander Yakovlev announced late Wednesday that participants in the three-day plenum had swept away the party's 70-year monopoly on power and will ask the people to approve a platform document that would establish a system of popular presidential elections.

Frolov said Afanasiev would lead a meeting of the radical communists on Saturday to decide whether to break from the party and form their own political organization.

The split would be the first rupture of ranks in the Communist Party since Soviet state founder Vladimir Lenin outlawed factions in 1921 and would put the party on the same course as Lithuanian communists who broke from Moscow seven weeks ago.

Asked if he shares the view that the plenum outcome was a major victory for Gorbachev, Frolov responded: ''Yes, I do in general, although I share it without euphoria or excess optimism because life is so complex and contradictory that things can become unhinged at any moment. And I even know how.

''I know how because I know that Yuri Afanasiev has already declared that on the 10th (of February) they will decide whether to create a new party or not. If a new party is created on the basis of the (Communist Party) Democratic Platform, it means there will be a split in the party. So how can one be optimistic?''

Afanasiev, among the most radical members of the revamped Soviet parliament, could not be reached for comment, but an independent Moscow journalist with close party ties confirmed Frolov's statement that Afanasiev and other leaders of its left wing would gather Saturday at a closed meeting.

Many members of the 57-member coordinating council of the group, which calls itself the Democratic Platform of the CPSU, or Soviet Communist Party, will be at the meeting, the journalist said.

The radical group claims 55,000 members in more than 100 cities across the vast country, the journalist said.

''They think they represent one-third of the party,'' the journalist said.

Although 55,000 communists would be a tiny share of the party's 18 million members, the splitting of the monolith that has enforced single-party rule for 72 years would send a powerful signal to other political movements burgeoning under Gorbachev's reforms.

The break would open the floodgates to a bewildering array of parties ranging from monarchists and anarchists to Christian and Social Democrats.

The Central Committee plenum was convened by Gorbachev to deal with the Lithuanian party's defiant Dec. 20 vote, but it moved far beyond that issue and adopted a historic program for democratization.

Gorbachev personally wrote the landmark democratization platform in eight days, dictating into a tape recorder at a Black Sea hideaway. The text of the document is expected to be made public in coming days.

''There were many ideas of which Gorbachev had spoken or written before,'' Frolov said. ''The basic work was done by Gorbachev.''

In his closing address to the plenum Gorbachev warned his party colleagues that their time was running out to spark the country's stagnant economy and stem ethnic violence.

''It is inadmissible to tarry now,'' the official Tass news agency quoted Gorbachev as saying. ''It is necessary to take the initiative in stormy and complicated processes in order to support healthy trends, consolidate them and try to overcome or inhibit destructive trends.''

MEXICO CITY (FEB. 8) UPI - Ford Motor Co. has revoked its decision to fire 2,400 employees on strike at its factory outside Mexico City, a top

Mexican labor leader said Thursday.

A spokesman for the Ford Motor Co. had warned striking workers at its Cuautitlan plant outside Mexico City on Wednesday that they would be fired if they failed to show up for work and described their walkout as an ''illegal work stoppage.''

Several thousand Ford employees have been on strike since December demanding higher wages and what they call ''union democracy.''

Separately, a week-long strike was settled Thursday at Ford's engine plant in Chihuahua, 750 miles northwest of Mexico City, after workers walked out Feb. 1 because agreement on a new contract had not been reached. The Chihuahua plant makes 2.3 liter four-cylinder engines for Ford's Tempo and Topaz cars sold in the United States.

Fidel Velasquez, secretary general of the Mexican Workers Confederation, known by its Spanish acronym as CTM, said the CTM's intervention settled the dispute over firing workers at the Cuautitlan plant, where castings, engines, and cars are made for the Mexican market.

''The Ford conflict has been settled based on an agreement that the workers return in same conditions in which they were before the conflict, with no reprisals. The company accepted the CTM petition to invalidate the firings and agreed to accept the workers back,'' Velasquez said.

He said talks with Ford officials will continue to establish final conditions, and he predicted workers would be back at their jobs by Monday.

Ford spokesman Carlos Bandala said 700 people showed up Thursday at the Cuautitlan plant to fill slots that would have been left vacant by the now-revoked decision.

The plant in Cuautitlan, about 21 miles northeast of downtown Mexico City, is working at a quarter of its capacity due to the walkout by workers, who total 3,800 in all, Bandala said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 8) UPI - Senate leaders said Thursday that, despite a week of intense closed-door negotiations with the Bush administration, they still have not reached a workable compromise on clean air legislation.

But they said talks will continue through the upcoming congressional recess and that they remain hopeful of bringing a consensus bill to the Senate floor upon returning to Capitol Hill later this month.

In a joint statement, Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said the talks had been ''candid and illuminating, identifying many areas of consensus as well as areas where differences remain.''

''The administration has assured us that they are prepared to continue their participation in these discussions,'' they said. ''We remain committed to producing sound, comprehensive clean air legislation at the earliest possible date.''

Environmentalists criticized the closed negotiations, saying the administration had forced Mitchell to hold the private sessions by threatening a GOP filibuster to block action on the Senate clean air bill unless key provisions were watered down.

''The administration has joined polluters in seeking to weaken the bill,'' said Richard Ayres, chairman of the National Clean Air Coalition, an umbrella group for several environmental groups.

Mitchell rejected such criticism, saying the negotiations were needed to achieve a bill that could gain Senate passage. He also said the talks were sure to produce a bill that was tougher than current law and the dispute was only over how much tougher it should be.

The negotiations have focused primarily on resolving the administration's concerns about Senate clean air bill, which President Bush has contended will impose onerous costs on American industry and consumers while providing few additional environmental benefits over his proposal.

In particular, the administration has objected to the Senate bill's restrictions on cancer-causing air pollution from industry and its tight limits on automobile tailpipe emissions, which cause urban smog.

The negotiations have produced a tentative agreement on air toxics, with Mitchell agreeing to provisions that would allow individual factories to gain exemptions from stringent health standards in the Senate bill. The compromise addresses industry complaints that the health standards are unrealistic and may force many plants to shut down.

At a news conference, Mitchell said the dispute over the automobile exhaust limits had not been resolved, but that enough progress had been made to warrant continued discussions.

The Senate bill would require two rounds of emission reductions by automakers, one in the mid-1990s and a second round after the year 2000.

The administration is adamantly opposed to the post-2000 cutbacks, saying they would raise the cost of a car by $500 while doing little to reduce smog. Environmentalists maintain the round-two reductions would cost only $120 per car and argue that, in view of the nation's rapidly growing automobile fleet, they are essential to clearing the air in major cities.

On another automobile-related issue, Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., acknowledged the situation looked bleak for his proposal to impose first-ever limits on automobile emissions of carbon dioxide, the main pollutant linked to global warming.

The administration has targeted that provision for removal and Chafee said support appeared to be waning. Asked about the status of the carbon dioxide limits, he said, ''Still alive. Weak heartbeat, but alive.''

The negotiators also are trying to address concerns about the legislation's acid rain provisions, which have been criticized by Midwest senators who say their region would be unfairly burdened by the bill's emission reduction requirements.

Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., a prime sponsor of the Senate bill, said that, given the difficulty of solving the problem, the discussions on acid rain had been ''surprisingly upbeat'' and promising. He provided no details.

NEW YORK (FEB. 8) UPI - Assets of the nation's 495 money market mutual funds increased $2.73 billion to $387.39 billion for the week ended Wednesday, the Washington-based Investment Company Institute reported Thursday.

The institute said broker-dealer fund assets increased $1.31 billion to $164.42 billion, assets of general purpose funds increased $1.02 billion to $130.87 billion and institutional fund assets increased $401.9 million to $92.11 billion.

''True to the prevailing pattern of this past year, assets of money market funds rose last week to yet another record high even though the changes in yield relationships among various instruments were much too small to induce meaningful asset flows,'' said Dr. Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist at the institute.

''But with money market fund assets rapidly approaching the $400 billion mark, the reinvested dividends alone add some $400 million every week to the asset total,'' he said.

The Investment Company Institute, a national association of the American investment company industry, reports the assets of money market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week.

The Donoghue Organization of Holliston, Mass., said Wednesday average seven-day simple yields on money market funds fell to 7.66 percent from 7.70, while 30-day simple yields fell to 7.71 percent from 7.75.

The average maturity of fund portfolios was up to 43 days.

The Bank Rate Monitor of North Palm Beach, Fla., reported that rates at competing banks and savings and loan institutions were mixed in the latest week.

The Monitor's index of average rates: money market deposit accounts 6.12 percent, unchanged; Super-Now accounts 5.01 percent, unchanged; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.68 percent, up from 7.67; one-year CDs 7.71 percent, unchanged; 2 1/2-year CDs 7.71 percent, up from 7.70; and five-year CDs 7.74 percent, up from 7.72.

The average rate for a one-year adjustable rate mortgage fell to 8.47 percent from 8.48 percent last week.

The average rate on a 15-year fixed-rate mortgage rose to 9.83 percent from 9.78 percent and the average rate on a 30-year fixed-rate mortgage was up to 10.06 percent from 10.03 percent.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan rose to 12.16 percent from 12.10 percent.

OFFUTT AIR FORCE BASE, NE. (FEB. 8) UPI - Using an updated ''Red Phone'' that could be used to launch a global nuclear attack, President Bush told U.S. forces on alert Thursday that ''historical changes'' in the Soviet Union have not affected their mission.

From the nerve center of the nation's ultimate defense - a reinforced concrete and steel encased command post 40 feet below Strategic Air Command headquarters - Bush praised America's nuclear warriors as ''the foundation of deterrence.''

''On behalf of all Americans, I thank you for your sacrifices,'' the presdient said in a four-minute pep talk broadcast to 200 SAC installations around the world. ''For you air crews, keep 'em flying. And for you missile crews, the pointy end is up and keep 'em in the green.''

With his military budget under seige, Bush visited the headquarters to press his case that political change sweeping Europe, driven by the ''new thinking'' of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, has not ended 45 years of nuclear rivalry.

The argument was highlighted by a series of eye-catching images generated during three days of out-of-town stumping by Bush designed to promote his $306 billion defense budget while dampening expectations of a sizable ''peace dividend'' from changes in strategy and force needs dictated by a safer world.

On his way back to Washington, Bush turned more political Thursday evening at a GOP fund-raiser in Columbus, Ohio, where he predicted ''hard choices between defense programs.''

''It will mean changes to respond to new conditions. It will mean hard choices between defense programs. But we've got to be careful: We've got to do our cutting with a scalpel, not a meat axe,'' Bush said.

Bush then departed for Washington.

Wearing a brown leather jacket, ex-Navy combat pilot Bush flashed a thumbs-up to photographers from the cockpit of a $280 million B-1B bomber before descending to the 14,000 square foot SAC command center where war plans would be passed to missile and bombers crews in the event of nuclear attack.

On cue from the SAC commander, Gen. John Chain, the ''Primary Alerting System'' of the ''Red Phone'' system was activated, linking Bush with 200 alert stations designated on an electronic world map.

Congratulating them for their role in ''shaping history,'' Bush said, ''the historical changes we are seeing in the Soviet Union are in no small part due to the vigilance and sheer hard work of the men and women of the Strategic Air Command.''

Bush has included billions of dollars in his 1991 defense budget to continue a Reagan-era strategic modernization effort that has placed new generations of bombers, missiles and submarines into service.

Among the requests: $5.5 billion for B-2 stealth bomber, $4.5 billion for the ''Star Wars'' anti-missile program, $3.2 billion for the Trident submarine and Trident 2 missile, $2.8 billion for MX missile redeployment and $202 million for a new single-warhead Midgetman missile.

However, such doubt-ridden weapons as the B-2 and mobile MX have become prime targets for congressional budget-cutters convinced of a waning Soviet threat.

Although U.S. intelligence has detected some slowdown in Soviet weapons production, possibly in anticipation of a strategic arms agreement, Bush wants the B-2, MX, Midgetman and other programs kept alive, in part as bargaining chips in negotiating strategic arms reductions.

''We still live in a time of uncertainty,'' Bush said. ''So as we push for a major new arms agreement with the Soviets to increase stability, we will continue to modernize strategic forces.''

His selling of the 1991 military budget this week has seemed at times a paradox, in one breath heralding the emergence of a new world order while in the next dramatizing some of the old.

On Tuesday, when Gorbachev proposed surrendering a seven-decade communist monopoly on power, Bush was watching World War III played out by U.S. troops staging a mock battle against Soviet bloc invaders at a combat training center in the Mojave Desert.

On Wednesday, when Communist Party leaders in Moscow took a landmark step toward a multiparty system, Bush was pitching the ''Star Wars'' anti-missile program conceived in the ''evil empire'' days of the Reagan administration.

And the optimism of his declaration that ''the prospects for an enduring peace are greater than ever before'' was tinged with allusions to an undiminished Soviet military threat.

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 9) UPI - In a move designed to please moviegoers, Walt Disney's distribution arm announced Thursday a new policy that will ban paid advertising prior to its movies.

''People don't go to the theater to experience the mundane,'' said Richard Cook, president of Buena Vista Pictures Distribution. ''They go to escape it.''

Buena Vista, which distributes Disney, Touchstone and Hollywood Pictures films, said the policy does not include trailers for coming attractions, advertisements for approved charitable purposes and slides projected during intermission.

''But once the lights go down in the theater, there should be no more advertising,'' Cook said. ''With this new policy, we are seeking the help of exhibition in giving the ticket buyers what they want and further differentiating the theatrical motion picture experience from that which they can experience in their own homes.''

''Movie theaters should be preserved as environments where consumers can escape from the pervasive onslaught of advertising,'' Cook said.

The policy will go into effect with all licensing agreements for the March release of Touchstone Pictures ''Pretty Woman,'' starring Richard Gere and Julia Roberts. Exhibitors not agreeing with the ban will be eliminated from the bidding process.

Cook, who made the announcement at the ShoWest trade show in Las Vegas, said the move is the first of this type by a major distributor to restrict screen advertising.

He also said the policy is essential for the long-term health of the movie business, even though it may cause some short-term losses in advertising revenue.

''We have been told repeatedly by moviegoers that they do not want and will not tolerate commercial intrusions in movie theaters,'' he said. ''The message is loud and clear.''

Entertainment analyst Harold Vogel of Merrill Lynch said the move makes sense, noting the Disney has been successful enough in recent years to possess some leverage over exhibitors.

Disney had the fourth-largest market share among major studios in 1989 after finishing first in 1988 and second in 1987. Its top grosser in 1989 was ''Honey I Shrunk the Kids'' with $130 million in domestic box office revenues.

''I can't see why other studios would not do this, although they're likely to approach it on a case-by-case basis,'' Vogel said.

Disney has several major films scheduled to be released later this year, including ''Betsy's Wedding,'' starring Alan Alda, and ''Dick Tracy,'' starring Warren Beatty.

SAN FRANCISCO (FEB. 8) UPI - The University of California has sued pharmaceutical giant Eli Lilly & Co. for allegedly infringing its patent for genetically engineered insulin.

The suit, filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court in San Francisco, is the university's first case involving patent infringement of a biotechnology patent.

Four professors at the University of California at San Francisco obtained a patent in 1984 covering the use of gene-splicing techniques to make pro-insulin, a protein used in the making of genetically engineered insulin.

UC lawyers have tried for several years to get Lilly, which has sold insulin since 1982, to license the technique.

A spokesman for Lilly said the company's lawyers had examined the UC patent and determined it was invalid.

Genetically engineered human insulin, used by diabetics, was the first major drug created by the biotechnology industry. The drug was developed by Genentech Inc. of South San Francisco, Calif., and licensed to Lilly.

Genentech is not named in the university's suit, however. University lawyer Allen Wagner said the university does not believe Genentech is infringing its patent.

Lilly, the eighth-largest drug company in the world, last year sold about $225 million of human insulin in the U.S. market, according to Montgomery Securities analyst Denise Gilbert.

Wagner said the university has not determined how much it believes it is owed in royalties, but he said the amount is clearly in the millions of dollars dating back to 1984.

STRATFORD, Conn. (FEB. 9) UPI - Sikorsky Aircraft and Teamsters Local 1150 have reached a tentative agreement for a new three-year contract affecting about 6,200 blue-collar workers, officials said Thursday.

Sikorsky spokesman Martin Moore said the company and the union agreed not to release any details of the proposed contract, which was scheduled to take effect Monday, until the pact was presented to union members Sunday during two ratification sessions.

Union officials had no immediate comment on the agreement, said a Teamsters spokeswoman.

Moore said just over half of the bargaining unit, or about 3,100 people, were members of the union and would be eligible to vote on the proposal. He said negotiations between the company and the union had been going on for some time and would not say if there had been any threat of a strike.

Sikorsky, a division of United Technologies Corp. in Hartford, employees about 12,150 people, including salaried personnel, Moore said.

Last November, Sikorsky announced it was laying off 150 blue-collar workers at four Connecticut facilities, blaming a decrease in United States military contracts and a slow world market.

In July, the company announced it was reducing its workforce by about 350 salaried employees.

Sikorsky laid off 19 Connecticut blue-collar workers in February 1988, the first layoffs since the mid 1970s, officers said.

Two ratification sessions were scheduled for union members Sunday in Stratford, Moore said.

NEW YORK (FEB. 9) UPI - Inside trader Ivan Boesky is trying to raise money for a new investment venture when he is released from jail, Business Week reported Thursday.

Boesky, scheduled to be freed April 6, plans to base his investment group overseas in a country with lenient tax laws for foreign investors, such as the Netherlands Antilles, according to an unidentified source quoted in the Feb. 19 issue of Business Week.

Once a top arbitrager on Wall Street, Boesky is serving the last months of his three-year prison sentence at the Brooklyn Community Corrections Center after almost two years at Lompoc Federal Prison Camp in California, the magazine said.

Another source said Boesky has approached several ex-clients as well as former investors in his now-defunct Ivan F. Boesky & Co. and his Cambrian & General Securities, based in London, the magazine said.

One unnamed investor turned Boesky down, saying the jailed arbitrager ''must be crazy if he thinks he can get even a quarter out of me,'' the magazine said.

Boesky, who pleaded guilty to one felony count of conspiracy to violate securities law, began serving his sentence in March 1988 in federal prison for his role in what was the largest insider trading scandal in U.S. history.

He also paid $100 million to settle civil charges filed in 1986 by the Securities and Exchange Commission and began cooperating with the government in investigations that eventually implicated Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., its junk bond chief Michael Milken and others for allegedly reaping illegal profits on a variety of takeover-related corporate transactions.

Although Boesky was barred for life from the securities industry by the SEC, a 1940 statute on investment advisers allows anyone to invest for up to 14 clients without having to register, Business Week said.

Through an associate, Boesky declined to comment, the magazine said.

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 8) UPI - Linebacker Junior Seau, the Pacific 10 Conference Defensive Player of the Year in 1989, announced Wednesday he will skip his senior season at Southern Cal and enter the NFL Draft.

Seau, who became a starter on the outside only last season, finished with 19 sacks - one shy of the school record - for 119 yards in losses. Many expect him to be among the top five picks in the April draft.

''I'm not believing any of it,'' Seau said. ''It's a nice picture. Hopefully it's a true one.''

Seau, 6-foot-3 and 245 pounds, has the speed, quickness and strength to be an NFL star. He has run the 40-yard dash in 4.6 seconds and has bench-pressed as much as 440 pounds.

Seau had 72 tackles last year, including 27 for losses, with one interception and two fumble recoveries. In a 24-3 victory Nov. 11 at Arizona that clinched the Trojans' third straight Pac-10 title, the linebacker registered 12 tackles.

''Seau is the best player I have ever been on the field against as a coach '' Arizona Coach Dick Tomey said after that game. ''He's a force. He would be there no matter where the ball went. Even running the ball away from him didn't help.''

A prep All-America at Oceanside (Calif.) High School, where he played linebacker and tight end, Seau joins the growing list of underclassmen headed for the pros.

Others to have applied for the NFL draft include Utah quarterback Scott Mitchell, Alabama linebacker Keith McCants and running backs Emmitt Smith of Florida, Rodney Hampton of Georgia, Reggie Cobb of Tennessee, Marcus Wilson of Virginia and Barry Foster of Arkansas.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, CA. (FEB. 8) UPI - Sensitive wetlands threatened by a 4-mile-long oil slick Thursday were at the mercy of fickle winds, which alternately pushed the contamination away from, then toward, the shore.

Environmental damage seemed to have been kept to minimum a day after the American Trader, a single-hulled tanker, spilled 280,000 gallons of British Petroleum oil, although as many as 20 sea birds were killed and a like number were found blackened by the oil.

In Washington, Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner said he would brief President Bush on the incident, and that the oil company and owners of the tanker expressed their ''commitment to me'' to help in cleaning up the oil.

''It is a little too early to predict, with any degree of certainty, whether this oil will be going on shore,'' Skinner said. ''We're optimistic, with the winds so far, that we'll be able to skim, and some of it will evaporate.''

Coast Guard Capt. James Card said about midday Thursday that favorable weather and mild Santa Ana winds kept the slick, measuring roughly 4 miles by 2 miles, ''moving very slowly and it is being picked up by skimmers.''

The 20-year-old, 80,000-ton tanker, chartered by BP from American Trading and Transport of New York, was damaged Wednesday while trying to unload its cargo into a submerged pipeline about 1 1/2 miles from the Huntington Beach Pier.

Coast Guard Adm. Paul Yost, sent to the scene by Bush, said the closest edge of the slick was roughly a mile from shore, though slight traces of oil were detected as close as a quarter-mile from the beach.

Yost praised the response of emergency crews, saying the entire ship was circled by booms within six to eight hours, a ''phenomenal record.''

About 30 percent of the spill is expected to evaporate in the next few days, Yost said, but no one could estimate how long it would take to clean up.

Yost said the spill would have been minimized had the vessel been equipped with a double hull, which includes an outer layer of steel to keep the cargo from spilling in the event of a rupture. ''Anytime you have a grounding with a double bottom, there is loss of less oil,'' he said.

Several state officials called for federal legislation to require that all tankers be built with double hulls.

Card said the Coast Guard, the state Department of Fish and Game, British Petroleum and others were assessing how best to clean up the oil. The use of dispersants was ruled out because the spill was so close to the shore and the the chemicals are potentially toxic.

Double and triple booms were set out to protect precious wetlands in Newport and Anaheim bays and the Bolsa Chica wetlands, a 1,900-acre state preserve with thousands of birds, including two endangered species.

Coast Guard Adm. William Kime, who oversaw the response to the Exxon Valdez disaster in Alaska last year, said if the California oil slick reaches shore, the job of cleaning it would be far simpler than in Alaska, involving either trucking away contaminated sand or washing it and returning it to the shore.

Seven oil skimmers were at the scene, and others were en route. In addition, the Coast Guard said its floating booms contained thousands of gallons of oil.

But as the slick moved away from the coastline, it began to dissipate, leaving a sheen that Card said would be more difficult to ''scoop away.''

Efforts aboard the crippled vessel, meanwhile, focused on pumping out about 300,000 gallons of oil remaining in the damaged forward compartment, one of 15 on the ship. All told, the American Trader was carrying about 23 million gallons of crude when a hole 3 feet in diameter tore open in its hull.

Sobriety tests were given to three key crewmembers of the ship, including its master captain, Robert Laware, an employee of American Trading for some three decades who was described by company officials as an ''extremely experienced'' skipper. Officials said those tests were negative. A urinalysis for drugs on all three was pending.

American Trading Vice President Mike Murphy said the cause of the damage to the ship remained unclear, although the Coast Guard reported the hole was possibly created by a dropped anchor.

''During the process of mooring, something went awry,'' Card said.

''The anchor is now bent like a banana,'' Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Mark Kennedy said. ''We don't know how (the accident) happened, but the hole's on the right side and it was the port (left) anchor that looks like it hit it.''

Peter Bontadelli, director of the state Department of Fish and Game, said that so far ''there's been minimal wildlife damage.'' He said there was little concern that whales would be harmed by the spill, ''as long as they stay on their normal migatory route, which is further out to sea.''

Both the city of Huntington Beach and Orange County declared states of emergency. The spill, state officials said, was one the largest off the coast of California since a 1969 spill off Santa Barbara. In 1984 an estimated 24,000 barrels of oil spilled off San Francisco.

The oil spilled Wednesday was much lighter than the nearly 11 million gallons of thick, black goo involved in the Exxon Valdez spill in Alaska on March 24, 1989, that killed thousands of birds and mammals in the nation's worst spill.

(FEB. 8) UPI - The State Department issues another terrorist alert... President Bush visits the Strategic Air Command headquarters... and crews work to clean up a huge oil spill off the California coast. Those and other stories, next, from U-P-I.

The State Department is warning American travelers about possible terrorist attacks against U-S interests in Western Europe in the next few days.

It's the second terrorist alert the department has issued in three months.

State Department spokesman John Boucher says the administration is concerned that terrorists may be planning an attack around February 11th.

February 11th is the 11th anniversary of Iran's Islamic revolution, when the Ayatollah Khomeini came to power.

Boucher concedes that the department does NOT have ''specific information'' about the threat.

And he says the department is NOT advising Americans to stay away from Western Europe... but simply is ''passing on information'' that the public should know about.

The State Department's first alert came in December, one year after 270 people were killed when a terrorist bomb blew up Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

(FEB. 8) UPI - President Bush today wrapped up a three-day trip to promote his fiscal 1991 defense budget, which includes BILLIONS of dollars for a new generation of bombers, missiles and submarines.

Bush visited the Strategic Air Command headquarters in Nebraska, and defended his pursuit of the high-priced weapons, saying- quote- ''We still live in a time of uncertainty.'' He adds that the United States will continue to modernize strategic forces, even as it pushes for a major new arms agreement with the Soviets to increase stability.

He said that despite proposed cuts in conventional forces, the strategic balance has yet to reflect what he called ''new thinking'' by Soviet President Gorbachev or the relaxation in East-West tensions.

Bush flashed a thumbs-up from the cockpit of a BB bomber before descending to the underground command center of the Strategic Air Command at Offutt Air Force Base. There he saluted American crews on nuclear alert around the world as ''the foundation of deterrence.''

Deposed Panamanian strongman Manuel Noriega will have to go to trial in Miami on drug charges after all.

U-S District Judge William Hoeveler today rejected defense claims that the former dictator could NOT be prosecuted in the United States because he is a prisoner of war.

The judge said the P-O-W question is ''a parallel issue'' to the criminal charges and a matter of policy that does NOT concern him. He said he saw NO reason to grant a defense request to relinquish jurisdiction of the case.

Noriega and 15 others are named in a 12-count indictment that accuses him of using his official position to foster drug trafficking between Colombia and the United States from 1981 to 1986.

If convicted, Noriega would face a maximum of 145 years in prison and a one-Million-dollar fine.

Noriega surrendered to the U-S forces that invaded Panama in December.

INGLEWOOD, CA (FEB. 9) UPI - If scoring 101 points in a game is a remarkable feat, then what would you call reaching that total by halftime?

Lisa Leslie of Inglewood Morningside High School needed only 16 minutes to pour in 101 points in a game against South Torrance Wednesday night. But any opportunity to break the national record of 105 was eliminated when the opponents refused to come out for the second half.

Cheryl Miller, who went on to star at Southern Cal and in the Olympics, set the national record eight years ago.

''I was kind of heartbroken that I didn't break the record,'' Leslie said. ''I asked the (South Torrance) coach before they left the court if they would let me score three more baskets, and then he asked his team, and they said, 'No.'''

Leslie, a 6-foot-5 senior center, made 37 of 56 field-goal attempts and 27 of 35 free throws. She scored 49 points in the first quarter and 52 in the second, a average of more than six points a minute.

Sherrell Young scored Morningside's only other point with two minutes left in the half. The official final score was 102-24.

South Torrance Coach Gil Ramirez was expected to face disciplinary action for not allowing his players to take the floor after intermission.

(FEB. 8) UPI - Crews are working to clean up a huge oil slick off the coast of Huntington Beach, California.

Some 300-thousand gallons of crude oil spilled from the tanker ''American Trader'' yesterday after it hit its own anchor and ruptured a tank.

State officials say the spill is one of the largest off the coast of California in more than 20 years.

Officials say light winds are keeping the oil away from the coast... pushing the slick toward a channel between the mainland and Santa Catalina Island, some 22 miles off-shore.

More than 100 volunteers had gathered at the coast at dawn to help clean up oil that NEVER arrived. But a dozen dead, oil-soaked sea birds washed up on the beach today.

The slick... about two miles long and 400 yards wide... also threatens sensitive wetlands along the Orange County coast.

Lieutenant Governor Leo McCarthy and Controller Gray Davis toured the spill area by helicopter this morning. At a news conference afterwards, they criticized the oil industry for opposing a plan to put off-shore oil shipments under state government control.

Secretary of State Baker met this morning in Moscow with his Soviet counterpart for a round of arms reduction talks, and the Soviet news agency Tass says ''progress was achieved.''

Tass says both sides ''put forward new ideas,'' and quoted a Foreign Ministry official as saying ''the whole package of issues connected with arms limitation and disarmament'' was discussed.

Issues on the agenda included limits for air-launched cruise missiles, and verification of missiles that have been built but NOT deployed.

U-S officials have said they expect basic decisions to be made on several strategic arms issues during the talks.

More sessions are to be held later today, and the talks are to continue tomorrow, including a session with President Gorbachev .

On Saturday, Baker is to testify before the Supreme Soviet International Relations Committee, the equivalent of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

It's the first time a U-S official has been invited to appear before the Soviet committee.

(FEB. 8) UPI - South African police today fired tear gas to break up a crowd of two-thousand youths at a black township and charged into protesters outside the British consulate.

The moves are part of a crackdown on demonstrations against a boycott-busting tour of South Africa by English cricket players. Today's protests came on the opening day of the team's play in Johannesburg.

Police said there were NO injuries, but tour organizers reported 30 injured.

Police also briefly detained eight members of the news media, including an American television crew, and accused reporters of helping transport the demonstrators to the cricket match.

The skirmishes erupted as Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok defended President De Klerk's refusal to completely lift a 43-month-old state of emergency. Vlok said a ''politically volatile situation'' still exists among what he called ''certain radical fringes on all sides of the spectrum.''

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA (FEB. 8) UPI - The government inaugurated a new anti-narcotics organization Thursday that includes representatives of the 60,000 Bolivian farmers who cultivate the coca leaf, the main ingredient in cocaine.

Six coca growers' representatives were among members of the National Council of Alternative Development who took oaths of office.

The inauguration took place just six days in advance of the scheduled summit by President Bush and three South American presidents to formalize a common anti-cocaine strategy.

Guido Tarqui, a representative of the estimated 60,000 families who grow coca in Bolivia, said that ''there must be socio-economic development'' within Bolivia, the world's second-largest producer of coca after Peru.

He said he joined the council to ''demand the completion of agreements and oversee the administration of the resources that come from the exterior.''

Bolivia plans to eradicate coca leaf production by paying coca farmers $2,000 for every 2 1/2 acres they convert to other crops.

President Jaime Paz Zamora has said he will ask Bush for more funds for development programs to encourage farmers to raise other crops and to make up for the loss to the Bolivian economy resulting from lower coca production.

Paz Zamora has said coca leaf and cocaine production is a $1.5 billion industry in Bolivia, of which $600 million stays within the country.

Government Farm Minister Mauro Bertero called for more alternative development programs at the swearing-in ceremony. ''Yes gentlemen, we are going to win the war on narcotics trafficking,'' he said.

The council is made up of the six growers' representatives and six Cabinet vice ministers.

Foreign Minister Carlos Iturralde presided over the swearing-in of the council. The ambassadors of the United States, Peru, Brazil, Colombia and West Germany also attended.

Fernando Collor de Mello met Prince Charles and Prime Minister Thatcher during his 24-hour visit to the British capital. He takes office March 15th.

T-V essayist Andy Rooney has been suspended for three months without pay by C-B-S. The move was prompted by an interview in which Rooney was quoted as saying black people ''watered down'' their genes because the less intelligent have the most children. C-B-S News President David Burke said the network- quote- ''CANNOT tolerate such remarks.'' Burke says Rooney's future with C-B-S will be determined at the end of the three months. (FEB. 8) UPI - President Bush remained on the road today in his tour of military facilities. Bush is campaigning away from Washington for his 306-BILLION-dollar defense budget for the upcoming fiscal year. Today Bush visited a concrete- and steel-encased nuclear-war bunker 40 feet below Strategic Air Command headquarters in Nebraska. He called the nation's nuclear forces- quoting here- ''the foundation of deterrence.''

Californians are monitoring the movement of a four-mile-long oil slick floating off the coast near Huntington Beach. The slick developed yesterday afternoon when a tanker chartered by British Petroleum apparently gouged its hull with its own anchor. A Coast Guard official says the spill is edging away from the coast under the influence of favorable weather and mild Santa Ana winds.

The Bush administration says it's drafting its own plan to strengthen civil rights laws. A Justice Department spokeswoman says the administration disagrees with legislation proposed by civil rights groups and a broad bipartisan coalition in Congress. Proposed legislation

(FEB. 8) UPI - Pakistan's largest city remains an armed camp as police and government troops skirmish with the Mojahir minority. Mojahir migrants from India called a general strike in Karachi yesterday, and violent clashes since then have left at least 57 people dead. New battles left six dead and 14 wounded today, and troops also shot and killed two other persons violating an imposed curfew.

There's word tonight that too much fiber in the diet can be harmful. A report in the Journal of the American Medical Association describes the plight of a man whose daily intake of bran cereal landed him on the operating table. Doctors discovered the large amounts of bran had clumped together in the man's bowel, creating a large obstruction. Health-care practitioners in Virginia say people who embark on high-fiber diets should do it gradually, and make sure they drink plenty of liquids.

Two senators introduced a bill today to promote math, science and engineering education. The legislation, proposed by Senators Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Mark Hatfield of Oregon, authorizes 125-Million dollars in spending in 1991 to pay some college tuition for students who agree to become science and math teachers. The senators say the legislation is an essential first step in re-establishing what they term U-S ''economic pre-eminence.''

(FEB. 8) UPI - President Bush today visited the nerve center of the nation's ultimate defense... the underground command post of the Strategic Air Command headquarters in Nebraska. Bush gave a pep talk broadcast to 200 air command installations around the world. Bush praised U-S forces on alert as ''the foundation of deterrence.'' He said the ''historical changes'' in the Soviet Union have NOT affected their mission.

C-B-S has suspended Andy Rooney for three months over racist remarks attributed to him- in spite of his vehement denial that he ever made the statement. A reporter for a Los Angeles homosexual newspaper claims Rooney said blacks had ''watered down'' their genes because the least intelligent had the most children. But there is NO tape of the interview. Rooney today called the remark... ''a know-nothing statement which I abhor.''

In Moscow, talks broke off today between Soviet and Czechoslovak negotiators after the Soviets refused demands to withdraw all troops from Czechoslovakia by the end of this year. Czechoslovakia's official news agency says the Soviets felt the deadlines for the troop pullout were too short. The security situation in Soviet Azerbaijan suddenly deteriorated today as militants fired at Red Army soldiers and stopped surrendering their weapons. (FEB. 8) UPI - Deposed Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega wore his khaki general's uniform to court today in Miami. But U-S District Judge William Hoeveler ruled that Noriega's claims that he is a prisoner of war do NOT affect his U-S case on drug charges.

Noriega's attorneys argued that the Geneva Convention would prohibit his being tried in the United States as a P-O-W. But Hoeveler ruled that Noriega's P-O-W claims are- quote- ''a parallel issue.''

Said Hoeveler... ''I do NOT find under the Geneva Convention that I have to divest myself of this case.''

Today's hearing went on to address the issue of when the trial might realistically be scheduled to start.

Saying ''This case is too important to let it drift,'' a U-S attorney said the government case would be ready by the end of the year. Noriega's attorneys said it could take between 18 and 24 months to prepare the defense. Both sides say that even once the trial begins, it still will take a year for the case to reach a verdict.

A generic-drug trade group is moving to form a panel to look into the burgeoning scandal in the industry.

The Generic Pharmaceutical Industry Association is asking a panel of experts to recommend- quote- ''whatever changes may be necessary'' to restore public confidence in generic drugs.

But the move may be too late. It comes 18 months after the first signs of wrongdoing in the industry and three months after the F-D-A reported signs of fraud and serious manufacturing flaws at seven of the top 20 generic-drug firms.

Generic drugs are generally cheaper than their brand-name counterparts, and it was estimated they made up one-third of all prescriptions written in 1988- totaling seven-BILLION dollars.

Industry officials claim they do NOT yet know whether their market share is declining in the wake of the scandal.

(FEB. 8) UPI - President Bush today praised America's nuclear warriors as ''the foundation of deterrence'' during a visit to the nerve center of the nation's defense system.

Bush made a trip to Offutt Air Force Base in Nebraska, where he gave a four-minute pep talk that was broadcast to U-S forces on alert worldwide.

He sat in the cockpit of a BB bomber and then descended to the underground command center of the Strategic Air Command headquarters.

Using the so-called ''Red Phone'' that could be used to launch a global nuclear attack, the president said that ''historical changes'' in the Soviet Union have NOT affected the mission of U-S air and missile crews.

He continued to drive home the point that political change sweeping Europe has NOT ended 45 years of nuclear rivalry.

Saying ''We still live in a time of uncertainty,'' Bush said the United States will continue to modernize strategic forces as it pushes for nuclear agreements with the Soviets to increase stability.

The visit was part of the president's three days of out-of-town stumping to promote his 306-BILLION-dollar defense budget, which includes money for new generations of bombers, missiles and submarines.

Later, at a Republican fund-raiser in Columbus, Ohio, Bush predicted ''hard choices'' between defense programs. But he said cuts must be done carefully- as he put it- with ''a scalpel, NOT a meat axe.''

Another major congressional budget official has come out against Senator Daniel Moynihan's proposed cut in the Social Security Tax.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen said today he could NOT support the 55-BILLION-dollar Moynihan tax cut.

The opposition of the Texas Democrat follows the lead of his House counterpart, Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski. The Illinois Democrat was less diplomatic in pooh-poohing the Moynihan tax cut calling it- quote- ''political junk food.''

President Bush and the American Association of Retired Persons also are on record opposing the tax cut- meaning it is NOT likely to pass.

But Moynihan's proposal has achieved one chief aim. In drawing attention to the Social Security surplus- which is routinely siphoned off to artificially lower the budget deficit- Moynihan has revitalized the deficit crisis as an issue for the upcoming fiscal budget debate.

(FEB. 8) UPI - A Congressional study shows the Bush administration does NOT have a co-ordinated national policy to address global warming.

The General Accounting Office... the investigative arm of Congress... says the administration also has failed to provide direction for climate change research.

The G-A-O says some federal scientists are concerned that the failure to establish research objectives for global warming studies could lead to policymakers who twist results for political reasons.

The study came as Allan Bromley, the president's chief science adviser, defended the administration's performance on global warming before a Senate subcommittee.

Bromley says he's set up, at President Bush's direction, a Cabinet-level working group on global warming that will co-ordinate all federal activities and seek recommendations on how best to reduce carbon dioxide emissions.

T-V essayist Andy Rooney has been suspended for three months by his network following an interview in which he allegedly made racist comments about black people.

Rooney... a best-selling author and the droll commentator on C-B-S's ''60 Minutes''... vehemently denied making the remarks.

In a statement released today by his office, Rooney says- ''I did NOT say nor would I ever have thought, that 'blacks have watered down their genes.''' He called it- quote- ''a know-nothing statement which I abhor.

The head of the N-double-A-C-P termed the reported comments ''racist'' and ''mean-spirited.''

SEATTLE (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - One of the largest financing packages arranged by a Northwest bank for a privately held company was completed recently when Security Pacific Bank Washington closed a transaction with Lamb-Weston, a Tri-Cities-based potato-processing company with more than $400 million in annual sales.

The financing consists of a $125 million private placement of unsecured senior notes and $125 million in nationally syndicated, unsecured bank debt. Both elements of the transaction were structured and managed by Security Pacific locally. The private placement is one of the largest ever transacted by a local institution.

The repayment and rate structure of the private placement was such that SPBW could syndicate revolving and term bank credits to other financial institutions on very favorable terms to the company. Private placements are debt securities placed with accredited investors, typically major insurance companies. Borrowers benefit from private placements because the terms tend to be longer, interest rates may be fixed, and principal may be amortized over a longer period, reducing a borrower's annual cash outflow. A broad variety of structures may be constructed through manipulation of these three main components.

Lamb-Weston is the largest processor of frozen potato products in the United States and is the leading producer of frozen french-fried potatoes for sale to the food service industry.

Security Pacific Bank Washington is the principal subsidiary of Security Pacific Bancorporation Northwest, a Seattle-based, multi- bank holding company with assets of $10.2 billion. DENVER (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - A group of nine cable operators and GE American Communications (GEA) announced Friday they have formed a joint venture to offer an Extended Program Service (EPS) to rural America and some cable subscribers, using ten transponders on GEA's K-1 Ku-band satellite.

Although EPS will use only ten of more than 100 Ku-band transponders in orbit today, the joint venture believes its services will likely spur growth in the Ku-band satellite industry, and may provide an important transition to high power DBS in the United States.

The cable joint venturers include American Television and Communications, Comcast, Continental Cablevision, Cox Cable, Newhouse Broadcasting, Tele-Communications Inc., United Artists Entertainment, Viacom, and Warner Cable.

The joint venture added that it was pleased with early discussions on certain aspects of this project with the Satellite Broadcasting and Communications Association, the home dish industry's trade association and its most representative group.

Moreover, the joint venture noted that EPS, insofar as it provides superstation programming, is the first major Ku-band project to use the authorities of and serve the the policies of the Satellite Home Viewer Act passed by Congress in 1988.

On Feb. 8, 1990, GE American Communications Inc. (GEA) announced that it has leased, for over $100 million, ten transponders on its K-1 Ku-Band satellite to a joint venture, which consists of GEA and nine cable operators. The venture was formed to test and develop an Extended Program Service (EPS) for the American public.

EPA will efficiently deliver to subscribers in U.S. cabled areas an attractive package of programming while also bringing such desirable television programming on an affordable basis to rural America, a segment which has been generally underserved. The venture will also test the latest technologies and different business arrangements with existing retailers of residential satellite equipment.

Although EPS will utilize only transponders in orbit today, its success will likely spur the general growth of the Ku-Band satellite industry and may provide an important transition to full high power DBS in the United States. There are currently more than eight domestic FCC DBS licensees and permittees.

SHERMAN OAKS, CA. (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - HemaCare Corp. (NASDAQ:HEMA) announced record estimated 1989 revenues of $5,775,000, up approximately 29 percent over 1988 revenues of $4,463,000.

The company recorded estimated 1989 net income of $470,000, or 14 cents per share, as compared with net income of $428,00, or 14 cents per share, for 1988.

HemaCare reported estimated fourth quarter 1989 revenues of $1,595,000, up approximately 43 percent from fourth quarter 1988 revenues of $1,117,000. Included was an estimated 23 percent increase in therapeutic hemapheresis revenues to $824,000, an estimated 19 percent increase in blood products and services revenues to $531,000, and specialty plasma revenues of $240,000 from the company's subsidiary, MD Laboratories Inc., which was acquired on March 14, 1989.

Fourth quarter results reflected an estimated net income of $137,000, or 4 cents per share, as compared with net income of $69,000, or 2 cents per share, for the similar period in 1988.

In comparing operating income for 1989 vs. 1988, it should be noted that HemaCare implemented a profit sharing plan for all employees effective Jan. 1, 1989. During 1989, the company paid or accrued for bonuses of approximately $124,000. Had this plan not been implemented, HemaCare's estimated earnings per share would have been 18 cents for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

HemaCare has been a leading provider of hemapheresis-derived products and services since its inception in 1979. In addition to providing mobile therapeutic hemapheresis services to hospitals, the company also provides autologous blood services and hemapheresis-derived blood component products designed to reduce patient risk of contracting hepatitis, AIDS and other diseases potentially transmitted by blood transfusions.

Its subsidiary, MD Laboratories, operates three specialized plasma centers which provide rare antibodies to vaccine, diagnostic reagent and other biological manufacturers. The company has submitted application for and anticipates approval to perform clinical trials and eventually commercialize a human plasma-based AIDS treatment. HemaCare also is in the process of broadly expanding its clinical laboratory division in order to provide reference laboratory services to hospitals, clinics and physicians.

SPANISH FORK, Utah (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Nature's Sunshine Products Inc. (NASDAQ: NATR), a diversified health and nutritional products company Friday announced it has agreed to purchase 80 percent of Earth Science Products Inc., a privately-held, newly formed, Utah based direct sales company for approximately $470,000 in cash.

Earth Science Products will initially market two all-natural, liquid food supplements that provide essential minerals in a glycerin base with natural aromatic flavorings.

''We expect product sales to begin in the first quarter of 1990,'' said Alan D. Kennedy, president of Nature's Sunshine Products. ''We believe that Earth Science Products will be an excellent investment and compliment the nutritional products already being offered by Nature's Sunshine. The product has undergone extensive evaluation and independent testing.''

Many of Nature's Sunshine's independent distributors have expressed interest in becoming involved in marketing and distributing these products. With access to Nature's Sunshine's growing distribution network as a base, the start-up company is expected to have a significant marketing advantage. In addition, the company intends to use aggressive efforts to bring others into its distribution system.

The $470,000 initial investment will be used to acquire proprietary rights in the company's products, establish the marketing and distribution network and to fund start-up costs.

Nature's Sunshine Products Inc. has agreed to provide Earth Science access to its quality-control procedures, equipment and personnel, as well as the production capacity and research and development of Nature's Sunshine. It is anticipated that present and future products will be manufactured by Nature's Sunshine.

Kennedy added that these strengths should greatly enhance the ability of Earth Science Products to rapidly achieve solid growth. ''This approach is unique in the direct-selling industry,'' said Kennedy.

Kennedy, president of Nature's Sunshine, has been elected chairman of the newly-formed company with Loren Robinson and David Tanner, founders, appointed as president and executive vice president, respectively.

Nature's Sunshine Products Inc. is the nation's largest manufacturer of encapsulated, herbal products. In addition, the company produces a high-quality, natural vitamin line and is involved in the rapidly-growing water purification market with its proprietary water treatment products and components.

EL SEGUNDO, CA (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Air New Zealand and British Airways have signed a commercial alliance which effectively gives both carriers around-the-world daily services, effective April 1, 1990.

Passengers leaving either Britain or New Zealand will have the choice of flying British Airways or Air New Zealand every day of the week via the Far East (Singapore, Hong Kong, or Kuala Lumpur), or via North America, changing to the other carrier's services at these points. The commercial alliance has been welcomed by the chief executives of both airlines.

"The new agreement shows British Airways' commitment to the important New Zealand market. It is the latest development in our policy to create a global airline service," said Sir Colin Marshall, British Airways' chief executive.

"We are pleased to be strengthening our ties with Air New Zealand, an airline that maintains similar high standards of service as British Airways. We look forward to working together to provide "seamless" service for the benefit of all passengers on the United Kingdom-New Zealand routes " he said.

The chief executive of Air New Zealand, Jim Scott, said the agreement reflected the mutual desire to join together two quality carriers with a proven record and which are a major influence within their own areas.

"This alliance gives Air New Zealand the strength of British Airways' extensive network throughout Europe and the northern hemisphere and auguments the British carrier's routes with Air New Zealand's unrivaled Pacific network," Scott said. EMERYVILLE, CA (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - CopyMat Inc. announced Friday that it has ceased its year-long efforts to have a post-effective amendment to its registration statement on Form S-18 declared effective by the Denver regional office of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The registration statement was first filed in connection with the initial public offering by CopyMat's predecessor (Nicholl Acquisitions Inc.) of common stock and warrants to purchase common stock at $1.50 per share. Without an effective registration statement covering the issuance of CopyMat common stock upon exercise of the warrants, the warrants may not be exercised.

Michael J. Cook, president and chief executive officer of CopyMat, said, "The company may at some later date file a new registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington D.C. covering the issuance of common stock upon exercise of the warrants."

Cook also stated that instead of pursuing capital through the exercise of warrants at this time, the company will be seeking other means of appropriate financing to assist the company in its plans for growth.

ST. LOUIS (BUSINESS WIRE)--Invitron Corp. (NASDAQ:INVN) announced Friday that it had been advised by SmithKline Beecham plc that SmithKline was redirecting the focus of its AIDS development program away from soluble T4 in favor of a less expensive second generation product.

SmithKline stated that concern about the cost-effective production of large quantities of the protein was a key factor in its decision.

Vigorous efforts by both SmithKline and Invitron to improve the expression of the sT4 cell line, its growth characteristics, and the purification yield of the product resulted in substantial reductions in the cost of producing sT4 over the past 12 months.

However, these cost reductions were insufficient to overcome adverse factors reportedly affecting the commercialization of sT4. These factors include the short half life of the protein in the body, the potentially high doses expected to be required to obtain efficacy, if any, and the crowded competitive field for commercialization of the drug. Genentech, Biogen and Upjohn, among others, are developing AIDS drug candidates similar to sT4.

In a statement released in November 1989, SmithKline announced that it had not yet found any convincing reports of efficacy in the use of its sT4 in human clinical trials. SmithKline has stated that it intends to complete those human clinical trials of sT4 which are currently underway. Through the first nine months of 1989, Invitron derived 73.3 percent of its revenues from the production of sT4.

Dr. Joseph Feder, Invitron's president and chief executive officer stated that ''While we regret SmithKline Beecham's decision to discontinue development of its first generation of sT4 product, SmithKline and Invitron still have an umbrella agreement pertaining to the manufacture of biopharmaceuticals.

The production of sT4 was only the first project under that agreement. We are looking forward to the opportunity to produce other cell culture products for SmithKline as they are developed.''

Invitron Corp. is engaged in the development, commercial-scale manufacture and purification of complex, mammalian cell-derived biopharmaceuticals, including monoclonal antibodies.

Using its patented continuous perfusion technology, the company provides a broad range of production services to pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies, as well as develops its own proprietary products.

CINCINNATI (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Cincinnati Bell Inc. (NYSE:CSN) Friday announced it has created a new company, LDN Communications Inc.

Cincinnati Bell Inc. has targeted the discount long distance reselling industry as an area of major growth for the 1990's.

''LDN Communications Inc. is a major new line of business centered around full service discount long distance and 800 service.'' said J.T. LaMacchia Cincinnati Bell Inc. President and COO. ''The business will use the best technology and service available to meet the special needs of local businesses and consumers.'

LDN Communications, Inc. will operate in Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan.

Leading the new venture as president and CEO is L.L. Hendrickson. Hendrickson spent over 20 years at AT&T where he was vice president of marketing and strategic planning and had key roles in restructuring AT&T throughout the divestiture process.

In 1986, he joined CBIS (Cincinnati Bell Information Systems), Cincinnati Bell Inc.'s software subsidiary, as President of the Cellular Business Systems Division. He became Vice President for Market Development for Cincinnati Bell Inc. in 1989.

''We already have a well established long distance reseller, Cincinnati Bell Long Distance, to act as the cornerstone of the new business,'' LaMacchia said.

''The recent acquisition of CTI Telecommunications Inc. of South Bend, Ind., makes the forming of LDN Communications a timely decision. We now have the structure we need to participate in the fast-growing long distance resale industry.''

''There exists a tremendous synergy between these companies and the rest of the Cincinnati Bell family,'' LaMacchia pointed out. ''Cincinnati Bell Long Distance and CTI Telecommunications have proven track records in their markets with established, high quality service.

CBIS provides billing and software technology, while our MATRIXX Marketing subsidiary will lend telemarketing support. This is what we mean when we say our strength lies in the areas of the telecommunications business we know, and in which we can interact and develop with our existing lines of business.''

CTI Telecommunications and Cincinnati Bell Long Distance will operate as divisions of LDN Communications. B.L. Nelson remains President of Cincinnati Bell Long Distance and T.A. Shindeldecker will continue to head operations at CTI Telecommunications.

Cincinnati Bell Long Distance is Cincinnati Bell Inc.'s first entry into the discount long distance resale business. Founded in 1984, it has demonstrated profitability, and market growth well above industry norms.

Long distance resellers serve small to medium-sized businesses and consumers with rates and services geared to their locations and calling patterns. Major interexchange carriers use resellers as distributors. Advances in technology and new services will enable the resale niche to grow rapidly and profitably in the 1990's.

Cincinnati Bell Inc. supplies telecommunications and related services, information management, and telemarketing.

Services include information systems development, data processing and systems consulting, discount long distance telecommunications, market research, electronic database services, telecommunications equipment supply and repair, and inbound, business-to-business and outbound consumer telemarketing.

BOSTON (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - An arrangement between Novell Inc. and Spectrum Concepts Inc., to be announced at the NetWorld Boston Show on Feb. 12, 1989, will promote better integration of PC Local Area Networks with the full range of corporate computing resources, according to sources at both companies.

Under the agreement, Novell will distribute, as a free bonus, one demonstration copy of Spectrum Concepts' XCOM 6.2 communications software with each Novell NetWare SNA Gateway sold.

With XCOM 6.2, Novell users will be able to get true LU 6.2 applications running immediately, giving them efficient LU 6.2 access to a wide range of networked devices, including: IBM mainframes, AS/400, S/3X, DEC VAX, UNIX environments, Stratus-S/88, Macintosh, and other PCs and LANs. Both

OS/2 and DOS are supported on PCs.

According to Keith Eisenstark, Spectrum's director of sales and marketing, ''This arrangement is mutually beneficial -- it enables Novell to demonstrate their LU 6.2 capabilities, and customers get the feel of how and where the strategic LU 6.2 protocol may provide them with a variety of benefits.''

Eisenstark said that Novell will distribute a fully functional PC version of XCOM 6.2. ''Naturally,'' Eisenstark said, ''we expect that the majority of those users will go on to purchase additional XCOM 6.2 products at regular fees.'' A single PC license for XCOM 6.2 currently is priced at $495; mini and mainframe versions are higher. Multiple license discounts are available.

Users will find plenty to like, based on the experiences of major XCOM 6.2 customers in manufacturing, finance, consumer services, government, and public service. Applications at these sites include remote order entry, EDI, sales reporting, electronic software and report distribution, and unattended file transfer. Files previously sent on magnetic tape or diskettes -- with delays of up to several days -- can be transferred anywhere in the world in minutes.

Gerry Machi, director of product marketing for Novell's Communications Products, said that they liked XCOM 6.2 because it is a proven, well-supported product. ''Novell has set the industry standard for LAN to IBM host connectivity,'' he said, ''with products that our customers can get 'up-and-running,' simply and reliably. XCOM 6.2 is a product very much in line with this philosophy.'' He added that the arrangement with Spectrum Concepts helps illustrate that NetWare systems offer compatible, functional, and versatile solutions for IBM environments.

Novell is now shipping NetWare SNA Gateways with LU 6.2 support. Each includes the documentation required to make full use of XCOM 6.2 among network-attached devices, and between the gateway and remote devices. XCOM 6.2 features peer-to-peer communications, allowing a PC to send files to, or receive files from remote computers. Supported file types include physical, logical, source, save, and spool files.

XCOM 6.2 was the first off-the-shelf LU 6.2 application when it was introduced in 1987, and continues to lead the industry with fast, efficient data transfer between similar and non-similar computers. These include MVS and VM mainframes, IBM and DEC midrange systems, DOS, OS/2 and Macintosh PCs, and UNIX workstations -- in standalone and networked configurations.

XCOM 6.2 offers developers a choice of menu, command line, and application programming interfaces. Because XCOM 6.2 handles the mechanics of LU 6.2

communication, developers can concentrate on the overall logic. Costs and schedules associated with application development are significantly reduced.

Separate versions of XCOM 6.2 are provided for each platform. Any version of XCOM 6.2 is compatible with all the other versions, providing true ''any-to-any'' connectivity among otherwise incompatible computers.

XCOM 6.2 eliminates the need to physically ship files and reports to their ultimate destination by electronically transferring them quickly and efficiently, anywhere in the world, in minutes. Either side can initiate the transfer, and when desirable, transfers can be completely unattended, a boon for international organizations that need to overcome the tyranny of time zones.

Spectrum Concepts Inc., based in New York, is a multi-national technology company specializing in data communications software, computer networking services, systems integration, and consulting. Founded in 1979, it has grown to become the recognized leader in LU 6.2 communications. Spectrum Concepts provides consulting services for customized LU 6.2 applications, in addition to the full line of XCOM 6.2 off-the-shelf data transfer software. Clients include leading organizations in industry, commerce, education, and government.

DENVER (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Mountain Medical Equipment Inc. (AMEX:MTN) Friday reported a $1,237,000, or 38 cents per share, loss on revenues of $7,224,000 for the fiscal third quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989.

This compares to net income of $411,000, or 13 cents per share on revenues of $8,833,000 for the same period last year.

For the recent nine-month period, the company reported a $493,000, or 15 per cents share, loss on revenues of $25,638,000 compared to net income of $1,007,000, or 32 cents per share, on revenues of $24,532,000 for the first nine months of last year.

Sales of oxygen concentrators and related replacement parts, the company's primary product line, declined approximately 30 cents during the recent quarter. There were a number of factors that adversely affected sales, including:

- The Health Care Finance Administration recently imposed more stringent qualification criteria for oxygen therapy patients.

- A 2 percent across-the-board reduction in Medicare reimbursement imposed last October to comply with the Gramm-Rudman Act.

Mountain Medical is a leading supplier of oxygen concentrators and other respiratory therapy equipment for the home health care market. Through its wholly owned subsidiary, Aegis Medical Inc., the company markets the Avatar, an innovative method of bowel management for home or institutional use.

KANATA, ONTARIO (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Mitel Corp. Friday reported net income of $3.2 million for the three months ended Dec. 29, 1989, compared to $4.9 million for the same period last year.

The company generated sales of $106 million in the period compared to $107.7 million in the third quarter of fiscal year 1989.

Net income for the nine months ended Dec. 29, 1989 was $7.6 million compared to $14.7 million a year earlier. (The $14.7 million last year included unusual recoveries of $6.2 million relating to the sale of the company's vacant manufacturing facility in Renfrew). Sales generated in the first nine months were $310 million, 1.7 percent lower than the $315.3 million reported last year.

Commenting on the company's performance, President and Chief Executive Officer John Jarvis said, ''In spite of the strength of the Canadian dollar which has had a noticeable effect by reducing both sales and income and the continuing very competitive market pressures in North America, Mitel has recorded its sixth consecutive profitable quarter.

''The United Kingdom continues to be a strong market for the company and has provided the springboard for the excellent sales growth being achieved throughout Europe. The company is very solidly positioned to take advantage of the opportunities presented by a new partnership in the future.''

On Jan. 22, 1990, British Telecommunications plc announced its intent to consider a change in its 51 percent shareholding in Mitel Corp. The sale of all or part of the shareholding is one of the options being explored and BT has engaged the services of Morgan Stanley to advise in these negotiations.

Jarvis added, ''During the quarter under review, Mitel concluded agreements with Digital Equipment Corp., in the area of Computer Integrated Telephony, and with U S WEST Inc., as a key partner in the development of a new E9-1-1 emergency system.

''While these successes reflect our strategy of developing revenue streams from non-PBX activities, there was also evidence of the depth of our commitment to our primary business. Datapro, a leading North American telecom research house, announced the results of a survey of U.S. PBX users in December 1989.

''Mitel was rated number one in overall satisfaction by the respondents to the survey, vaulting up from sixth place in the previous year. As we have also been rated number one in the U.K., we are making good progress in achieving our objective of being number one in customer satisfaction worldwide.''

The company continued to benefit from operational improvement programs. Selling and Administrative costs declined to 27.8 percent of revenues from 28.7 percent at the end of nine months last year and Inventories at $63.5 million were improved from the $77.4 million reported a year earlier.

Gross Margins at nine months of fiscal year 1990 remain at 42 percent of sales, identical to a year ago. MILPITAS, CA (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - ADAC Laboratories (NASDAQ:ADAC), a leading producer of medical imaging and information products, Friday announced results of operations for its first quarter of fiscal year 1990, ended Dec. 31, 1989.

For the three-month period, the company reported revenues of $17.4 million compared with $22.5 million reported for the like period a year ago. Net income of $1.2 million, or 3 cents per share, was achieved, compared with net income of $3.8 million, or 9 cents per share, reported in the first quarter of fiscal 1989.

In making the announcement, Michael O. Preletz, chairman and chief executive officer, stated that: ''the unexpected shortfall in revenue may possibly be attributed to several factors including a lengthier hospital administrative approval process than has been the case previously, due, perhaps, to more restrictive capital equipment and/or cash management requirements; changes in the company's sales force that occurred in the latter part of fiscal year 1989 and early in fiscal year 1990; and possible increased competition in our Digital Radiography and certain portions of our Nuclear Medicine product lines.

BALTIMORE (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Responding to a continuing decrease in the pool of qualified job applicants, USF&G Corp. this week launched a new approach to employee recruiting: television advertising.

In a groundbreaking new campaign which is currently running in its headquarters market of Baltimore, USF&G is augmenting such traditional methods of hiring as classifieds, recruitment agencies and networking to take its message directly to the widest possible market.

''The employment market is radically different from what it was just five years ago,'' says Charles D. Zimmerman III, vice president of human resources at USF&G. ''A company the size of USF&G is constantly looking for qualified candidates on all levels -- from clerical to management. However it is increasingly difficult to find those people as the number of skilled and educated job candidates declined through the 1980's. We realized we needed to get our employment message out to the widest potential audience.

''The answer was television.''

The new ads focus on USF&G's headquarters building -- a landmark in the Baltimore skyline -- as voices of employees are heard telling their stories of success, job security and involvement in the overall quality of the company.

Response to the ads was immediate and overwhelming. ''The hotline number listed in the ad, our main switchboard number -- even the switchboard of the television station running the commercial -- all have been ringing off the hook with applicants,'' says Zimmerman. In the first three days of the campaign, USF&G spoke to 1,500 new job applicants. ''Clearly, the ad is doing the job we intended: It's putting USF&G in touch with a much wider pool of potential employees.''

Baltimore-based, USF&G Corp. is composed of subsidiaries engaged in writing property/casualty and life insurance, and in the sale of financial services. USF&G Corp. is the 13th largest property/casualty company out of 3,500 nationwide. The corporation's principal subsidiary is the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co.

The ads, which were created by VanSant Dugdale Advertising will continue running through March 16.

CHANDLER, AZ (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Inter-Tel Inc. (OTC:INTL) Friday announced results of operations for the three months and year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Net sales for the fourth quarter were a record $18.6 million compared to $14.6 million for the same quarter a year ago. Inter-Tel attributed the surge in shipments to strong initial orders for its new GX-400 and the Premier ESPDX systems and to recovery of shipments delayed by product unavailablitiy in the preceding quarter. Shipments for the full year were $61.6 million compared to $62.6 million in 1988.

Net income for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1989 was $912,000, or 11 cents per share, compared to $247,000, or 3 cents a share in the same quarter of 1988. Net income for 1989 was $521,000, or 6 cents a share compared to $1,752,000, or 20 cents a share in 1988. This is the fourth consecutive year of net earnings for Inter-Tel, a performance it believes is unique in its segment of the industry.

Inter-Tel ended the year with a record backlog of orders and expects relatively strong shipments during the first two quarters of 1990. However, operating results could be significantly affected by additional import duties imposed on certain component assemblies supplied by Inter-Tel's Korean subcontractors. Such additional duties were in effect at a slightly lower rate during the last quarter of 1989. The effect on operations will be dependent on product pricing and interpretation of the applicability of the additional duties. Inter-Tel stated that it is reviewing sourcing alternatives and opportunties.

Inter-Tel is one of the leading designers, producers and marketers of business telecommunication software and systems in the United States, including digital electronic key, hybrid and PABX systems.

SEATTLE (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Immunex Corp. (NASDAQ:IMNX) Friday reported a net loss of $15.4 million, or $1.99 per share, for its fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared to a loss of $87,000, or 1 cent per share in 1988.

Revenues for the year increased to $28.2 million, up 27 percent from $22.2 million in 1988.

The 1989 loss was an expected result of the 1988 enhancement of the company's business strategy that called for increased investment in the research and development of products for which Immunex holds marketing and manufacturing rights. Nearly half of the annual loss was due to a one-time charge of $7.3 million, or 94 cents per share, for the acquisition of marketing and manufacturing rights to products Immunex eventually intends to market. These products include GM-CSF, Interleukin-3, Interleukin-1 Receptor, Interleukin-4 Receptor and B-Cell Differentiation Factor.

''In 1989, we incurred significant costs as we began the transition from an R&D company to a fully integrated biopharmaceutical firm,'' said Stephen A. Duzan, Immunex chairman, president and chief executive officer. ''A large portion of the 1989 loss was due to investment in a growing portfolio of marketable products. Also contributing to the loss were expenses associated with preparing for filing a product license application and establishment license application with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration later this month on Leukine, our first proprietary product for the U.S. market.''

The fourth-quarter loss was $5.4 million, or 70 cents per share, compared to a loss of $697,000, or 9 cents per share for the same period in 1988. Of the fourth-quarter loss, $2.4 million was due to accrued payments related to the acquisition of rights to GM-CSF and Interleukin-3. The remainder was the result of increased proprietary research and development and expansion of Immunex's marketing staff.

Duzan noted that Immunex ended the year in strong financial health, with $50.6 million in cash and marketable securities.

Immunex is a leading biotechnology firm focused on the research, development, marketing and manufacture of immunological therapeutic products. The company has under development the biopharmaceutical industry's largest proprietary portfolio of cytokines and cytokine receptors.

KANSAS CITY (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - STUART HALL COMPANY, INC. (NASDAQ:STUH) Friday announced an increase of 35 percent in sales for the fiscal year ended November 30, 1989. The company also reported that for the fourth quarter of the fiscal year sales increased by 38 percent (table follows).

STUART HALL also announced that the Board of Directors voted to maintain the new $.06 per share annual dividend on the company's common shares. As a result of the four-for-three stock split paid on December 18, 1989, this decision by the Board increases shareholder dividends by 25 percent. The semi-annual dividend of $.03 per share will be paid on March 1, 1990 to shareholders of record February 15, 1990.

The 35 percent sales gain for the latest fiscal year resulted in gross sales of $99,106,476, up from $73,361,096 in fiscal 1988. The 38 percent sales gain for the fourth quarter ended November 30, 1989 resulted in gross sales of $18,740,648, compared to gross sales of $13,597,594 for the prior fourth quarter.

Commenting on the results Charles G. Hanson, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of STUART HALL, noted that during the last six months of fiscal 1989 a decline in the price of paper necessitated a write down in the value of total company inventory by $1,150,000. The greater protion of this write down, Hanson noted, occurred in the fourth quarter and amounted to $837,557. The demand for paper has increased in recent months, and the price of paper appears to have stabilized, he added.

Net earnings for fiscal 1989 were $2,154,652, or $.56 per share, taking into account the company's four-for-three stock split which was paid on December 18, 1989. This compares to net earnings of $2,247,913, or $.59 per share, also after the stock split, for fiscal 1988. Earnings for the latest fourth quarter after the inventory write down were $116,666, or $.03 per share, as compared to earnings of $603,044, or $16 per share, during the same quarter of fiscal 1988.

Hanson also stated that the demand for STUART HALL products has continued to increase in the current quarter and that both the company's Kansas City facility and new plant in Alabama are operating at maximum levels. Total production, he said, should be in the range of $125 million during the current fiscal year.

He also said, ''The Company introduced its new line of facsimile (fax) paper and other commercial office products during the latest fourth quarter. We are very pleased with the favorable acceptance of these products and the substantial progress we have already enjoyed in gaining national distribution through major office supply dealers.''

Also noting that ground will be broken for a new manufacturing and distribution facility in Woodland, California, in early March of 1990, Hanson concluded that higher sales and improved profit margins are indicated for the first three quarters of fiscal 1990 based on customers' orders and commitments received for the period.

CLEVELAND (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - BT Energy Corp. (OTC), formerly Strata Corp., has reached an agreement in principle to merge with The Benatty Corp., another independent oil and gas producer.

Benatty, based in Cambridge, Ohio, has interests in approximately 400 wells located primarily within the state of Ohio.

BT Energy, an independent gas and oil producer, is headquartered in Cleveland. It currently operates over 250 wells and 200 miles of pipeline in Ohio.

Under the terms of the agreement, Benatty shareholders will receive approximately $5 million in the form of cash and redeemable preferred stock in exchange for all of the common stock of Benatty. Gerald Benson, the president and principal shareholders of Benatty, will become the president of the merged company. In a related transaction, BT Energy will also acquire a drilling rig and certain other assets from other companies affiliated with Gerald Benson. All of the transactions remain subject to financing and to approval by BT and Benatty stockholders and will include changing the name of the surviving entity to The Benatty Corp.

Jugal K. Taneja, senior vice president and chief operating officer of BT Energy, stated, ''In addition to the benefit of certain economies of scale Benatty adds considerable strength to the BT Energy management and operating base and brings an exceptional undeveloped lease position.''

The BT Energy-Benatty combination will operate an asset base consisting of over 650 wells and nearly 400 miles of gathering pipelines in Ohio.''

CARLSBAD, CA (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Decom Systems Inc. (NASDAQ: DSII) Friday announced that net earnings for the first quarter of fiscal 1990 ended Dec. 30, 1989 were $53,000, or two cents per share, compared to net earnings of $132,000, or five cents per share in the first quarter last year. SOUTHAMPTON, NY (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Hamptons Bancshares Inc. (HBSI) has announced net earnings of $900,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, an increase of 7 percent over 1988 earnings.

On a per share basis, earnings were $1.09, based on 823,046 shares outstanding vs. $1.04 in 1988 on 809,758 shares. The change in shares outstanding reflects a 5 percent stock dividend paid by the company to its shareholders on August 31, 1989.

John F. Kidd, president and CEO, reported that, led by The Bank of the Hamptons, N.A., all of the company's subsidiaries achieved improved earnings in 1989. Kidd added that earnings had been impacted by the company's decision to increase its provision for loan losses. He attributed a rise in problem loans to a sluggish real estate market in the Hamptons area, but went on to say that in spite of economic conditions the company achieved increases in both loans and deposits and enjoyed a 5 percent growth in shareholders equity over 1988.

The company paid cash dividends of 11 cents per share in each of the four quarters of 1989 in addition to the 5 percent stock dividend. Hamptons Bancshares Inc. is traded on the NASDAQ National Market under the symbol ''HBSI''. A one bank holding company, Bancshares owns The Bank of the Hamptons, N.A., a commercial bank which currently has seven branch offices on Long Island's South Fork.

SHELTON, CT (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Shelton Bancorp Inc. announced Friday that its board of directors has voted to repurchase up to 2.5 percent of the company's outstanding common stock in the open market.

The company anticipates purchasing the stock within the next 12 months.

The company's President and Treasurer, Kenneth E. Schaible, stated that ''Like many profitable community banks in New England, we continue to be incorrectly categorized with other banks that have reported unprecendented losses in recent months as the result of write-downs on real estate construction and commercial loans.

In our opinion, the inaccurate categorization is reflected in the current market price of Shelton Bancorp's common stock being well below its Dec. 31, 1989 book value of $12.56 per share, despite our track record of profitability in each of the last 30 quarters.''

Schaible added that, ''After reviewing other investments and given our strong capital base, the board believes that a repurchase plan would be in the best interest of the company and its stockholders.''

TAMPA, FL (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - International Container Systems Inc. (NASDAQ: ICSI) Friday announced revenues and earnings for the quarter and nine months ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Net sales for the quarter were $1,897,000 compared to the previous year's net sales of $2,731,000 for the like quarter representing a decrease of approximately 30.5 percent. The net loss for the quarter of $138,000, or five cents per share, compares with net income of $342,000, or 12 cents per share, for the like quarter of the previous year.

Net sales for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1989, were $6,291,000, a decrease of $3,274,000 or 34.2 percent below the net sales of $9,565,000 for the nine months ended Dec. 31, 1988.

The company experienced a net loss of $270,000, or nine cents per share, for the first nine months of the current fiscal year compared with net income of $1,220,000, or 42 cents per share, for the corresponding period in the previous fiscal year.

Lower than anticipated sales were the result of the completion of mold modifications and delays in production caused by minor mold and equipment problems. The company is continuing in its efforts to improve the design of the Port-A-Pet case through constant contact with the bottling industry.

Also contributing to the decline in net sales was the effect of sales price decreases during the quarter and nine months ended Dec. 31, 1989, caused by increased competition in the less than full depth case market.

The company's new generation Port-A-Pet case has been approved by both Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola, and orders for this new case have been received from both companies.

A write-off of TRAYMATE capitalized expenditures of $452,000 during the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989 resulted from an evaluation of the TRAYMATE project's profitability and marketability.

Based on changes in the cost of raw materials, the selling price of competitive packaging and changes in softdrink packaging requirements, the company will no longer develop the TRAYMATE project. The company will maintain the patent rights to TRAYMATE should market conditions change.

The company has placed an order for molds which will produce a less than full depth case for the transport of 16 and 20 oz. disposable glass and PET plastic bottles.

DANIA, FL. (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Alco International Group, Inc. (NASDAQ:ALIG) Friday reported financial results for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1989.

Revenues for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1989 were $2,921,266 as compared to $3,873,798 in the prior fiscal year. There was a loss before income taxes of $669,557 in fiscal 1989 as compared to income before income taxes of $48,830 in fiscal 1988. In the current year, a provision for income taxes of $733,900 was offset by an extraordinary credit of $648,400 attributable to the utilization of net operating loss carryforwards. In the prior fiscal year, there was no provision for income taxes. The net loss for fiscal 1989 of $755,057, or $.07 per share compares to net income of $48,830, or less than $.01 per share, in fiscal 1988.

The decrease in revenues in fiscal 1989 was the result of reduced cargo to the Bahamas Islands, the Company's primary destination, and lower charter sales. Increased competition and poor economic conditions in the Bahamas contributed to this decrease in sales. The net loss for the year was due primarily to the high level of the Company's fixed costs, which include operating, maintaining and depreciating Alco's two ships.

According to Russell P. McCain, President,''The decline in cargo services has been somewhat offset by an increase in the Company's terminal and port services, which rose $368,354 during fiscal year 1989. Alco is continuing to implement cost reduction measures in order to reduce our fixed costs and other expenses in the future.''

Alco International Group, Inc., through its subsidiaries and affiliates, is engaged in the transportation of trailerized, containerized and on-deck cargos from a leased port terminal facility at Dania, Florida to the Bahamas Islands, islands of the Caribbean (excluding Puerto Rico) and countries on the north coast of South America and on the east coast of Central America.

PROVIDENCE, RI (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Providence Energy Corp. (AMEX:PVY) Friday reported first quarter earnings of $4.6 million, up 86 percent from the same quarter last year. On a per share basis, earnings were $1.10 per share, an increase of 80 percent over the same period last year.

This improvement was the result of higher revenues and margin from the natural gas distribution business due to the coldest December ever recorded in this area. Heating degree days for December 1989 were 1,329 or 33 percent higher than normal. Degree days for the quarter were 2329 or 12 percent higher than in the quarter ended a year ago.

Earnings were favorably impacted by a rate increase granted to Providence Gas Co. in June 1989 and designed to increase revenues by $4.9 million annually. Earnings were also helped by the addition of over 4,900 customers in the last 12 months, and the presence of stringent cost controls.

Earnings for the latest 12 month period are not comparable to previous years due to the presence of several nonrecurring writeoffs.

A portion of the decline in earnings per share is attributable to significantly higher weighted average shares outstanding. Approximately 500,000 new shares of stock were issued in September 1988, increasing the total weighted average outstanding shares from 3.7 million to 4.2 million for the 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1988 and 1989 respectively.

During the recent cold spell, secure domestic pipeline natural gas, purchased under various long-term contracts, met most of the needs of our customers. Liquefied natural gas, a vital supplement, was used for most of the remaining supply requirements. The company's gas distribution subsidiaries did not have to enter into any costly emergency supply agreements due to prudent gas supply planning.

December's record cold increased sales and earnings for the first quarter of the 1990 fiscal year. January, however, has been a different story with unseasonably mild temperatures producing lower sales and earnings so far in the second quarter.

Robert W. Owens, vice president and chief financial officer of Providence Energy Cor. stated that ''although we are pleased with the operating results for the first quarter, if the prolonged warm spell during the month of January continues for the quarter, it will offset much of the gains currently being reported.''

Providence Energy Corp. is the holding company and parent of Rhode Island's largest natural gas distribution company, Providence Gas Co. Providence Energy's utility subsidiaries provide service to over 148,000 accounts in Providence, Newport and 20 other cities and towns in Rhode Island and nearby Massachusetts.

WALTHAM, MA. (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - The Reece Corp. (NYSE:RCE) and the United Auto Workers (UAW) Friday announced an agreement to settle their dispute over unfair labor practices charges associated with the closing of the company's Waltham, Mass., plant in 1981.

The settlement is subject to final approval by the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB).

Under the agreement, the company will pay a lump-sum cash settlement and improve pension benefits of the terminated employees, including increasing the retirement benefit as had been scheduled in 1982, giving additional years of credited service and waiving the early retirement discount.

The company said it would take a $1.2 million charge against fourth-quarter 1989 results to cover the cost of the settlement, legal fees and related expenses associated with the matter.

Peter J. Abate, President of The Reece Corp., said that the charge would undoubtedly cause the company to record a loss for the year. Mr. Abate declined to estimate what the final 1989 results would be.

In a joint statement, the company and the Union said, ''Settlement is more practical than facing many years of litigation and potential remedy hearings requiring considerable time and resources. By making a reasonable settlement, both the Company and the former employees represented by the UAW mutually benefit and can put this chapter behind them.''

In reaching the agreement, the company did not admit it had committed unfair labor practices in the plant closing, while the UAW stood by the charges.

''We respectfully agreed to disagree on the validity of the charges, while jointly deciding this was a far more practical and reasonable outcome of the matter,'' said Leonard J. Egan, vice president of The Reece Corp., and Phil Wheeler, regional director of Region 9A of the UAW, which represented the production and maintenance employees at the plant. Both parties declined to comment further on the merits of the original case.

The company closed the plant in 1981, terminating approximately 120 bargaining unit employees. In September 1981, the NLRB charged Reece with violating the National Labor Relations Act in closing the plant without negotiating to impasse with the UAW.

An NLRB administrative law judge ruled for the company in July 1982, recommending that the complaint be dismissed. The UAW appealed to the five-member National Labor Relations Board, which reversed the judge's ruling on a 2-1 vote in May 1989.

The settlement ends pending appeals before the First Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston.

PHILADELPHIA (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Betsy Z. Cohen, chairman of the board, announced that Jefferson Bank's assets increased to $385,000,000 at Dec. 31, 1989, a 13 percent growth over the 1988 year-end total of $340,000,000.

Deposits increased from $293,000,000 in 1988 to $345,000,000 in 1989. Earnings for 1989 totalled $2,218,000 compared to $3,051,000 in the prior year. The decrease in earnings reflects the effect of a non-recurring special one-time state tax of over $600,000, currently being contested by a number of banks in Pennsylvania.

Cohen said, ''Banks across the country are experiencing pressure in interest margins due to the inverted interest rate curve. We are delighted that our asset quality is excellent and are proceeding vigorously to complete our branch network in center city Philadelphia and the western suburbs.''

Within the last 12 months, Jefferson has opened four new banking offices: in Philadelphia at Delaware and Washington Aves. and Fifth & Chestnut Streets, In Exton at Routes 30 and 100 and in Bala Cynwyd at 401 City Line Ave. In 1990, the bank is looking forward to the opening of a new branch at Main and Cotton Streets in Manayunk, expected in early summer. METHUEN, MA. (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Parlex Corp. Friday reported sales of $7,209,816 for the second quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared with $8,442,950 a year ago.

The company had a net loss of $390,980, or 16 cents per share, against a net loss of $1,612,621, or 65 cents per share, for the same period last year, which included a loss from the discontinued operation of $453,163, or 18 cents per share.

Net sales for the first half were $14,424,268 vs. $17,947,786 last year. For the first six months of this year, there was a net loss of $581,232, or 24 cents per share.

A year ago, the company reported a net loss of $1,289,164, or 52 cents per share, including a net loss from the discontinued operation of $511,044, or 20 cents per share.

The backlog as of Dec. 31, 1989 was approximately $14.5 million compared to approximately $15 million at this time last year. The backlog was $14 million at the end of the first quarter ended Sept. 30, 1989.

Parlex's financial conditions remains strong with a current ratio of approximately 3:1 and no borrowings against the revolving loan agreement.

President Herbert W. Pollack commented, ''Our losses are still heavily influenced by the underutilization of capacity in the Methuen division and general price erosion in the flexible circuit markets, particularly in the military-aerospace segment.

''However, we are beginning to see positive trends to offset these conditions. The book-to-bill ratio for the last two quarters has been greater than one. Prototypes of flexible circuits, supplied to the automotive market for electronic engine control, demonstrated that they can provide reliable performance in the high temperature environment which is found under the hood of automobiles.

''Hence, we received our first production orders for this application. In addition, orders from the cellular telephone market have increased significantly.''

PORTLAND, ME (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - John van C. Parker, president of Consumers Water Co. (NASDAQ: CONW), Friday announced that the company's 1989 earnings per share were $1.15 compared with $1.59 in 1988.

Earnings per share before gains from the sales of properties were $1.08 compared with $1.46. He noted the decrease in earnings was attributable to a fall-off in water usage compared with the drought-induced 1988 levels the continued softness in the New England real estate market and, finally increased interest costs associated with the large capital construction program of 1988 and 1989.

Parker stated that these latter costs are being incorporated into the rate applications that are either awaiting commission approval or are about to be filed.

Earnings per share for the fourth quarter, normally low because of the seasonal nature of the water utility business, also showed a significant decline.

The drop was due in part to the comparison with the unusually strong fourth quarter of 1988 during which the company sold a larger number of units of its condominium project at Sugarloaf Mountain, experienced a significant gain from the sale of a property, and made a one-time adjustment to the depreciation reserves of its Pennsylvania water utilities. Net of other adjustments, the aggregate effect of these extraordinary items was to increase earnings per share by 19 cents.

On an encouraging note, the company's C/P Utility Services Co. was recently successful low bidder for a $6.7 million contract to install 24,000 water meters in Brooklyn, New York. The job is anticipated to commence this Spring and endure for some 15 months.

NEW YORK (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Bernard Chaus Inc. (NYSE:CHS), Friday reported results for its second fiscal quarter and six months ended Dec. 30, 1989.

The unaudited figures, as compared to those for the corresponding period last year are below.

Bernard Chaus, chairman and chief executive officer, stated, ''Second quarter sales increased 8 percent to $77.7 million compared with $71.9 million in the second quarter last year and results were a loss of $2.8 million, or 15 cents per share, compared with earnings of $0.1 million, or 1 cents per share last year.

For the six months ended Dec. 30, 1989, net sales were up 12.3 percent to $149.5 million from $133.2 million last year and results were earnings of $0.1 million, or 1 cents per share, for such period this year compared with a loss of $5.2 million, or 28 cents per share for such period last year.

Although net sales increased in the second quarter compared with the same quarter last year, the company incurred a loss because of the weak retailing climate and one of our major customers, Federated and Allied Department Stores, filing Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

During the second quarter, the company liquidated inventory, built cash balances and closed the quarter without any bank debt.

''Currently, consumer response to our spring merchandise is excellent and bookings for our fall merchandise are ahead of last year. If we are able to achieve our planned objectives, we should return to profitability by the fourth quarter of this fiscal year.

''The company also announced that it has reached agreement with its bank lenders to waive, through June 30, 1990, compliances with the 'working capital' and 'tangible net worth/subordinated debt' convenants in its revolving credit agreement. As of Dec. 30, 1989, the company had $53.3 million working capital and $64.6 million of combined stockholder equity and subordinated stockholder debt.''

NEW YORK (FEB. 9) BUSINESS WIRE - Republic New York Corp. announced Friday that it has filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission for 6 million shares of its common stock in connection with the previously announced conversion of The Manhattan Savings Bank and its merger with Republic's wholly owned subsidiary, The Williamsburgh Savings Bank.

The merged banks will operate under the name The Manhattan Savings Bank. The number of shares actually sold will equal the independently appraised market value of The Manhattan Savings Bank divided by the lower of $44.69 or the market price of Republic stock at the time of the offering.

As of the close of business Feb. 9, 1990, and based on the current preliminary appraisal of Manhattan, Republic would be required to sell approximately 4.5 million newly issued shares of common stock.

At the closing of the conversion merger Republic will invest the proceeds of the offering into Manhattan, its wholly owned savings bank subsidiary.

In the registration statement Republic stated that its principal stockholder, Edmond J. Safra has said that, subject to approval by the Federal Reserve Board, he intends to purchase up to an additional 1.5 million shares of Republic's common stock.

At Dec. 31, 1989 Safra owned 9,800,610 shares, or approximately 32 percent of the corporation's outstanding common stock.

Republic New York Corp. is a bank holding company whose principal asset is Republic National Bank of New York. At Dec. 31, 1989, the corporation had consolidated total assets of $25.5 billion and stockholders' equity of $1.4 billion. The corporation's risk-adjusted capital ratios at that date were 12.45 percent for Tier 1 capital and 21.15 percent for total capital.

Total loans, net of unearned income, were $6.6 billion at year end. The allowance for loan losses was $287.5 million which represented 4.37 percent of net loans and 301 percent of total non-performing assets of $95.4 million.

As previously reported, four of Retirement Living's five mortgage loans have been in default since June 30 1989. WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) COMTEX - A bomb threat forced the evacuation of The National Association of Securities Dealers Inc.'s Washington, D.C. and Rockville, Maryland offices earlier today. The threat was received Friday morning and the buildings were evacuated as a precautionary measure from approximately 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. No bombs were found in either building.

The NASD is responsible for regulating the National Association of Securities Dealers Automated Quotation System (NASDAQ), which is the second largest securities market in the United States, and the over-the-counter securities markets.

An NASD official said he believes the bomb scare was a random act and not directed specifically against the NASD.

"These (bomb scares) are a fact of society," said Craig Thompson, the NASD's Manager of Media Relations. "Buildings across the street and next door have received similar scares in the past."

Thompson said the disruption had no effect on the NASDAQ system and that no irregular trading patterns were detected immediately following the threat.

"There were no significant trading swings," Thompson said. "If anything unusual were to occur, our New York office would detect it immediately."

The NASD's New York office provides back-up services to its market surveillance department located in Rockville, MD.

TOKYO (FEB. 9) - Nissan Motor Co. is considering exporting vehicles manufactured at its assembly plants in the United States and Europe to Taiwan, Nissan officials said on Friday.

But no definite plan has been worked out yet, they said.

The Nihon Keizai Shimbun newspaper reported Friday that Nissan plans to launch two models of passenger car and two types of commercial vehicle in July in a bid to regain the top market share in Taiwan which it lost two years ago to Ford of the United States.

NEW YORK, United Nations (FEB. 9) - Uruguayan President-elect Luis Alberto Lacalle said here he hoped to reach agreement with Uruguay's creditor banks on rescheduling the country's commercial debt.

After meeting U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Mr. Lacalle told journalists Thursday his country wanted to be flexible in re-negotiating its debt with U.S. banks.

Mr. Lacalle declined to discuss details of Uruguay's position because negotiations had just begun.

Uruguay's foreign debt totals six billion dollars, he said, adding that Montevideo was seeking to reschedule some 1.7 billion dollars owed to private banks.

Mr. Lacalle's comments came as representatives of 34 banks signed a letter of credit here for Mexico, Mexican and banking officials said.

The signatories represented only a fraction of Mexico's 460 commercial creditor banks which have accepted a Mexican debt-reduction accord signed Sunday in the Mexican capital.

The agreement initially was signed by representatives of 15 banks which make up the advisory committee of the lender institutions.

Mexican officials say the accord, which covers 48.5 billion dollars in commercial debt, will save the country about four billion dollars a year in debt service payments from 1990 to 1994.

Mexico's total foreign debt stood at some 100 million dollars at the end of 1989.

The letter of credit would provide Mexico with 1.2 billion dollars toward the seven billion dollars it needs to guarantee principal and interest payments on new bonds it is to issue in exchange for its old commercial debt.

Mexico also was to receive loans from the International Monetary Fund, Japan's Export-Import Bank and the World Bank.

Tokyo (FEB. 9) - The Export-Import Bank of Japan said Friday it has signed an agreement to extend a 5-billion-yen (34 million dollars) loan the National Bank of Hungary.

The loan is part of the 400-million-dollar trade insurance for Hungary which Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu earlier pleged to provide to the East European country during his visit there last month, the bank officials said.

It is the second loan to the Hungarian bank by the Japanese Export-Import Bank of Japan. The first one was last May.

LONDON (FEB. 9) - A 232-hectare site for a new Toyota factory in Derbyshire was made available to the Japanese car maker virtually free of charge, it was reported here Friday.

The Independent and Guardian newspapers, citing a confidential Derbyshire County Council internal document, reported that the European Commission had opened an inquiry into what appeared to be a hidden loan.

The Independent said the factory site at Burnaston in the English Midlands was worth about 145 million pounds (245 million dollars).

Yet under the agreement between Derbyshire and Toyota the Japanese firm would pay only the 18.3 million pounds (30 million dollars) spent by the council on land assembly, access and servicing, the papers said citing the document.

The EEC executive had reportedly asked the British government for details of the arrangements.

"The Commission will wish to know exactly what the position is because competition in the motor industry is very fierce and we have moved into a strict regime of control on public aid," an EEC spokesman was quoted as saying.

LONDON (FEB. 9) - The British Government gave the green light Friday to GEC's purchase of Ferranti Defence Systems Group (FGDS) and half of its Italian subsidiary Ferranti Italia.

Trade and Industry Secretary Nicholas Ridley said he had decided not to refer the deal to the Monopolies Commission although he admitted there were concerns about competition over defence contracts,

GEC now has a virtual monopoly on the manufacture of radar systems in Britain.

The sale was approved in principle on January 24 and formally announced by Ferranti president Sir Derek Alun-Jones on February 5.

Shares in Ferranti slipped a half pence to 39 pence on the London Stock Exchange after Mr. Ridley's announcement while GEC shares lost 1.5 pence to stand at 226 pence.

GEC is paying 310 million pounds (524 million dollars) for Ferranti's radar division and its stake in the Italian subsidiary.

Ferranti has been in financial difficulty since the revelation last year of a "missing" 215 million pounds (363 million dollars) in the accounts of its U.S. subsidiary International Signal and Control.

Sir Derek has said that the GEC sale will reduce Ferranti's turnover by around 25 per cent, but that the company will retain an important position in its remaining sectors, which include integrated defence systems, sonar, industrial electronics and armament and communications systems.

Sir Derek said the group was still in consultation with French defence electronics group Thomson CSF, which abandoned its takeover bid for the company last month.

He added that Ferranti hopes to collaborate with Thomson in one or two sectors were the businesses are compatible.

TOKYO (FEB. 9) - Japan's Suntory Ltd. said Friday it had agreed to buy 70 percent of Singapore food concern Cerebos Pacific Ltd. from Britain's Ranks Hovis McDougall plc for 43 billion yen (300 million dollars).

The major Japanese brewer and whisky distiller said it planned to acquire the remaining 30 percent of the Singapore-listed company through a takeover bid.

The price paid for the 70 percent stake translates into a share price of 8.25 Singapore dollars (4.43 U.S.) a share, it said.

Cerebos Pacific has 21 subsidiaries in the Asia-Pacific region, selling items ranging from health foods and salad dressings to instant coffee. The group posted a profit of some 32 million U.S. dollars last year on sales of about 180 million dollars, according to figures provided by Suntory.

A spokesman for the company said the initial purchase of 70 percent of the company would probably be completed in about two months.

PARIS (FEB. 9) - French companies bought 210 companies abroad in 1989, nearly doubling the 1988 figure of 107 significant takeovers, a study by the Bank of France has shown.

Most of the takeovers were the work of companies with turnover of more than one billion francs (about 180 million dollars). Of the 69 French groups with foreign turnover exceeding 10 billion francs, 42 percent mounted at least one takeover in 1989.

In 90 percent of cases, the takeovers were carried out by companies which had achieved a dominant position in France and which could achieve significant expansion only in other countries.

Relatively few companies with turnover of less than 500 million francs (about 90 million dollars) organised takeovers in 1989. The number in this category totalled nine.

BRUSSELS (FEB. 9) - The European Commission on Friday upbraided the United States for selling 50,000 tons of soft wheat to Tunisia at what it called "a very low price," and warned it would retaliate if EEC export markets are threatened.

Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry warned the United States against any "aggressive" moves in trade and said he was ready to take "the necessary initiatives to safeguard the Community's interests on the world market."

"The Commission will follow developments closely to see whether this was an isolated operation, or whether it constitutes the beginning of a new aggressive export on the part of the U.S.," Mr. MacSharry added in his statement.

The sale was concluded at 130 dollars a ton, 12 dollars cheaper than a contract reached only the previous week to provide 300,000 tons of wheat for China, according to reliable sources in Brussels.

The United States and the European Economic Community fought a tit-for-tat battle for grain markets in North Africa and China throughout most of the 1980s, using export subsidies as inducements to carve out market share.

In the opinion of many food experts, the conflict has contributed massively to the decline of agriculture in Third-World countries, as the cheap imports often undercut the prices of home-grown produce.

The EEC and the United States have also crossed swords over the future of production and export subsidies in the Uruguay Round of talks to liberalise farm trade in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

BRUSSELS, Feb 9 (AFP) - The European Commission, the EEC's executive arm, has decided to limit scientific cooperation with Israel in protest at Israeli repression in the occupied territories, a Commission spokesman said Friday.

The decision, which also involves the postponement of an official visit to Israel, was intended to send "an important political signal" to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, the spokesman said.

European commissioner for Mediterranean policy , Abal Matutes of Spain, was to have visited Israel in mid-March. Also postponed is a joint committee meeting charged with examining new scientific cooperation projects between the EEC and Israel, scheduled for April in Brussels.

The decision had been taken after discussing "the situation on the occupied territories and recent developments in the Middle East peace process," the EEC spokesman said.

The European Parliament on January 18 called for a freeze on scientific and technical cooperation with Israel.

The measures will affect only a minor area of cooperation between the EEC and Israel, to which Brussels devotes around 1.5 million European Currency Units (1.8 million dollars) per year.

However an Israeli diplomat in Brussels said that the initiative, taken at Mr. Matutes's prompting, would "block some important potential" in the area of scientific cooperation.

Israeli policy in the occupied territory has frequently been condemned by the 12 EEC member nations.

Last month the European commissioner for energy, Portugal's Antonio Cardoso E Cunha, turned down an Israeli request for increased cooperation in the energy sector.

Scientific cooperation betweeen Israel and the EEC, totalling around 7.5 billion dollars since 1983, is centred mainly on agriculture, medicine, ecology and artificial intelligence and bars military applications.

The EEC is Israel's principle client and supplier. Free trade in industrial goods was established between the two in January 1989.

Air France said that all long-distance flights, and about two thirds of its domestic flights, would operate normally.

MOSCOW (FEB. 9) - The Soviet Union and United States have reached agreement on a bilateral accord for the destruction of "a significant amount" of their chemical arms stocks, U.S. Secretary of State James Baker said here late Friday.

Mr. Baker told a news conference that a joint Soviet-U.S. statement could be published in the next few hours after Moscow agreed to a U.S. proposal.

U.S. President George Bush had at the United Nations in September last year offered to destroy more than 80 per cent of U.S. toxic gas stocks before the conclusion of a Geneva treaty banning chemical weapons, if Moscow agreed to do the same.

The Bush proposal provided for a total 98 per cent of stocks to be destroyed in the eight years after the treaty is signed, and once all chemical weapons holding countries have agreed to sign the treaty the remaining two per cent would be eliminated in two years.

Negotiators from 40 countries are negotiating a convention in Geneva on banning chemical weapons and providing for the destruction of all stocks.

MADRID (FEB. 9) EFE - The majority of Spaniards believe that a person suffering from an incurable disease should have the right to end their lives if they wish, a survey released Friday said.

The survey, on the thorny issue of euthanasia in traditionally Roman Catholic Spain, concluded that most Spaniards think that the terminally ill have the right to a "dignified death".

Sixty percent said a doctor should be able to terminate a patient's life painlessly, 22 percent were against it and the remainder had no opinion.

Fifty-eight percent of those polled believed it was useless to prolong a patient's life by artificial means when there was no hope of a cure, while 53 percent said it should be a person's right to ask for drugs to end their life painlessly if they wished to do so.

The survey said that 67 percent thought doctors should prescribe pain killers to the terminally ill even if it shortened their life expectancy.

Only 16 percent of those polled in the Center of Socialogical Studies survey said a doctor should be punished for practising euthanasia.

Euthanasia is illegal in Spain, as in most countries except the Netherlands, and there are no plans at present to change the law, a spokesman for the Justice Department said.

But a group called the Association for the Right to Die with Dignity is pressing for legislators to prepare a bill on euthanasia to be debated by parliament.

A spokesman for the association, Fausto Oros, said the proposed bill would permit euthanasia in cases of those with incurable diseases or severe disabilities to take the decision to end their own lives, either by their own hand or through drugs administered by physicians.

Euthanasia, like abortion, remains a highly contentious issue in Spain. Although fast becoming a more secular society, the country still harbors strong moral overtones from the church-dominated days of the rightist Franco dictatorship which ended in 1975.

From an ethical point of view, doctors point out that under the Hippocratic Oath they are bound to swear before taking up their profession it is their duty to keep their patients alive by all means available.

NEW YORK, (FEB 9) EFE - A man recovering from injuries sustained when a Colombian jet crashed outside New York last month has been charged with trying to smuggle cocaine worth an estimated $300,000 into the United States, police said Friday.

Jose Figueroa, 31, from New York, was the second injured passenger on the Avianca flight, which crashed killing 73 of the 159 people on board, to be accused of drug trafficking.

He was charged at a hospital in the city Thursday with carrying some 1.5 kg of cocaine packed into 102 condoms in his stomach on board the ill-fated flight from Bogota.

Police said the arrest, 15 days after the crash, was delayed until the drug had been excreted.

The U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation said last week that the other suspect, Antonio Zuluaga, could be a gunman in the pay of the infamous Medellin cocaine cartel.

He is still in hospital but under police vigilance.

The plane crashed January 25 at Cove Neck, Long Island, 27 km from New York's Kennedy International Airport, when it ran out of fuel.

ANKARA (FEB. 9) XINHUA - NEGLIGENCE CAUSED WEDNESDAY'S EXPLOSION IN TURKEY'S YENICELTEK COAL MINE NEAR THE BLACK SEA, WHICH MIGHT HAVE KILLED ALL THE 58 MINERS TRAPPED IN THE PIT, TURKISH COAL MINERS CHARGED TODAY.

THEY SAID THEY BELIEVED THAT WARNING SIGNS WERE IGNORED BEFORE THE EXPLOSION RIPPED THROUGH AN UNDERGROUND CHAMBER.

SEVERAL HUNDRED MINERS AND RELATIVES OF THE VICTIMS CHANTED "WE WANT THE MURDERER" AND "LET THE BOSSES ACCOUNT FOR THIS" AS THEY TRIED TO FORCE THEIR WAY INTO THE YENICELTEK COMPOUND NEAR THE BLACK SEA MOUNTAIN TOWN OF MERZIFON.

GENDARMES WITH RIFLES HELD BACK THE ANGRY CROWD OUTSIDE THE COMPOUND, BLOCKED A TRUCK FILLED WITH FIST-WAVING WORKERS AND FORMED A HUMAN RING AROUND THE MINE TO KEEP AWAY THE PROTESTERS, THE HURRIYET NEWS AGENCY REPORTED TODAY.

EARLIER REPORTS SAID EIGHT BODIES HAVE BEEN EXCAVATED FROM THE 340 METER DEEP MINE AND TWO WOUNDED MINERS RUSHED TO HOSPITAL FOR TREATMENT. NONE OF THE 58 MINERS ENTOMBED IN THE MINE IS EXPECTED TO SURVIVE, THE REPORTS CLAIMED.

"ON THE DAY OF THE EXPLOSION THERE WAS EXCESSIVE HEAT IN THE MINE. WE WERE ALSO TIPPED-OFF THAT THERE WAS EXCESSIVE GAS," SAID OSMAN SOYLU, WHOSE SHIFT ENDED ONLY HOURS BEFORE THE WEDNESDAY BLAST.

"PRECAUTIONS WERE NOT SUFFICIENT. IF THEY HAD BEEN, THE DISASTER WOULD NOT HAVE HAPPENED. WE DO NOT EVEN HAVE GAS MASKS," SOYLU SAID.

MEANWHILE, THE TURKISH LABOR UNIONS CONFEDERATION (TURK-IS) CALLED ON THE TURKISH MINING LABOR UNION (MADEN-IS) TO STOP WORK.

"WE PROPOSE TO THE TWO MINING UNIONS THAT THEY STOP PRODUCTION TO PROTEST THE LACK OF JOB SAFETY MEASURES IN THE SECTOR WHICH MAKES MASS MURDERS OF ACCIDENTS," SAID A STATEMENT OF THE CONFEDERATION, WHICH HAS OVER 1.5 MILLION MEMBERS.

THE STATEMENT ALSO CALLED ON THE GOVERNMENT TO EXCAVATE THE BODIES AT WHATEVER THE COST EVEN IF IT MEANS ENDING ALL MINING OPERATIONS AT YENICELTEK.

HOWEVER, PRESIDENT TURGUT OZAL HAS PLEDGED TO EXTEND ALL THE HELP IN A TELEGRAPH TO FAMILIES OF THE BEREAVED.

PRIME MINISTER YILDIRIM AKBULUT, WHO WENT TO YENICELTEK LAST NIGHT, OFFERED HIS CONDOLENCES TO THE VICTIMS' FAMILIES.

CHICAGO (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Nucorp, Inc. (NASDAQ: NUCO) announced that a settlement has been reached with the stockholder who had sued to enjoin Nucorp's tender for all of the outstanding shares of United Capitol Holding Co.

Although Nucorp and United Capitol believe that the lawsuit is without merit, it was agreed to settle the lawsuit rather than to engage in protracted litigation which would further delay consummation of the tender offer.

The settlement, which is subject to execution of appropriate documents between the parties and approval by the Delaware Court of Chancery, provides for the dissemination of additional information to the stockholders of United Capitol and the agreement by defendants not to dispute the payment of certain legal fees and expenses of plaintiff's counsel, among other things.

Nucorp also announced that the tender offer for all the outstanding shares of United Capitol, which was scheduled to expire on Feb. 9, 1990, is being extended until 3 p.m., Chicago time on Tuesday, Feb. 20, 1990. NEW YORK (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The Prospect Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: PROSZ) announced its fourth quarter and year-end results today for the period ending Dec. 31, with record revenues and operating income reflecting the acquisition last year of Illinois Central Corporation.

Revenues for the quarter were $182.3 million compared to $18 million for the comparable period in 1988; operating income was $24.9 million against a loss of $7.6 million in the prior year; and net income was a loss of $12.5 million compared to a gain of $20.8 million in 1988.

For the year, revenues were $530.2 million compared to $49.9 million; operating income was $62.4 million compared to a loss of $31.8 million; and net income was a loss of $17.2 million compared to a $72.7 million gain.

The increases in revenues and operating income were attributable principally to the March acquisition of Illinois Central. A number of factors influenced the variance in net income, including additional interest expense and one-time transaction fees in 1989, the sale of Murray Bakery Products, Inc., in 1988, and the sale of the company's stock interests in Best Products, Inc., and Facet Enterprises, Inc., in 1988.

The board of directors of Prospect announced on Feb. 8 that it had adopted a plan of complete liquidation and dissolution and the company will ask shareholders to vote on the plan at the annual meeting in late April or early May. This action follows a distribution of the company's common stock interest in Illinois Central to its shareholders in January, which was the first step in the program to return value to shareholders.

The Prospect Group, Inc. is a New York-based company that conducts its major operations through subsidiaries and affiliates engaged in the railroad, insurance and specialized consumer products and services industries.

In an effort to raise cash and reduce costs, the company has decided to sell its Carson City, Nev., facility, which it owns, and is currently engaged in consolidating its Carson City and Los Gatos manufacturing operations into a single facility. PHILADELPHIA (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - SmithKline Beecham (NYSE: SBH) today announced changes in its AIDS drug development program in an effort to seek a drug that is effective and capable of being produced in sufficient quantities for general patient treatment.

The company said that while it plans to complete clinical trials currently underway with soluble T4, a genetically engineered protein which blocks entry of the AIDS virus into cells, it will redirect its resources to new agents which work by the same mechanism but which can be produced in substantially larger quantities.

A second generation candidate has already been identified that binds to HIV just as soluble T4 does. Progression of a candidate to clinical trials will proceed as quickly as possible.

The company said production was the key factor in the decision. Attempts to achieve significant improvements in production capability with soluble T4 have been unsuccessful, and analysis indicates that it will not be possible to produce sufficient quantities of materials for general patient treatment in a cost-effective manner.

SmithKline Beecham is a leading company in AIDS research. The company's efforts also include work with an inhibitor of the HIV protease enzyme which has been shown in the test tube to prevent the AIDS virus from assembling properly, as well as the introduction of an AIDS diagnostic test in 1988.

ROCHESTER, NY (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Rochester Telephone Corp. (NYSE: RTC) today reported consolidated net income of $72.1 million or $2.82 per average common share for the year ending Dec. 31, 1989. This compares with earnings of $53.6 million and $2.11 per share in 1988.

The company's 1989 results included extraordinary gains of $20.6 million or $.82 per share from the sale of a Michigan paging operation and of cellular interests in Illinois, both related to Rochester Tel's acquisition program.

Income before extraordinary items was $51.5 million, a decrease of 4.0 percent from the $53.6 million reported in 1988. Earnings per common share before extraordinary items were $2.00 in 1989, against $2.11 in 1988.

For the fourth quarter of 1989, the company reported consolidated net income of $11.7 million, down from $15.1 million for the corresponding period a year ago. The results include a $2.6 million restructuring charge for the Telecommunications Group, related primarily to the write-off of computer hardware and software from the planned implementation of new information management systems. The group also experienced increased sales costs in the quarter.

Consolidated revenues and sales were $146.1 million, up 12.5 percent over the same period in 1988. STAMFORD, CT (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - A spokesman for the Dress Barn (NASDAQ: DBRN) announced today that sales for the six-month period ended Jan. 27, 1990, rose 11 percent. The company attributed these disappointin results to unseasonable weather and the extraordinary department store promotions during this period.

As a result of the lackluster sales performance, the company itself has had to take above-normal markdowns during January to clear its fall merchandise in addition to having to liquidate the stocks from its now defunct leased department division. The combination of these factors has created a potential one-third drop in earnings for the six-month period.

Early spring results have been positive with the company posting a 21 percent sales gain for the first week of the new season. The company plans to continue its store expansion with 40 store openings this spring.

The Dress Barn, Inc. operates a chain of off-price women's apparel stores, offering in-season, moderate to better quality fashion apparel, primarily with nationally recognized brand names, at substantial discounts from department store prices.

WEST POINT, GA (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - WestPoint Pepperell announced today that the New York City headquarters of its bed-and-bath Consumer Products Division will relocate around April 1 from the McGraw-Hill Building at 1221 Avenue of the Americas to 1185 Avenue of the Americas, where J.P. Stevens, acquired by WestPoint Pepperell in 1988 is headquartered.

"We plan to maintain two individual bed and bath companies with separate sales, marketing and design studios," stressed Chief Executive Officer William Farley. "However, consolidating office operations in one building will increase efficiency and lower costs. This is a continuation of the company's ongoing efforts to lower its cost structures to improve its operating efficiency and effectiveness."

Fifty-six positions are being eliminated from WPP and Stevens in New York City and regional sales offices in conjunction with the move. The company will provide severance and outplacement counseling services via the Derson Group, a national outplacement organization.

"Overall, this move -- which is part of a long-planned restructuring -- should help us attain even stronger market positions," said Farley. "We do not anticipate any further reductions in our bed and bath business in New York except in the normal course of business," he added.

The WestPoint and J.P. Stevens companies market broad lines of bed and bath products under such leading brand names as Martex, Utica, Liberty of London, Collier Campbell, Lady Pepperell, Givenchy, Louis Nicole, Eileen West and Ralph Lauren.

BENTON HARBOR, MI (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Whirlpool Corporation (NYSE: WHR) today released results of a capacity study by the KitchenAid Appliance Group that focused on production facilities at Mt. Sterling, Ky.; Oxford, Miss.; and Findlay, Ohio. To improve manufacturing efficiency, production of built-in cooking products will be relocated from the Findlay Division to the Oxford plant. Production of KitchenAid brand dishwashers will move from the Mt. Sterling plant to the Findlay Division, resulting in the closing of the Mt. Sterling facility. In addition, the company announced that it intends to pursue the sale of its floor care business along with its production facility at Danville, Ky.

The production capacity study, announced in November, resulted from the company's need to assure optimum utilization of manufacturing facilities. Kenneth W. Kaminski, president of the KitchenAid Appliance Group, said the announced production changes would begin immediately and would be completed in first quarter 1991. The Mt. Sterling facility, under the current plan, would cease production at that time. Approximately 650 people are employed at the plant.

The company will be scheduling meetings with salaried employees and with officials of United Auto Workers Local No. 1562, which represents hourly employees in Mt. Sterling, to discuss the effects of the plant closing. The Mt. Sterling facility was acquired by Whirlpool from Emerson Electric in 1988. It has been producing KitchenAid brand dishwashers since 1966.

With these product moves, the Findlay Division is expected to receive a net employment increase of approximately 300 positions. The division will continue to manufacture Whirlpool, Roper and Kenmore brand dishwashers and Whirlpool brand free-standing ranges. An estimated 135 new jobs will be created at the Oxford facility when production of Whirlpool, Kenmore and KitchenAid brand built-in cooking products move there. The Oxford plant currently manufactures built-in cooking products and components for KitchenAid as well as Whirlpool.

The company's floor care business, which accounts for a majority of the Danville Division's operations, is being offered for sale in order to better focus on other segments of the major appliance business, according to H. W. (Hank) Bowman, corporate vice president. Trash compactors and ice makers, also produced at the Danville Division, will be moved to other Whirlpool facilities. A study currently is under way to determine both the best locations and the timing of these moves.

Whirlpool Corporation is the world's leading manufacturer and marketer of major home appliances. Headquartered in Benton Harbor, the company manufactures in ten countries and markets products under nine major brand names in more than 45 countries.

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA (FEB. 8) PR NEWSWIRE - Jack E. Thompson, president of North American Metals Corp. (NAM), told a group of shareholders in Portland, Ore. last night that the Golden Bear Project poured its first bar of gold on Jan. 31, 1990.

Speaking at a shareholders briefing, Thompson outlined how the Project had overcome typical start-up problems and was treating ore. Design capacity has not yet been reached and some other difficulties, such as roaster feed system inadequacies, need to be solved. He expressed confidence that these issues will be resolved in the near future. In the meantime, the plant is operational and producing gold. Thompson emphasized that the search for additional ore reserves will be the key to the success of the Golden Bear Project.

Thompson also announced that the proposed shareholder rights issue has been withdrawn. The fall in the stock price and other complications which would keep NAM's United States shareholders from participating in the rights issue were cited as reasons for the action. Alternative financing methods are being explored and an announcement will be made soon.

Thompson also announced with regret the death of John Parker, a director since 1988. He commented that Parker's presence and good humour will be missed. The NAM board of directors appointed Laurie Curtis to replace Parker on the board. Curtis, an independent geological consultant from Toronto, brings additional geological expertise to NAM's board.

NEW YORK (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Marine Midland Banks, Inc., today reported that net income for 1989 was $13.9 million, compared with $160.5 million in 1988. For the fourth quarter of 1989, Marine reported a net loss of $119.9 million, compared with net income of $41.2 million in the fourth quarter last year.

Marine's results reflect the impact of a provision for loan losses of $263.3 million in the fourth quarter, compared with a provision in the 1988 fourth quarter of $102.6 million, which included $60.0 million for loans to less developed countries in the process of refinancing their external debt.

Included in the 1989 fourth quarter provision is a special addition to the reserve for domestic loans of $175 million, an increase of 75 percent. Marine said its decision to add the $175 million is a "prudent step to ensure that Marine's domestic loan loss reserve remains at an appropriate level in light of uncertainty in the economic outlook."

Without this special charge to profits, Marine noted, net income would have been $43 million in the fourth quarter and $177 million for the full year 1989.

The $175 million addition contributed to an increase in the portion of the loan loss reserve available for loans other than to refinancing less developed countries to 1.90 percent of these loans from 1.04 percent a year ago and 1.07 percent at the end of the third quarter of 1989. The portion of Marine's loan loss reserve available for loans to refinancing less developed countries was 47.62 percent of these loans, compared with 46.06 percent a year ago and 47.44 percent at Sept. 30, 1989.

Marine Midland is a major New York-based banking organization and a member of the HongkongBank group which, with assets of $124 billion, is one of the world's 30 largest banking groups.

Frontier Bank, N.A., today reported net income for the year ending Dec. 31 1989, of $2.8 million, a 34 percent increase over 1988 earnings of $2.1 million.

Fully diluted per share earnings for 1989 were 71 cents, a 22 percent increase over the 58 cents per share reported for 1988.

For the 1989 fourth quarter, net earnings were $699 thousand compared with $648 thousand earned in the fourth quarter of 1988.

Per share earnings have been adjusted to reflect a 3-for-2 stock split on Jan. 10, 1989 and a 10 percent stock dividend on Feb. 7, 1990.

Ventura County's 1989 results produced a 1.20 percent return on average assets and 19.5 percent return on equity.

W.E. McAleer, president and chief executive officer, noted, "Ventura's strong performance is a direct reflection of the continued economic expansion of our markets and our ability to gain profitable market share in both our basic business and through the new services we have introduced."

Earnings assets advanced 53.3 percent in 1989 to $276 million, compared with $180 million reported for 1988. Net loans grew 38.7 percent to $229 million from the $165 million a year ago. Loan losses for the year were .8 percent of period-end loans, versus .79 percent for 1988.

Total assets reached $314 million at Dec. 31, 1989, up 43 percent or $94 million, over the $220 million at 1988 year end.

Net interest income, a key contributor to Ventura County's results, grew $3.1 million, or 27.6 percent to $14.4 million for the 12 months. Other operating income rose 22.2 percent to $2.2 million from $1.8 million in 1988, and 111 percent for the fourth quarter to $845 thousand from $401 thousand in the prior year's last quarter.

"It's a trend we intend to build on by dealing with receivables, payments and receipt processing as soon as possible," he added.

ATLANTA (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Georgia Power Co. began construction today at Plant Hammond, near Rome, Ga., on the nation's first Clean Coal Technology project to focus solely on cutting nitrogen oxide (NOx) emissions from electric generating plants.

Plant Hamond's 500-megawatt boiler will be equipped with new, advanced pollution control technology designed to reduce NOx emissions -- one of several pollutants targeted for further reductions by potential acid rain legislation -- by more than 50 percent.

The $11.7 million project, the largest of its kind in the United, States is a joint effort of the Southern electric system, the U.S. Department of Energy, and the Electric Power Research Institute. The Southern electric system is made up of The Southern Co., Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power, Mississippi Power, Savannah Electric, Southern Electric International Inc., and Southern Company Services Inc., the system's technical and engineering subsidiary.

Today, Allen Franklin, president and chief executive officer of Southern Company Services, joined Sun Chun, the Department of Energy's director of the Pittsburgh Energy Technology Center, in removing the first piece of old equipment at the plant in order to make room for the new.

The total project is broken down into three different phases or testing period.

The first test at Plant Hammond will involve a process known as "advanced overfire air," in which part of the combustion air is diverted away from the unit's hot burners to limit the amount of oxygen available to form NOx. The diverted air is then injected through ports added above the primary combustion zone where combustion is completed in cooler temperatures. If successful, this process should reduce NOx emissions by 30-35 percent.

The second test involves replacing existing burners with special "low NOx burners" that control the initial fuel-to-air ratio. The new burners will create a fuel-rich flame that retards NOx formation. They are expected to reduce NOx emissions by up to 50 percent.

During the final test, both techniques will be operated simultaneously in hopes of reducing NOx emissions by greater than 50 percent.

In the innovative Clean Coal Technology program, the Department of Energy selected 16 projects nationwide in the fall of 1988 to receive federal funding. Through a competitive selection process, Southern Company Services earned four of the 16 planned projects.

CHICAGO (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Chicago Milwaukee Corporation (NYSE: CHG) announced that the Delaware Chancery Court has rendered a decision in the pending preferred stock litigation entitled Rosan v. Chicago Milwaukee Corporation et al.

In its decision, the Chancery Court dismissed four of the five claims made by the plaintiff, including the allegations that Chicago Milwaukee has liquidated and has dealt unfairly with its preferred stockholders.

The Chancery Court opinion noted that the plaintiff's final claim, alleging "corporate waste," "barely meets" the Delaware test to avoid dismissal. Chicago Milwaukee and its counsel believe that the "corporate waste" claim is meritless, and Chicago Milwaukee is reviewing its options to achieve a final dismissal.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastchester Financial Corporation (NASDAQ: ECFC), holding company for Eastchester Savings Bank, today reported net income of $119,000, or 3 cents per share, for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1989, and net income of $3.5 million, or $1.01 per share (on a pro forma basis), for the year 1989.

These results compared with net income of $956,000 for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1988, and net income of $4.76 million, for the year 1988. Year-to-year per share comparisons are not applicable since the bank's conversion from mutual to stock form was completed in April 1989.

In 1989, the company provided a fourth quarter provision of $1.5 million to its loan loss reserve as result of the continued softening in the real estate market. This compares to a provision for loan losses of $478,000 for the fourth quarter of 1988. For the year ended 1989 and 1988 the company provided a provision for loan losses of $2.76 million and $670,000 respectively.

Non-performing loans totaled $7.9 million at Dec. 31, 1989, or 1.5 percent of total assets. A majority of the non-performing loans are construction loans. The construction loan portfolio totaled $25.6 million at Dec. 31, 1989, or 7.3 percent of total loans. This compares with $30.8 million, or 8.7 percent of total loans, at Sept. 30, 1989.

"We are taking decisive action in dealing with the non-performing loan situation," said Malcolm J. Delaney, president and chief executive officer of the Eastchester Financial Corporation. "In addition to increasing our loan loss provision, we have taken aggressive steps with real estate developers to avoid potential problems."

Delaney also stated that "overall the year has been very successful. We have celebrated the attainment of $500 million dollars in assets, conversion to a publicly held stock institution, and the opening of our ninth branch in Larchmont. In addition, we have rewarded our shareholders during our first year as a public company, with a quarterly dividend of 10 cents per share and a special dividend of 20 cents per share in the fourth quarter."

Net interest income was $4.6 million for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, as compared to $4.4 million for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988. For the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, net interest income was $18.4 million, an increase of $1.8 million over the same period in 1988. The company's net interest margin increased to 3.66 percent of average assets in 1989, as compared to 3.55 percent in 1988. This was primarily a result of an increase in the company's interest earning assets.

Non-interest expense was $3.1 million for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, and $10 million for the year ended 1989. These results compared to expenses of $2.2 million for quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988, and $8.3 million for the year ended 1988. This increase in non-interest expenses is directly attributable to the opening of a new branch, refurbishing of older branches, increased salary and employee benefit levels, and loan collection expenses.

Total assets increased $51.7 million in 1989, to $525 million at year end. This increase was attributable to the company's initial public offering which raised $35.7 million, net of expenses, and deposit growth of $15.7 million during 1989. Stockholders' equity increased to $78.2 million, or 14.9 percent, of total assets at Dec. 31, 1989.

"The company's capital ratios, which are among the highest in New York state, provide various business opportunities to enhance shareholders' value," said Delaney.

CHICAGO, (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - General Motors' new experimental electric car -- the Impact -- is a solid example of the advanced technology that will give the corporation a competitive edge in the 1990s, GM Chairman Roger B. Smith said here today.

The Impact -- and the GM Sunraycer, the solar-powered vehicle that preceded it -- are examples of GM's continuing efforts to improve "the sophisticated electronic controls that give our customers performance, fuel-efficiency, and cleaner air as well," Smith told reporters and others at a GM luncheon held in connection with the opening of the Chicago Auto Show.

Smith reported an "astounding" world reaction to the Impact in the month since it was introduced, adding: "We've had calls from prospective customers from Perth to Paris ... and requests and queries keep rolling in."

Four out of five persons surveyed during the car's initial showing in Los Angeles said they definitely would consider buying an electric car in the future, he said. Ninety-five percent considered it a sophisticated, high-tech car, while 97 percent said driving it would help the environment.

Smith said GM is seriously considering the market potential of the electric car. He said that a special task force has been organized to determine what's required to produce the Impact and that he expects to see a recommendation from the task force in 60 to 90 days on the feasibility of producing such a car.

Smith said GM goes into the 1990s "a far different company from the one that entered the 1980s -- with a host of new products and a much stronger competitive position."

Citing a recent comment by a business magazine that "if technology means survival, GM has made the down payment," Smith listed these GM technical achievements over the past decade:

-- "We're proud of being the first with the electronic-chip-on-a- key anti-theft system, the lost foam method for complex automotive castings, Magnequench, and much more."

-- "We were first with the self-aligning steering wheel. In fact, in the development of safety technologies, in the lab and on our cars, we think we lead the world."

-- "We led all domestic manufacturers with our remarkable Quad 4 engine -- the first high-volume, four-valve-per-cylinder engine to be put into production on domestic cars."

-- "We were out front in introducing new manufacturing technologies like automated guided vehicles and programmable tooling changes."

-- "With our Manufacturing Automation Protocol (MAP), we showed the world how to get computers from different vendors to talk to each other on the factory floor."

Also during the 1980s, GM carried out a "reindustrialization" of its manufacturing base on a scale never before undertaken in the history of American industry, Smith said.

"In my brief time as GM chairman, the face of our world economy has been completely transformed," he said. "And as that's happened, our industry has played just as prominent a role as in years past. It's been at the front lines of America's battle for competitiveness in an interdependent and ever-shrinking world."

Smith said that "all of us" in the industry "can be proud of how we've rebuilt, reorganized and retrained." GM, he added, "has gone as far and as fast as anybody else I can think of" to assure its "competitiveness, profitability, and strength in the global marketplace of the 1990s."

Looking ahead, Smith said he sees "a future even more exciting than the past -- no doubt about it. Competition will continue to make all of us stronger, faster, and better able to satisfy and delight tomorrow's customers."

TORONTO (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Denison Mines Limited today reported a loss of $3,378,000 on revenue of $367,144,000, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared with earnings, before unusual and extraordinary items of $4,744,000 on revenue of $424,215,000, in 1988.

A $125,000,000 write-down of oil and gas properties and a 25,932,000 gain on the sale of the company's interest in Standard Trustco Limited resulted in a net loss of $94,324,000 for 1988. There were no unusual or extraordinary items in 1989.

After provision for preferred share dividends, the loss per participating share was $0.46 in 1989, compared with a per share loss, before extraordinary item, of $2.71 in 1988. The 1988 per share loss after the extraordinary item was $2.25.

Helen Roman-Barber, Denison's chairman and chief executive officer, said that "earnings in 1989 were adversely affected by weakened potash markets and reduced production volumes in both the mining and oil and gas divisions, which more than offset higher average oil prices."

Denison, directly and through subsidiary and associated companies, produces uranium in Ontario, potash in New Brunswick, industrial minerals in the United States and coal in British Columbia.

Denison also holds interests in producing oil and gas properties in Greece Egypt, Italy and Spain, and "in accordance with its long-term strategic plan, the company is actively negotiating the sale of those interests," Roman-Barber said.

The Company also announced that the board of directors declared the usual quarterly preferred share dividends, payable on March 15, 1990 to shareholders of record on Feb. 28, 1990. CHICAGO, (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Circle Fine Art Corp. (NASDAQ: CFNE) today reported revenues and earnings for its first fiscal quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989.

For fiscal 1990 first quarter, revenues increased to $9,176,000, a new first quarter record, up from $7,915,000 for the first quarter of fiscal 1989. Net income was $93,000 or $.04 per share for the quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989, compared to $410,000 or $.17 per share for the first quarter ended Dec. 31, 1988.

Management is optimistic as to earnings results for the full fiscal year 1990.

Jack Solomon, chairman of the board, noted that the San Francisco earthquake of October, 1989 had a negative effect on profits for the first quarter results. "Our second most important retail city, after New York, is San Francisco, where we own and operate three major art galleries," he continued. "Although total direct earthquake damage to all three galleries was not great, the loss of normal sales activity in San Francisco was substantial. Sales activity in San Francisco has been returning slowly and steadily, and it is now almost equal to pre-earthquake levels."

Commenting further on the results of the company's first quarter performance, Solomon stated that a major reason for the comparative decrease in earnings for the first quarter were costs and reduced gross profit margin relating to the test introduction in the fall of 1989 of the company's new marketing program, The Art Collectors Circle(TM), which operates in association with The American Express Co. Solomon stated that he anticipates that earnings for the second quarter of the company's fiscal year ending March 31, 1990 will also be negatively affected by costs relating to the club's start-up.

"We had projected $800,000 in sales through The Art Collectors Circle from the test in the first quarter, however, sales from the successful test were approximately $1,500,000. These results confirm the potential for The Art Collectors Circle to make a dramatic positive impact on our future. Based on the test results, American Express has scheduled substantial "rollouts" of The Art Collectors Circle program, at its sole expense during the third and fourth quarters of the 1990 fiscal year to achieve a "critical mass" of members. Club operations are expected to become profitable in the latter half of 1990.

The board of directors of Circle Fine Art has approved the addition of three key executives to Circle's top management group.

In December, Stephen Byer joined the company as executive vice president and as president of Tangent, Fine Art for Living(TM), the company's new retail store division. His previous positions include marketing director of Playboy Enterprises, Inc. and president of Dynasen Corp. For 20 years, he owned and operated Stephen Byer & Associates, a successful direct response marketing organization. An avid art collector, Byer is the co-founder and director of Byer Museum of the Arts of Evanston, Ill.

Also in December, Feb Grumman joined Circle as president of the Circle Direct Response Division. He will be directing marketing strategies for The Art Collectors Circle. Grumman was copy director at The Franklin Mint and in the early years of that company created much of its innovative marketing material. After leaving the Mint and forming his own firm, Grumman consulted extensively on collectibles marketing with clients such as American Express, Lenox and other major companies.

Ruth Meldon has been appointed director of Gallery Operations. She comes to Circle with a wealth of retailing knowledge, having 16 years combined experience in executive capacities at both Sears and Marshall Field & Co. Her emphasis in organizational developments and training will focus on streamlining gallery policies and establishing new operations systems relating to The Art Collectors Circle.

Circle Fine Art Corp. publishes and distributes limited edition original graphics, deals in contemporary fine art, manufactures and distributes "Art To Wear" limited edition fine art jewelry designed by a number of the world's leading contemporary artists, and owns and operates 33 fine art galleries and three Tangent, Fine Art for Living stores in the United States and Canada. The company also owns the Art Collectors Circle, a club for both beginning and advanced art collectors which it operates in association with a division of The American Express Co.

MORTON GROVE, IL (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Middleby Corporation (AMEX: MBY) today announced it has sold for $7,900,000 in cash its Southern Equipment Company Division of St. Louis, a contract manufacturer of custom fabrications for the foodservice industry. The purchasers are a group of private investors, including management of the division.

Southern Equipment was acquired in July 1989 as part of Middleby's purchase of its Foodservice Equipment Group. In that acquisition, Middleby acquired Toastmaster (counter-top equipment), Victory (foodservice refrigerators), Southbend (commercial cooking equipment), SECO Products (handling, holding and service equipment) and Escan of Canada (steam cooking equipment), all of them manufacturing operations. Of the Foodservice Equipment Group's approximate $105,000,000 in revenues, Southern Equipment contributed about $20,000,000 in sales, according to David Riley, Middleby's president.

The proceeds will be used to reduce Middleby's acquisition loan, Riley said.

"As a result of year end adjustments and a generally soft fourth quarter, Middleby does not expect to report a profit for the fourth quarter although it will remain profitable for the year. Prospects for 1990 are for improving results," Riley added.

Middleby is a major diversified foodservice equipment company. It designs, develops, manufactures and markets equipment used in the preparation, cooking, serving and storage of food in commercial and institutional kitchens and commissaries in the United States and internationally.

Moats, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Metropolitan Federal (NASDAQ-NMS: MFTN), announced today that Metropolitan Federal, through a negotiated agreement, has acquired title to the Southwind project in Memphis, Tennessee, from Southwind Development Corporation. Southwind is an architecturally-controlled community located in Southeast Shelby County, consisting of residential, retail and an office development, along with an 18-hole championship golf course and clubhouse.

VERO BEACH, FL (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Dixon Ticonderoga Company (AMEX: DXT) today reported a loss for the first quarter ended Dec. 31, 1989.

The loss was $367,012 or 12 cents per share, on revenues of $18,667,874. This compares with net income of $240,709, or eight cents per share, on revenues of $17,967,118, for the 1989 first quarter.

President Gino N. Pala said, "We attribute the loss primarily to an overhaul and clean-up of problems from fiscal 1989 when we encountered our first loss after several years of positive growth. Our graphite and lubricants segment also was affected by cutbacks in the automotive industry. It must be remembered the first quarter is traditionally our slow period and we intend to make steady improvements during the fiscal year."

LONG BEACH, CA (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) has awarded $21.6 million in contracts to four companies for production of wing components for the C-17 airlifter.

Each of the contracts was issued for Lot 3 of the production run (four aircraft, beginning with the seventh production model), with options for up to the planned total of 210 C-17s.

The companies are Beechcraft Corp. of Wichita, Kan., for the winglets, California Contour Industries of Brea, Calif., for spar caps and stringers Kaman Aerospace Corp. of Bloomfield, Conn., for ribs and bulkheads, and Reynolds Metals Co. of McCook, Ill., for wing skins.

The C-17 is designed to fly large Army and Marine Corps combat equipment, troops and cargo directly to small, austere airfields near the battle zone. Air Force plans call for acquisition of 210 C-17s through the year 2001. First flight of the airlifter is scheduled not later than June 1991.

Lockheed Aeronautical Systems Co. has been under contract to produce wing components for the first flight test aircraft, two ground test aircraft and the first six production C-17s as part of a $140 million agreement signed in April 1987.

Beechcraft, CC Industries and Reynolds Metals have been performing the same work under subcontract with Lockheed.

Robert L. Clepper, vice president - general manager of the C-17 program for Douglas Aircraft Co., said the action was necessary to "protect the affordability of the C-17 program."

"We have conducted a comprehensive evaluation of alternate sources and have a high level of confidence in each of these companies' ability to meet the cost, schedule and technical requirements of these C-17 wing components."

The Beechcraft contract is worth $2.03 million for the four aircraft in Lot 3. The CC Industries contracts are worth $5.1 million. The Reynolds contract is valued at $1.5 million. The Kaman contract is valued at $12.9 million.

Kaman will perform the work at facilities in Bloomfield, Moosup and Gilman Conn., and Jacksonville, Fla.

Lockheed has indicated it will fully support an orderly transition to the alternate sources.

Subcontracts for three other wing component packages, fixed leading edge, slats and pylons are still under the source selection review and will be announced at the conclusion of that review.

SIMI VALLEY, CA (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - "It is vital that the public understand that the bankruptcy announced today by Gibraltar Financial Corp. (GFC) has absolutely no effect on the customers and operations of Gibraltar Savings, F.A.," says James R. Boyle, chief executive officer of Gibraltar Savings, F.A.

"Gibraltar Financial Corp. and Gibraltar Savings, F.A., have been two separate and distinct organizations since federal regulators became responsible for managing Gibraltar Savings on March 31, 1989 -- hence, the bankruptcy in no way gives Gibraltar Financial Corp. any access whatsoever to the assets of Gibraltar Savings, F.A., or its customers, and deposits remain federally insured," Boyle adds.

Gibraltar Savings, F.A., officials are concerned because the public, recently, has often been confused when reading or hearing news about similarly named, but unrelated financial institutions.

"Gibraltar Savings, F.A.'s customers could unnecessarily suffer early withdrawal penalties and all of the logistics of account closing if they don't understand that, because of the difference between us and Gibraltar Financial Corp., their deposits are quite safe," says Boyle.

He noted that Gibraltar Savings, F.A., will continue to provide all current banking services through its 108 branches in California, Washington and Florida.

NEW YORK (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - McGraw-Hill, Inc. (NYSE: MHP) today reported it had acquired a 40 percent ownership position in International Valuation Services, Inc. (IVS) the first firm to specialize in business valuation services in Eastern Europe, for an undisclosed cash sum.

IVS, a privately held U.S. corporation, provides independent business valuation of government, public and privately owned enterprises. It determines the current market value of the fixed and financial assets of a business, the value of a private company's shares, or intangible assets such as patents, licensing agreements and joint ventures which may not appear on the organization's balance sheet. IVS is the only firm in Eastern Europe specializing in this service, which aids the privatization process -- the transfer of State assets to private ownership.

Recent changes in Hungarian law encouraged previously state-owned and newly formed companies to seek capital from foreign sources, both as investors or direct owners of up to 100 percent of the Hungarian firms. Several hundred of Hungary's nearly 2,500 state-owned enterprises or industrial cooperatives are expected to sell shares or enter into joint ventures within the next few years.

To provide accurate valuations on an acceptable worldwide basis, IVS opened its first office in Budapest early in 1990. Others are planned initially in West Germany and in other countries in Eastern Europe and the Common Market as the transformation from State-owned companies to private ownership evolves and the expected restructuring occurs as business responds to the formation of the European Community in 1992.

Among the Hungarian firms valued under his direction were a large machine tool company, a chemical company, seven glass companies and several international Hungarian export-import holding companies. Toltzman's international experience includes the direction of valuation work in Africa, Latin and South America, Canada and the Pacific Rim countries.

Before joining Ernst & Young, Toltzman was director of Arthur Andersen's Appraisal and Valuation Services, and a vice president of both American Appraisal and Marshall and Steven, two of America's leading valuation firms.

McGraw-Hill's investment in IVS is its second venture in Hungary announced in the last two weeks. The company recently signed an agreement to publish a Hungarian-language version of Business Week. The company also announced that it had reached agreement in principle for a French joint venture on behalf of its Standard & Poor's credit rating subsidiary similar to another joint venture it has had in Sweden since 1988. In 1989, McGraw-Hill also acquired a 50 percent interest in Global Finance, a leading financial publication with circulation throughout Europe.

Harold W. McGraw III, the firms's executive vice president, will serve as chairman of the board of IVS and be responsible for coordinating McGraw-Hill's support for the valuation firm.

WATERBURY, CT (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Webster Financial Corporation (NASDAQ: WBST), holding company for First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Waterbury announced today that it will increase its provision for loan losses by $1.5 million, reducing 1989 earnings to $2,860,000 or 80 cents per share compared to $4,514,000 or $1.23 per share in 1988. Webster previously reported 1989 unaudited earnings of $4,360,000 or $1.23 per share. Webster will report a loss for the fourth quarter of 1989 in the amount of $765,000 or 22 cents per share compared to earnings of $1,231,000 or 34 cents per share for the same period a year earlier. Webster previously reported unaudited 1989 fourth quarter earnings of $735,000 or 21 cents per share.

As a result of the increase in the provision, the allowance for loan losses at Dec. 31, 1989 amounts to $3 million. Webster's loan portfolio contained three subdivision land loans totaling $9.2 million at Dec. 31, 1989. The increase in the provision for loan losses is primarily attributable to these loans which have been adversely affected by the slowdown in real estate sales. All were originated over two years ago and are located in the corporation's primary lending area in Western Connecticut. Two of the three loans have been reclassified as nonperforming loans even though not contractually delinquent more than 90 days.

James C. Smith, president, said, "The decision to increase the provision for loan losses is based in part on a new independent appraisal, received after the corporation announced unaudited results for 1989, which indicates that the present value of one of the subdivisions is less than our net book value of the loan. This loan for $2.5 million became contractually delinquent in November 1989 and a partial payment expected to be received by the end of January was not made. This loan has now been reclassified as nonperforming and an additional loan loss provision added. After reviewing our other two subdivision land loans for $3.8 and $3 million and applying standards similar to those used in the new independent appraisal, we have now decided to increase loan loss reserves for both these loans. Since the $3.8 million loan has some of the same guarantors as the delinquent $2.5 million loan, we have also now reclassified it as nonperforming, even though it was not contractually delinquent until after Dec. 31, 1989. The other loan for $3 million has not been reclassified as nonperforming, since it is not in default and has no common borrower. As a result of these reclassifications, nonperforming assets at Dec. 31, 1989 increased from the previously reported $1.8 million or 0.25 percent of assets to $8 million or 1.14 percent of assets. Slower than anticipated absorption rates for developed residential building lots has extended the carrying periods and accounts in part for the reduction in present values." Smith also said, "Our relatively low initial loan-to-value ratios and the new additions to the allowance for loan losses should provide adequately for these contingencies. In addition to reserves for these three loans, we have further increased our general reserves in recognition of the area's soft real estate market."

Total loans receiveable at Dec. 31, 1989 amount to $504 million, or 71 percent of total assets. Loans delinquent more than 90 days and real estate owned totaled $1.8 million at year end, or 0.25 percent of total assets, of which real estate owned amounted to $142,000 and represented a single loan. There were no commercial real estate loans delinquent more than 90 days.

As announced on Jan. 22, 1990, Webster's board of directors has declared a regular quarterly cash dividend of 13 cents per share. The dividend is payable March 15, 1990 to shareholders of record on Feb. 16, 1990.

SOUTH BURLINGTON, VT. (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Green Mountain Power Corporation (NYSE: GMP) announced Friday 1989 earnings of $2.36 per average share of common stock as compared to $2.41 per average share in 1988. The 1989 earnings represent an earned return on common equity of 12.5 percent.

GMP's operating revenues, which totaled $144.0 million in 1989 were $15.4 million higher than in 1988, principally due to a $14.2 million increase in revenues from wholesale electricity sales to other New England utilities experiencing short and intermediate-term power needs.

Although retail electricity sales increased 4.4 percent in 1989, retail revenues increased only 1.1 percent, reflecting the retail rate decrease that took effect in May 1988.

Total operating expenses increased 12.2 percent in 1989 principally as the result of a 14.6 percent increase in power supply expenses and a 51.4 percent increase in transmission expenses. These expenses increased primarily as a result of increased purchases of power from others to facilitate the wholesale electricity sales that produced the higher resale revenues mentioned previously.

The company responded to growth in its service territory by making $22 million in new capital investments in its transmission and distribution systems and customer service center facilities, increasing total net utility plant to $131.8 million, an increase of 12.2 percent in 1989.

GMP is an investor-owned electric utility serving 76,000 customers in Vermont.

CLARK, N.J. (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Ketchum & Co. Inc. (AMEX: KCH) today announced that it had reduced its loss in the first quarter of fiscal 1990 as compared to the last two quarters of fiscal 1989. The loss for the first fiscal quarter of 1990 amounted to $1.4 million, as compared to $2.3 and $1.9 million losses reported in the third and fourth quarters of fiscal 1989, respectively. The loss for the first quarter of fiscal 1989 amounted to $1.3 million.

Ketchum's net sales for the first three months of fiscal 1990 were $64,980,000 vs. $62,273,000 reported in the same three months of the prior year. Stephen J. Young, the president of Ketchum, reported that the strong sales indicate a stabilized customer base with new market share being added toward the end of the quarter. Gross margin improved slightly over the prior year.

Total expenses increased from $5,971,000 during the first quarter of fiscal 1989 to $6,402,000 during the same period of the current year. A substantial part of the increase is attributable to increased debt the company borrowed to support the business during this last year. Interest expense increased approximately $246,000 during this period. Increases in the company's group insurance cost further contributed to the increase in total expenses. Other operating expense levels were maintained despite significant volume increases.

Young said the company is pleased with the progress that it has made during the past six months. Management said it continues to expect reductions in its quarterly losses during the remainder of fiscal 1990.

Office Commercial Pharmaceutique (OCP), the company's majority shareholder provided an additional $1 million in subordinated debt to the company in January of 1990. Such debt is convertible into equity of the company at a concession price equal to the trading price of the company's common stock, subject to the approval of the stockholders of the company.

LOS ANGELES (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Angeles Corp. (AMEX: ANG), reporting for Fiscal Year 1990's second quarter and half year periods ended Dec. 31, 1989, said that revenue declined seven percent in the quarter but rose two percent in the half year, compared with like periods the prior fiscal year. As predicted, there were net losses in both the quarter and the six months due primarily to heavy costs during the early stages of development and rent-up in Angeles' relatively new businesses of congregate-style housing for the independent elderly and factory-direct shopping malls.

Angeles' revenue declined from $10,129,000 to $9,464,000 in the comparable second quarters, but rose from $17,135,000 to $17,465,000 in the half year periods. In the 1990 quarter, pre-tax loss from operations was $1,219,000, of which $964,000 was incurred from development, depreciation and lease-up costs, compared with income of $777,000 in the prior year quarter.

Net loss for the 1990 second quarter was $835,000, or $.33 per share, compared with net income of $513,000, or $.10 per share the prior year quarter. Net loss for the half year was $2,959,000, or $1.08 per share, compared with net loss of $1,043,000, or $.42 per share the prior year.

Real estate development costs are expected to have a continuing adverse effect on the company's earnings as construction and rent-up continue on new retirement housing projects, even though the properties increase in value.

Angeles' sales of interests in new real estate investment programs have slowed along with a similar trend nationally, but new investments in shares of the Angeles-sponsored FPA mutual funds have increased. Sales of FPA mutual fund shares, plus First Pacific Advisors' management performance during a period of generally rising stock market prices, have increased total securities assets under FPA management by 20 percent during the six months ended Dec. 31, 1989, to a total of $2.5 billion.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The United States and Italy have initialed a new agreement in principle that will provide the first expansion of air services between the two countries in 20 years, the Department of Transportation announced today.

The agreement, reached late Thursday in Rome, will allow three additional U.S. airlines to operate "combination" (passenger and cargo) flights between the two countries, under a phased schedule over the next four years, and permit the Italian airline, Alitalia, to serve five additional U.S. gateway cities, also under a phased schedule. Under the agreement, up to eight U.S. cities may receive new non-stop service to Milan and Rome.

Under the current bilateral agreement, three U.S. carriers serve the U.S.-Italy market. They are Pan American, TWA and Federal Express, which provides cargo service only.

Under the new agreement: -- A new U.S. carrier, American Airlines, will provide daily service between Chicago and Milan/Rome starting April 1, 1991. U.S. airlines will be allowed to serve Dubrovnik and Zagreb, Yugoslavia, via Milan.

-- Beginning Oct. 29, 1990, Alitalia can begin serving two new U.S. gateways with four flights a week. Effective April 1, 1991, that service can be increased to seven flights a week.

-- Starting Nov. 1, 1992, the U.S. can name a fifth U.S. carrier to fly between the two countries. The new carrier can begin service with five weekly flights in the first year, and seven weekly thereafter, if the aircraft it is operating has 300 seats or less. If the aircraft has more than 300 seats, frequencies are more limited.

-- Also effective Nov. 1, 1992, Alitalia may begin serving two more U.S. gateway cities, with the same frequency limits as apply to the U.S. carrier.

-- Starting April 1, 1994, the U.S. can designate a sixth U.S. air carrier to serve the two countries, if traffic has grown at a certain rate. If traffic growth is less than the specified rate, a sixth carrier would be added no later than April 1, 1996.

-- Alitalia can begin serving one more U.S. gateway city, when the sixth U.S. carrier enters the market.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - The Washington-based Communications Fraud Control Association (CFCA) reported that customers of long distance carriers have been giving their telephone credit card numbers to callers posing as company security investigators.

Toll charge losses are already estimated to be $250,000 in one state, after only three weeks of abuse.

The scam began in Southern California in mid-January, spreading north to Minnesota, east to New Mexico, Texas, and on to New England -- apparently with the same abusers using the same approach as before.

The impostors told customers their card numbers had been compromised and must be de-activated, and in order to do so, the security department needed to know the last four digits of their calling numbers.

One security manager heard callers' names mentioned, but it is highly unlikely that actual names were used. Some customers say they heard computer sounds in the background during the calls.

A CFCA spokesman said the scam is another in a series of insidious intrusions by long distance code thieves using industry jargon to convince someone to provide information. Called social engineering and usually directed against businesses, targets now include customers of long distance carriers who have been issued telephone charge cards, or calling cards.

CFCA warns calling card holders not to divulge information to any caller unless the customer initiated the call. The group reminds customers that carrier representatives don't have to call them for their card numbers. The numbers are stored on the carrier's database.

Anyone receiving unsolicited calls from a man or woman claiming to be a security investigator for a long distance carrier, and asking about their calling card number, should call their telephone company.

CFCA is a not-for-profit educational organization founded in 1985 to help the telecommunications industry combat fraud, and is widely regarded as the nation's clearinghouse for information pertaining to the fraudulent use of telecommunications services.

CHICAGO (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - In response to Gov. Florio's statement today, Allstate Insurance Co. President Raymond H. Kiefer said that, "In spite of the rhetoric, the governor's comments may indicate a glimmer of hope that he is ready to start a meaningful dialogue and get to some substance. However, much of his statement was incorrect, and we'd like to set the facts straight.

"Yesterday, Mr. Duncan articulated a very real business response to a most difficult environment. In a free-enterprise system, it's always an option to discontinue doing business if the environment becomes so poor that you can't earn a reasonable profit. The existence of that option is a business reality. Mr. Duncan properly represented the obligation Allstate has to its customers, to its employees, and to its owners.

"Allstate has met with the governor and several times with his staff to discuss insurance reform. Our aim at each of our meetings has been to provide workable solutions to the insurance mess in New Jersey. Any inferences by the governor that we're threatening either the citizens of New Jersey or our own policyholders are wrong.

"We're confused by the governor's reference to not being able to look at our books. State law requires us to file literally mountains of data with the state insurance department, and any facts the governor wants are available to him in Trenton.

"The governor says he's fed up and so are we. The governor stated he's had enough and so have we. The state-run system currently in effect has run up a $3.1 billion debt, and the governor's proposal just won't solve the insurance mess in New Jersey. The governor's charge that Allstate owes $153 million to the JUA as a result of inefficiency is absolutely false.

"Gov. Florio wants to change that system and so do we. We just don't believe his plan will work. In his letter, Gov. Florio said he was willing to listen to reason and open to good ideas. We will test the governor's offer. We're committed to building a car insurance system everyone can live with."

JOHNSTOWN, PA (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - BT Financial Corp. (NASDAQ: BTCF) today announced for the fourth quarter consolidated net income reached $1,682,000, a 15.84 percent increase over the $1,452,000 earned in the same period last year.

Earnings based upon the weighted average number of shares outstanding increased 17.02 percent to $.55, from $.47 per share earned in the fourth quarter of 1988.

Consolidated net income for 1989 was $5,737,000, an increase of 1.34 percent compared to $5,661,000 for the previous year. Earnings per share increased from $1.83 to $1.86. Net income for 1989 was reduced by $352,000, or $.12 per share as a result of Act 21, signed into law by Gov. Robert P. Casey on July 1, 1989, which changes the rate of Pennsylvania Shares Tax imposed for 1989.

The per share data reported for the fourth quarter and for the year, partially reflects the effect of the decrease in the weighted average number of shares outstanding due to the corporation's plan to repurchase up to 100,000 shares of common stock from time to time in the open market at prevailing prices. For the three-month period ended Dec. 31, 1989, the weighted average shares outstanding decreased 1,707 shares to 3,085,781 and for the year 1989 decreased 430 shares to 3,087,058.

Several personnel changes were made during the fourth quarter. John H. Anderson, executive vice president, Lending Division, BT Financial Corp., became president and chief operating officer and a director of Johnstown Bank and Trust Co., effective Jan. 1, 1990. Michael F. Mullin succeeded Ackmann as senior vice president, Lending Divsion, Fayette Bank and Trust Co. BT Financial Corp. believes the expertise of these gentlemen in their respective capacities will contribute signficantly to the success of their corporation.

Also, in the preliminary stages, is the formation of a trust affiliate, BT Management Trust Co., which will be formed by consolidating the trust departments of the banking affiliates.

The board of directors of BT Financial Corp., on Jan. 24, 1990, declared a cash dividend of $.20 per share to shareholders of record on Feb. 6, 1990, payable March 1, 1990.

BT Financial Corp.'s financial statements and accomplishments for 1989 will be detailed in their annual report, which will be completed and mailed in the near future.

DENVER (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Ideal Basic Industries Inc. (NYSE: IDL) reported today a net loss for 1989 of $24.1 million on revenues of $245 million, including income from discontinued operations of $1.7 million and an accounting change gain related to deferred income tax accounting of $14.4 million. In 1988, net income of $5.5 million, on revenues of $227.8 million, included income from discontinued operations of $9.7 million and an accounting change related to spare parts inventories of $15.6 million.

The increase in revenues results largely from a 356,000 ton increase in cement shipments partially offset by a $1.10 per ton decline in the average price of cement sold. Results for 1989 were also adversely affected by an increase in the per ton cement cost of sales, largely at the Mobile, Ala. plant.

Ideal also reported that in late January, 1990 a Federal District Court in Muskogee, Okla. overturned a $14 million jury verdict against the company in a 1989 malicious prosecution case. In response to post-trial motions filed by Ideal, the Court granted Ideal's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. To aid in possible appellate review, the Court also stated that even if it had not entered judgment for Ideal, it would have granted Ideal's motion for a new trial. Although the ultimate outcome of this matter connot be predicted with certainty, Ideal now believes, after consultation with counsel, that this action will not have a material adverse effect on the company's financial statements.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Granges Inc. announced today that, based on its positive assessment of the anticipated outcome of the $17.6 million lawsuit against Granges by Abermin Corporation over its interest in the Tartan Mine near Flin Flon, Manitoba, Granges will be proceeding to virgorously defend the claim at the trial which has been set for Nov. 5, 1990, in the Supreme Court of British Columbia.

Abermin Corporation, Granges' joint venture partner in the Tartan Mine, is seeking rescission of the joint venture agreement, the return of approximately $17.6 million which it claims to have paid Granges under the agreement, and damages. Granges has filed a defense and counterclaim denying any liability to Abermin and seeking a declaration that the participating interest of Abermin has been reduced in the manner calculated by Granges and the participating interest of Granges correspondingly increased, or alternatively, judgement in the amount of Abermin's unpaid share of costs and expenses.

In June 1989, Abermin obtained a garnishing order before judgement pursuant to which $17.6 million was attached and is now deposited in an interest-bearing trust account beneficially owned by Granges. Granges has filed an application to set aside the garnishing order, but no date for the hearing of that application will be set down pending the completion of examinations for discovery. Granges has previously announced that the garnishing order does not have a material effect on the company's operations as the funds are not required for operations, but does restrict the availability of funds for further investments or acquisitions.

AURORA, CO. (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Pak Mail Centers of America Inc. announced today a loss of approximately $940,000 for the fiscal year ended Nov. 30, 1989, including a one-time charge of approximately $530,000 relating to the restructuring of operations to improve the competitiveness and efficiency of operational and frenchising efforts following the company's recent change of ownership. In addition, the company repurchased certain area franchise rights to achieve more effective market penetration and development, the net effect of which reduced earnings by approximately $140,000.

The restructuring of operations provides a new direction for the company and was made possible when Pak Mail Holdings L.P. became a substantial shareholder in September 1989. Pak Mail Holdings L.P. has invested $2,200,000 through Nov. 30, 1989 and anticipates investing up to an additional $2,750,000 in the company, thus providing the financial IRVINE, CA (FEB. 9) PR NEWSWIRE - Helionetics Inc. (NASDAQ: HLXC) announced today that its preliminary and unaudited review of the year and fourth quarter results for the period ended Dec. 31, 1989 shows that they year was profitable despite a disappointing and unanticipated loss in the fourth quarter following three consecutive profitable quarters in 1989.

The unaudited results reflect profits for 1989 were approximately $270,000 compared to a loss of $695,000 for the prior year. The 1989 fourth quarter loss was approximately $400,000. Revenues for 1989 were over $10 million, approximately twice the prior year revenues of $5,168,900.

According to Charles W. Jobbins, chairman and chief executive officer, the fourth quarter loss was attributable, in large part, to less than expected revenues of the company's Xcell subsidiary, as well as to the heavy winter storms on the East Coast, causing delayed delivery and installation of equipment by the company's Computer Power Products division.

Jobbins stated that the company is consolidating its operations and reducing its corporate staff to implement the company's anticipated profitable growth in 1990.

The company's audited results for 1989 should be available in March 1990.

VIENNA (FEB. 9) UPI - NATO, aiming to remove obstacles to an agreement on conventional arms reductions, unveiled concessions to the Warsaw Pact on levels of troops, combat aircraft and tanks in Europe.

The proposals, announced Thursday during two working sessions of the Conventional Forces in Europe talks in Vienna, bring NATO closer to the Warsaw Pact's stance on several issues that have stalled the talks for a month.

''We have made moves in their direction,'' said a U.S. official close to the Vienna talks.

A senior NATO offical in Brussels, Belgium, said the proposals were ''designed to introduce compromise elements and allow us to reach a deal quickly.'' Both sides have been pushing for a treaty on conventional forces reductions by year's end.

The U.S. official in Vienna said the East's initial reaction was ''positive,'' but said the proposals are ''very complex, and they will have to study them.''

A formal response could come as early as next week when negotiators from 23 countries meet in Ottawa for the Open Skies talks, the official said.

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner and President Bush will discuss the Conventional Forces in Europe, or CFE, talks and developments in Eastern Europe at Camp David near Washington this weekend, it was announced.

The new NATO proposal incorporates Bush's call last week for cutting U.S. and Soviet troop levels from 275,000 to 195,000, but it also adds Denmark and Hungary to the central European zone to which the ceilings apply.

NATO also proposed a new ceiling on combat aircraft of 4,700 for each side down from 5,700 proposed July 13 by NATO.

In addition, the Western alliance shifted its stand on attack helicopters. The ceiling of 1,900 remains unchanged, but in a concession addressing ''Soviet preoccupations in the helicopter field,'' the Warsaw Pact will be permitted to disarm, rather than destroy, many of its attack-and-support helicopters, the NATO official in Brussels said.

NATO did not propose a further lowering in the levels of tanks (20,000 each) and armored combat vehicles (30,000 each), but conceded to Warsaw Pact definitions for the two types of vehicles.

NATO hopes to quickly conclude an agreement in the Conventional Forces in Europe talks, which began in Vienna last March, with an eye toward ratification at a proposed 35-nation summit on Europe's future this fall, the NATO official in Brussels said.

Such a summit could also prepare a 1992 follow-up to the 1975 Helsinki Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, but ''it will not substitute for it,'' the official said.

The Open Skies conference, initially called to discuss reconnaissance flights, has quickly grown in importance in recent events. Along with providing a forum for Warsaw Pact reaction to the latest Conventional Forces in Europe proposal, the meeting will allow U.S. Secretary of State James Baker an opportunity to brief NATO allies on his trip to Moscow.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - President Bush wrapped up a three-day mission to defend his military budget by saying it was good the trip coincided with radical change in the Soviet Union because it sends ''a clear message'' the United States, though supportive, will remain wary.

At the end of the grueling three days of stumping - which took him to a war training center in Southern California, a nuclear weapons lab in the San Francisco Bay Area and the Strategic Air Command Center in Nebraska - Bush disputed charges that his trip to military facilities was unfortunate while the Communist Party leadership surrendered its historic monopoly on power in the Soviet Union.

''It sends a clear message that I am behind a sensible defense program and I'll stay behind it,'' he told reporters on his return to Washington Thursday night.

And just days after he had quipped ''And now, back to war,'' the president said, ''I think that's a stabilizing message, not a militant message. That's why I think the timing happened to be fortuitous.''

Earlier Thursday at Offutt Air Force Base, Neb., the president used an updated ''red phone'' - which would be used to launch a global nuclear attack - to tell U.S. forces on alert that ''historical changes'' in the Soviet Union have not affected their mission.

From the nerve center of the nation's ultimate defense - a reinforced concrete- and steel-encased command post 40 feet below Strategic Air Command headquarters - Bush called for a continued strong U.S. defense posture, arguing that efforts to modernize the nation's nuclear forces must continue despite eased East-West relations.

But Bush took to the road to defend his proposed $306 billion military budget for fiscal year 1991 amid calls that the dwindling tensions in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union should mean quick savings at home.

From Capitol Hill on Thursday came continuing complaints from Democrats that such a ''peace dividend'' is even more in order now that Gorbachev and the Communist leadership have taken the first steps toward pluralism.

''With freedom ready to ring from the walls of the Kremlin to the streets of Prague ... why is President Bush in Nebraska beating plowshares into swords?'' asked Rep. Dick Gephardt, D-Mo.

Bush made the eye-catching journey to press his case that political change Gorbachev, has not ended 45 years of nuclear rivalry.

Upon his return to Washington, Bush reflected on his message, saying: ''I think the message is one of stability, of reasonableness.''

''I'm not going to miss an opportunity in arms control, but we're going to keep a strong defense,'' the president pledged anew.

Bush has included billions of dollars in his 1991 defense budget to continue a Reagan-era strategic modernization effort that has placed new generations of bombers, missiles and submarines into service.

Among the requests: $5.5 billion for the B-2 stealth bomber, $4.5 billion for the ''Star Wars'' anti-missile program, $3.2 billion for the Trident submarine and Trident 2 missile, $2.8 billion for MX missile redeployment and $202 million for a new single-warhead Midgetman missile.

However, such doubt-ridden weapons as the B-2 and mobile MX have become prime targets for congressional budget-cutters convinced of a waning Soviet threat.

''We still live in a time of uncertainty,'' Bush said earlier in the day. ''So as we push for a major new arms agreement with the Soviets to increase stability, we will continue to modernize strategic forces.''

Though Bush was forced to respond to the significant developments in the Soviet Union this week, he noted his ''words of support for the change that's taking place. So I hope that message comes through in that balanced way.''

But on Tuesday, when Gorbachev proposed surrendering a seven-decade communist monopoly on power, Bush was watching World War III played out by U.S. troops staging a mock battle against Soviet bloc invaders at a combat training center in the Mojave Desert.

On Wednesday, when Communist Party leaders in Moscow took a landmark step toward a multiparty system, he was pitching the ''Star Wars'' anti-missile program conceived in the ''evil empire'' days of the Reagan administration.

LISBON, PORTUGAL (FEB. 9) UPI - Brazil's president-elect, Fernando Collor de Mello, weathering protests over his nation's endangered Amazon rain forests, arrived in Lisbon for meetings with government leaders.

Collor, who will end his worldwide tour with a stop in Spain, was welcomed late Thursday at Portela International airport by President Mario Soares.

Along with meeting Soares, Collor planned talks Friday with Prime Minister Anibal Cavaco Silva and an address to the parliament.

In London Thursday, Collor met with officials, businessmen and royalty to discuss Brazil's debt and the growing international outcry over the destruction of Brazil's Amazon rain forests.

Collor, who was elected president Dec. 17 and takes office March 15, met Prince Charles and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher during his 24-hour visit to the British capital.

The 40-year-old Collor was the target of protests in Britain over the decimation of the Amazon rain forests and his nation's treatment of the 9,000 remaining members of the Yanomami tribe. They are threatened with extinction by advancing gold prospectors.

About 50 members of Parliament signed a petition expressing their concern on the issues. Activists for a group named Survival International clustered outside Brazil's embassy in London's plush West End, distributing leaflets and brandishing placards demanding protection for the Yanomami Indians.

Collor, in a lunchtime speech delivered to leading businessmen, said, ''I am well aware of the far-reaching consequences of this ecological drama that is unfolding.''

''This is a task for a generation, not a government ... I will endeavor to combat the political, ideological and even electoral exploitation of this issue,'' he said.

His speech otherwise dealt with the need to cure ''the immorality of hunger, unemployment, illiteracy, ecological devastation and poverty'' in Brazil.

Delegation officials said his talks with British officials largely focused on ways to allow Brasilia to divert more resources for enviornmental protection by easing its $115 billion external debt, the Third World's largest.

During his hour-long meeting with Thatcher ''the talks concentrated mostly on the Brazilian economy, with Mr. Collor outlining his proposals for tackling the problems,'' said an official at 10 Downing Street, Thatcher's official residence.

''There was some discussion of the environment, including rain forests, with the president-elect stressing the importance he attached to these issues,'' the official said, adding that the problem of illegal drugs was also discussed.

Officials at Kensington Palace would not divulge any details of Collor's 30-minute private meeting with Prince Charles, but the heir to Britain's throne is a strong supporter of conservation projects.

Prince Charles Tuesday criticized Brazil and Malaysia for ''waging a dreadful pattern of collective genocide'' against inhabitants of their rain forests, and proposed an international protection convention.

''The genetic reservoir of plant and animal life sharing our world provides us with the most perfect survival kit imaginable as we face the unknown challenges of the future,'' the prince said.

Collor's global journey also has taken him to the United States, Japan, the Soviet Union, West Germany, Italy, France and Britain.

NEW YORK (FEB. 9) UPI - CBS essayist Andy Rooney vehemently denied that he made racist remarks in an interview but accepted a three-month suspension in hopes the ''know-nothing statement'' attributed to him would not end his career.

The droll ''60 Minutes'' commentator and best-selling author was suspended Thursday by CBS News president David Burke following an interview with a homosexual publication in which he was quoted as saying black people ''watered down'' their genes because the less intelligent have the most children.

''I did not say, nor would I ever have thought, that 'blacks have watered down their genes,''' Rooney said in a statement released by his office. ''It is a know-nothing statement which I abhor.''

''I am a reporter and essayist who has established his credibility over a period of more than 40 years,'' he said. ''People know what I think. I do not think blacks are inferior.

Rooney's future after the three months was still in question.

''I have discussed with Andy Rooney the statements attributed to him,'' Burke said. ''I have made it clear that CBS News cannot tolerate such remarks, or anything that approximates such comments, since they in no way reflect the views of this organization.

''I have suspended Mr. Rooney without pay for three months. At the end of that time, we will have further discussions about his future association with CBS News,'' Burke said.

Burke said Rooney ''has expressed his dismay that the values of CBS news have been called into question and offers his deepest apologies to any in our society who were given offense.''

''I accepted his offer of suspension rather than to permanently end my career at CBS,'' Rooney said in Friday's editions of the New York Daily News. ''I'd like to think my temporary departure would cause '60 Minutes' ratings to plummet, but the show is too good without me for that to happen.''

The head of the NAACP termed the reported comments ''racist'' and''mean-spirited.''

They were contained in an interview with The Advocate, a biweekly homosexual newspaper based in Los Angeles.

The Advocate's New York correspondent, Chris Bull, said Rooney talked with him for about 20 minutes in a telephone interview in mid-January.

''I've believed all along that most people are born with equal intelligence, but blacks have watered down their genes because the less intelligent ones are the ones that have the most children,'' Bull quoted Rooney as saying.

''They drop out of school early, do drugs and get pregnant,'' he reportedly said.

Bull said he did not make a tape recording of the conversation.

Rooney told the Daily News Wednesday, ''I'm not a racist,'' and dismissed the comments attributed to him as ''tacky.''

However, he added, ''I wouldn't be surprised if I got fired.''

It was the second racist flap CBS has found itself in two years.

In January 1988, CBS fired Jimmy ''the Greek'' Snyder as a commentator on ''The NFL Today'' show after he told an interviewer that blacks were better athletes than whites because they were ''bred to be that way'' during the days of slavery.

''I am certainly hopeful that Mr. Rooney did not make those statements,'' said NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks in a phone call from Baltimore.

''If indeed he made those statements, they are racist, mean-spirited, ignorant and ill-formed, and I would certainly hope that CBS would take appropriate action,'' he said.

Rooney's comments were slated to appear in the Feb. 27 issue of The Advocate, which claims a circulation of about 100,000.

Rooney told the News that in his interview with the Advocate reporter he said people with less education tended to have children who also tended to be undereducated.

He said that while that tends to be true of blacks, he did not believe it was a factor of race.

''Anyone who knows me knows I'm not racist,'' he said.

In the interview with the Advocate, Rooney also was quoted as saying he believes homosexuality has ''something to do with genes.''

He was harshly criticized by the homosexual community following comments perceived as anti-gay made during a CBS special called ''The Year with Andy Rooney'' that was broadcast Dec. 28.

On that program, Rooney said people recognized in 1989 that many self-induced ills, such as ''too much alcohol, too much food, drugs, homosexual unions, cigarettes ... (are) all known to lead quite often to premature death.''

Gay activists criticized Rooney for blaming homosexuals for AIDS and labeling gay relationships as a vice comparable to alcoholism or drug addiction.

(FEB. 9) UPI - Kansas State successfully used a slow tempo and aggressive defense Thursday night to register their second major upset of a Top 3 conference foe.

Steve Henson, held scoreless in the first half, scored all 18 of his points in the final 14:15 to lift the Wildcats to a 65-58 Big Eight victory over top-ranked Misouri.

''The fact that we didn't shoot the ball well and Missouri didn't shoot the ball well indicates both teams played good defense,'' Kansas State Coach Lon Kruger said. ''That's what we were hoping for.

''In the second half, our defense picked up and we got a good run at the right time. All of our big people did a good job.''

Three weeks ago, Kansas State used the same philosophy to register a 66-51 triumph over Oklahoma, at the time ranked third in the nation.

Kansas State is the best defensive team in the league, allowing just 67.1 points a game.

Against Missouri, aggression in the key helped the Wildcats hold Doug Smith to just nine shots, hitting three. The rest of the team fared worse, going 17 of 59 from the floor.

The decision snapped a 13-game winning streak for Missouri, 21-2, and gave the Tigers their first Big Eight loss in eight Big Eight games. Missouri owned the top spot in the UPI ratings for the last three weeks before suffering its first loss since a December game with No. 13 Illinois.

''We didn't get good play, but give them a lot of credit,'' Missouri Coach Norm Stewart said. ''We had the ballgame and even though we weren't playing very well, I still thought we had a chance to win.

''They just kept playing and playing harder and got a break and they got hold of it. It was their ballgame.''

Henson had even more trouble than Missouri did in the first half, missing all six of his shots. He was scoreless until given a basket on a goaltending call.

''In the first half, I continued struggling,'' Henson said. ''A few of those shots in the first half weren't shot with a lot of confidence. But whatever I lost in the first half, I got it back in the second.

''When we weren't scoring, we held them on their end. We just tried to take away their strengths. We at least needed to contest every shot.''

Missouri got 18 points from Anthony Peeler, while Smith finished with 13.

At Champaign, Ill., junior Marcus Liberty scored a career-high 33 points to power Illinois over Minnesota. The Fighting Illini never trailed while avenging a loss to the Gophers on Jan. 6. Minnesota threatened only in the first half after rallying from 14 points down.

At Louisville, Ky., Jerome Harmon scored 19 points and LaBradford Smith added 17 points and 9 assists to lift Louisville past South Carolina. Louisville placed six players in double figures. South Carolina played without leading scorer Jo Jo English, but replacement Eric Sykes scored 30 points.

At Fairfield, Conn., Doug Overton scored 24 points and Lionel Simmons added 22 points and 13 rebounds to lead LaSalle over Fairfield. Overton hit on 9 of 12 shots from the field, including all four from three-point range, and Simmons blocked six shots for the Explorers. Fairfield was led by Drew Henderson's 17 points.

At Tempe, Ariz., Don MacLean scored 23 points and freshman Tracy Murray and Darrick Martin added 17 apiece to lead UCLA over Arizona State. UCLA has won 24 of 33 meetings against Arizona State. The loss also snapped the Sun Devils' three-game winning streak.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (FEB. 9) UPI - Foreign Minister Roelof ''Pik'' Botha appealed to all his ''black brothers'' to accept the white minority government's commitment to ''dismantle apartheid.''

Botha's conciliatory comments, made Thursday during an interview with ABC-TV's ''Nightline'' news show, came amid growing anticipation of the release of jailed black leader Nelson Mandela, announced last week by President Frederik de Klerk along with numerous racial reforms.

Botha, in the ABC interview broadcast in the United States, said, ''We need a readiness in our minds, in our hearts, to accept the sincerity of each other.''

''I appeal to the ANC (African National Congress) ... to all my other black brothers and friends - accept my government's commitment that we will eradicate and dismantle apartheid,'' the foreign minister said. ''We do stand ready together with you to build a new South Africa.''

The nation's racial separation policy of apartheid has been in force since 1948 with the election of Daniel Malan's National Party.

De Klerk last Friday announced sweeping racial reforms that included lifting a 30-year ban on the ANC and restrictions on more than 30 other anti-apartheid organizations.

He also said that Mandela, convicted in 1964 of participating in sabotage against the government, would be freed soon after more than 27 years in jail, but there was no indication when he would be released.

Mandela and officials of other anti-apartheid movements applauded de Klerk's moves but said they fell short of creating a climate conducive to the power-sharing negotiations he proposed in a bid to end the country's racial conflict.

Earlier Thursday, police fired tear gas into a crowd of 2,000 youths at a black township and charged protesters outside the British consulate, cracking down on demonstrations against a boycott-busting tour of South Africa by English cricket players.

The skirmishes erupted as Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok defended de Klerk's refusal to lift a 43-month-old state of emergency in its entirety, citing a ''politically volatile situation still existing among certain radical fringes on all sides of the spectrum.''

Vlok also denounced a Conservative Party threat to call a two-day work stoppage by segregationists to protest de Klerk's racial reform program. He said white extremists threatened to kill Mandela on his release from prison.

American civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, on a 10-day tour of the country, visited squatter settlements in the black satellite city of Soweto Thursday and urged de Klerk to ''go all the way'' and abolish more than four decades of apartheid rule.

SOWETO, SOUTH AFRICA (FEB. 9) UPI - Civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, while touring the black satellite city of Soweto, compared his years as a young black in the American South to living under apartheid.

Jackson, whose first trip to South Africa since 1979 follows President Frederik de Klerk's announcement of sweeping racial reforms, spoke to about 1,000 teachers Thursday at Soweto's Funda (Learn) College, who chanted ''Viva Jesse Jackson'' and ''ANC, ANC'' for the African National Congress.

''As an African American, when I grew up in Greenville, South Carolina, we lived under the laws of apartheid,'' said Jackson. ''We had to go to the back of the bus, we could not use the same water fountains as whites ... the same bathrooms.

''I went to jail for trying to use a library. So we've known jail,'' Jackson said.

''Amandla (power),'' Jackson called at the end of his address, using the cry of militant black nationalists, to receive the answering ''awethu (to the people)'' from his audience.

Jackson and his entourage drove through light rain under a pall of smog caused by Soweto's many coal and wood cookers to a shack in one of the poorer quarters checkered with patches of maize.

The convoy, which included the cars of up to 100 journalists, ignored all traffic signals on its way past astonished onlookers in the city of 2 million blacks.

The two-time presidential candidate said de Klerk's reform package unveiled last Friday was ''marvelous'' but pointed out that black nationalist Nelson Mandela was still in prison and a 43-month-old state of emergency was still partially in place.

''(De Klerk) offered hope to those who have been disenfranchised, hope by unbanning various organizations, hope by repealing restrictions on the press, hope in the release of political prisoners even it it affects only 5 percent, and hope for the release of Nelson Mandela,'' said Jackson, on a 1O-day tour of the nation as a guest of the South African Council of Churches.

Mandela, jailed since 1962 and convicted of acts of sabotage against the government in 1964, is being held in a suburban-style house on the grounds of the minimum-security prison in Paarl, set in the Cape wine-growing region.

De Klerk lifted a 30-year ban on the ANC, suspended judicial executions, lifted restrictions on more than 370 activists and eased the state of emergency in a bid to lure black leaders to the negotiating table and persuade the ANC to publicly abandon its guerrilla war tactics.

Since 1961, a year after its banning, the ANC has waged a limited guerrilla war of sporadic bombings and sabotage that climaxed in 1988 with numerous bombings in white urban areas.

(FEB. 9) UPI - Leading comfortably in the fourth quarter, the only thing standing between the New York Knicks and a fifth straight victory Thursday night was 7 feet, 7 inches tall.

The Knicks were leading 107-91 with 8:53 to play when Trent Tucker buried the second of two straight three-pointers, but had to hold on as the Warriors, led by the shot blocking of 7-foot-7 Manute Bol, put on a furious rally.

Two baskets by Sharunas Marciulionis and a free throw by Winston Garland brought the Warriors to within 107-96 and Bol went to work.

On the next three New York possessions, Bol blocked inside shots by Eddie Lee Wilkins, Kenny Walker and Patrick Ewing, helping the Warriors cut the deficit to seven and leaving New York Coach Stu Jackson shaking his head.

''It's so tough when you've got a guy 7-7 back there, where you're constantly getting good shots and you know that at the last second you've got to dunk or something or the guy blocks it,'' said Jackson after the Knicks held on to win 122-118. ''There are some things in this game that defy x's and o's and one of them's Manute Bol.''

Ewing, who finished with 22 points and five blocks, sank two free throws for a 111-105 New York lead before Mitch Richmond, who finished with 27 points, nailed a three-pointer from the top of the key to make it 111-108 with 2:30 remaining.

But the Knicks were able to hold on, mainly due to the efforts of Ewing, who has carried the team during the season's first half.

After Charles Oakley made two free throws and Gerald Wilkins added a basket, Rod Strickland drove the lane, making Bol commit to him and dished the ball to Ewing who rocked Madison Square Garden with a thunderous dunk.

''I was just taking it to them,'' Ewing said of the dunk. ''It was a very physical game and with a guy like Bol out there, I wanted to make sure the shots went in.''

Terry Teagle's basket brought the Warriors back within five but on New York's next possession, Ewing grabbed a missed shot and slammed it to give the Knicks a seven-point cushion with 48 seconds left.

''I am real proud of our club and the way they fought back and made it a competitive game, '' said Golden State Coach Don Nelson. ''Our rhythm was off but when you play back-to-back games against two physical teams like Philadelphia and New York you know it will takes its toll.''

The Warriors, who stopped Philadelphia's 12-game winning streak Wednesday night, were led by Richmond's 27 points. Chris Mullin added 20 points, Teagle had 16 and Marciulionius had 15. Bol recorded seven blocks, five in the fourth quarter and altered several Knick attempts.

Tucker finished with 14 points for the Knicks, who now lead the Philadelphia 76ers by two full games heading into the All-Star break. Charles Oakley had 17 points and 12 rebounds and Strickland and Mark Jackson had 13 points each.

(FEB. 9) UPI - President Bush says his three-day nationwide mission to defend his military budget sends ''a clear message'' to the Soviet Union that the United States... though it supports Soviet reforms... will remain wary. Bush's tour of the country coincided with a historic meeting of the Soviet Communist party in which the party agreed to release it's monopoly on power.

The winds are NOT co-operating in California. Environmental officials hoped the four-mile-long oil slick left by the puncture of an oil tanker would be blown out to sea. Instead... the first small globs of oil have begun washing up on the sands of Califonia's exclusive Newport Beach. 280-thousand gallons of Alaska crude spilled Wednesday. The oil slick is blamed for killing at least 20 sea birds.

A Soviet newspaper reports a sudden deterioration in the security situation in Soviet Azerbaijan. Four out of five factories reportedly are on strike and people are crossing the Azerbaijan border with Iran every day. The newspaper reports that the sudden downturn in the situation follows several days of relative calm three weeks after Soviet troops moved in.

Soviet and Czechoslovakian negotiators have broken off talks aimed at withdrawing Soviet troops from Czechoslovakia. The Czech news agency reports negotiations reached ''a deadlock'' when the Soviets refused to withdraw all 80-thousand troops by the end of this year. Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry spokesman Lubos Dobrovsky criticizes the Soviets for dragging their feet in the negotiations.

Don't look for women to be on the front lines of U-S armed combat any time soon. Three senior U-S military commanders went before the Senate Armed Services Committee today to argue against putting women in front-line combat units. One of the three commanders was General Maxwell Thurman. He commanded the Panamanian invasion... where women in a military police company exchanged fire with Panamanian forces loyal to General Manuel Noriega.

A company that promotes designer clothes for women weighing as much as one-thousand pounds is suing a Washington, D-C, T-V station that allegedly refused to broadcast their ads because the models were- quote- ''too fat.'' Walter Hudson Ventures Incorporated is asking three-point-five-Million dollars from Washington's Fox Broadcasting affiliate. Station officials deny the charges.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - While the United States and Colombia have resolved to work together in combating the drug trade, citizens of both countries disagree fundamentally on how that should be done, a poll showed Friday.

The survey conducted for The Washington Post and ABC News revealed strong distrust of U.S. motives in the drug battle among a majority of Colombians intensified by the U.S. invasion of Panama in December.

Two-thirds of the Colombians questioned said their superpower partner was not ''a real friend'' and felt the United States was ''using the drug problem as a way to exercise control over the Colombian government.'' More than half said the United States should butt out of what they considered an internal matter.

At the same time, a majority of Americans questioned Colombia's willingness to root out the billion-dollar cocaine trade. Three out of four said the Latin American country could not beat the drug cartels without U.S. help and 70 percent said the Colombian government was losing the drug battle.

The two nations agreed, however, that America's insatiable appetite for drugs is most responsible for the international drug trade. Seventy-nine percent of Americans and 80 percent of Colombians agreed with the statement.

Among other findings:

-Three out of four Americans favor sending warships off the coast of Colombia to intercept drug smugglers, while eight of 10 Colombians are opposed to such a move;

-55 percent of Americans favor sending troops to Colombia to help that country's military capture drug traffickers; 77 percent of Colombians opposed the United States sending troops;

-51 percent of Americans and 57 percent of Colombians think the United States should provide financial aid to strengthen the police and judicial system in Colombia.

The survey was conducted to measure attitudes in both countries a week before President Bush, Colombian President Virgilio Barco and other world leaders meet for a drug summit in Cartagena, Colombia.

The survey was conducted in the United States by Chilton Research of Radnor, Pa., and in Colombia by Penn and Schoen Associates, a New York polling firm with extensive experience in Colombia and other South American countries.

The organizations interviewed 1,022 randomly selected adults in Colombia and 1,008 in the United States. The margin of error in both polls is plus or minus 4 percentage points.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (FEB. 9) UPI - The legislature voted to extend martial law in the war-torn country for the fourth consecutive month but reinstated some constitutional guarantees.

''With 51 votes in favor and seven abstentions, extension of the state of siege was approved for another month,'' said a spokesman for the Legislative Assembly who asked not to be identified. He said no one voted against the measure Thursday.

The state of siege was first imposed Nov. 12 in the midst of a fierce urban offensive launched by rebels of the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN.

The congressional spokesman said the extension relaxed the suspension of the freedom of association and removed suspensions of the right to move about the country and the right to freedom of speech.

Top military officials said that although the situation has calmed considerably in El Salvador since the November offensive, they asked that the state of siege be extended because of the threat of new large-scale guerrilla attacks.

The FMLN has waged a decade of guerrilla insurgency against El Salvador's government.

More that 72,000 people, most of them civilians, have been killed in the conflict.

KAMPALA, Uganda (FEB. 9) UPI - Uganda, following last week's arrest of two journalists on charges of defaming Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, has suspended all work permits for foreign reporters effective Friday.

Foreign journalists will be required to reapply for accreditation, Information Minister Ben Otto said in a statement released late Thursday.

The move followed last week's arrest of two Ugandan journalists who later were charged with defaming Kaunda and asking defamatory questions at a news conference.

Otto said the suspension of work permits was designed to streamline the regulation of journalism in Uganda, which requires all journalists to receive proper accreditation for any visit regardless of length.

Many journalists were not operating with proper accreditation, he said.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - The State Department issued its second terrorist alert in three months, warning American travelers about possible attacks against U.S. interests in Western Europe within the next few days.

State Department spokesman John Boucher noted Thursday that ''last December, the State Department issued a threat advisory on the high level of activity by Hezbollah operations in Western Europe.''

''That threat continues and the U.S. government is deeply concerned that terrorists may now be planning an operation against U.S. interests in Western Europe, which may be timed for on or about Feb. 11,'' he said.

Feb. 11 is the 11th anniversary of Iran's Islamic revolution, in which the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini came to power, setting off a decade of hostile relations with the United states and the spread of militant Islamic fundamentalism.

From its U.N. mission in New York, Iran branded the warning of an imminent action by Hezbollah as ''baseless,'' Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported Friday.

''The statement issued by Iran's U.N. mission considered these charges as vain attempts to discredit the Islamic revolution,'' IRNA said. ''The U.S. authorities know fully well that the allegations have no foundation whatsoever in reality.''

Boucher said the department does ''not have specific information about the nature of the terrorist operation or its target. If further credible and specific information on this threat develops, the Department of State will issue additional alerts to travelers and other concerned parties.''

Last December's State Department warning came a year after 270 people were killed when Pan Am Flight 103 exploded over Lockerbie, Scotland, on a flight from West Germany to New York Dec. 21, 1988. No one aboard the Boeing 747 survived and the death toll included 11 on the ground.

Investigators have determined that the blast was caused by a bomb.

Asked if the department is advising Americans to stay away from Western Europe, Boucher said, ''No, we're not.''

''We are passing on information that we think should be brought to the attention of the public. ... But we are not issuing a travel advisory for Western Europe,'' he said.

MANILA, Philippines (FEB. 9) UPI - Troops Friday arrested a leader of the bloody coup attempt in December who had been chief security officer for Vice President Salvador Laurel, officials said.

Army Maj. Jose Gamos, who carried a bounty of $24,000 for his apprehension was captured moments after he got out of a taxi at a supermarket in suburban Paranaque town, said constabulary chief Maj. Gen. Ramon Montano.

Montano said a civilian informer set the trap for Gamos, who was unarmed and surrendered without incident. The unnamed civilian will get the bounty Montano said.

Gamos was the sixth to be captured from a list of 35 officers being hunted for leading the Dec. 1-9 coup attempt, the sixth and gravest challenge in President Corazon Aquino's almost four years as president.

Topping the list of wanted mutineers was army Col. Gregorio ''Gringo'' Honasan. The military is offering a reward of $227,000 for his capture.

Bounties ranging from $4,700 to $47,000 are being offered for the capture of each of those in the list.

Montano said Gamos served as Laurel's chief security officer until he disappeared following the rebellion that left 119 people dead and more than 500 wounded. Aquino has implicated Laurel in the insurrection, although no formal charges have been brought against him.

Laurel has denied the accusation.

Retired Maj. Gen. Cesar Tapia, Laurel's military security adviser, confirmed Montano's report. But Tapia said in a statement that Gamos had not reported to Laurel since he went on leave Nov. 21.

Laurel resigned as foreign secretary in September 1987, charging Aquino with mishandling the 20-year insurgency waged by the 23,000-strong communist New People's Army.

Nearly 2,000 officers and soldiers either surrendered or were captured after the rebellion collapsed in December, but some 1,000 mutineers remained at large and were threatening to regroup and mount another uprising.

SEOUL, South Korea (FEB. 9) UPI - Ranking members of the ruling Democratic Justice Party and two former opposition groups officially merged their parties Friday, forming a moderate ruling political force called the Democratic Liberal Party.

A total of 105 delegates from the three parties took part in the merger meeting, approving the federation and unanimously electing President Roh Tae-woo and former opposition leaders Kim Young-sam and Kim Jong-pil as co-leaders of the party.

The meeting was part of formalities for the merger initially agreed to by Roh and the two Kims at a meeting Jan. 22. The merger left Kim Dae Jung's Party for Peace and Democracy as the only opposition party.

The ruling party subscribes to moderate, middle-of-the road democracy. Controlling 216 of the 299 parliamentary seats, it has enough votes to amend the constitution.

MOSCOW (FEB. 9) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev met Friday to discuss cuts in strategic arms and conventional forces.

Gorbachev was in a lively, garrulous mood as he and Baker met in the ornate St. Katharines office in the Kremlin. Asked by American reporters about U.S. troop cut proposals, Gorbachev said they would be given ''very serious consideration'' and, he added, ''It would be good if we can cooperate, as we are doing now.''

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and Baker were reported Thursday by Soviet and American officials to have made progress on arms control technical issues and the future of Afghanistan, but they disagreed on Soviet arms shipments of jets to Cuba.

U.S. officials said the talks with Shevardnadze were pleasant but inconclusive, but they expected some firm answers Friday from Gorbachev.

The talks are meant to lay the groundwork for the next superpower summit, scheduled for June in Washington.

One American official said, ''We threw a big wad of stuff at them and some will have to be checked out with their technical people. It's pretty complex.''

The Soviet news agency Tass quoted Shevardnadze as describing the talks as ''very serious negotiations, which are being held in a good, businesslike manner.''

U.S. officials said Baker offered new ideas in moving the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks closer to completion, and the Soviets offered a ''clarification'' that says they will sign a START treaty even if there is continued disagreement about the U.S. ''Star Wars'' program and its relationship to offensive arms control.

Baker put forward, the officials said, new proposals for counting and limiting air-launched cruise missiles and ''non-deployed'' missiles, which are ready to use but are not stored with the launchers.

In addition, there was a new formula for making sure data from missile launches can be read by the other countrys monitors.

On conventional forces, the U.S. offered two proposals to define tanks and combat aircraft, a necessary step in deciding which ones will be scrapped and which will be permitted.

Asked whether U.S. troops should be withdrawn from West Germany, Gorbachev said Friday, ''Let me talk to the secretary (Baker) about this.''

American officials said Baker raised the issue of the Soviet shipment of advanced MiG-29 fighters to Cuba. Baker objected to the introduction of such sophisticated weapons into the Western hemisphere by the Soviets but Shevardnadze, according to the Americans present at the talks, responded that the Soviets had other views and commitments.

Gorbachev, wearing a gray suit and sporting a Communist Party lapel pin, was asked by a reporter if he would stand as a communist in multiparty elections. He smiled slightly and said, ''Let's wait and see.''

On Saturday, Baker is to testify before the Supreme Soviet International Relations Committee, the equivalent of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the first time a U.S. official has been invited to appear before the panel.

MOSCOW (FEB. 9) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Friday left open the question of whether he would run as a communist in the nation's first multiparty presidential elections.

Before meeting Secretary of State James Baker, an ebullient Gorbachev was asked by reporters about landmark reforms passed this week by the three-day Communist Party plenum.

The plenum called for a multiparty system with a presidential system, and Gorbachev was asked whether he would contend for election as a communist in such elections.

''Let us wait and see,'' said a smiling Gorbachev, who is president and head of the 18 million-member Soviet Communist Party.

In Hungary, East Germany, Poland and Romania, the Communist Party renamed itself after reforms unleashed by Gorbachev's hands-off policy paved the way for multiparty systems. But the Soviet party is Gorbachev's power base.

Gorbachev, the party's general secretary, said he began mapping the political reform process as soon as he came to power in March 1985.

''It would be wrong for anyone to think that it started in the last few days,'' Gorbachev said. ''It has has been under way since 1985.''

Gorbachev, who has introduced the first partly free democratic elections and a real parliament, promised the new presidential and multiparty reforms without a guaranteed leading role for the communists will not be the final innovations.

''Once we have solidified this phase, we will move further,'' he said.

In interviews Thursday, the influential editor of Pravda, Ivan Frolov, and maverick politician Boris Yeltsin, cast doubts the Communist Party would remain united.

Yeltsin, interviewed in Moscow by CBS news, suggested Thursday that Gorbachev had not gone far enough with his proposed democratization of the Soviet Union.

''If we cannot feed the people right now, if we cannot produce the clothing, if we cannot develop our people spiritually, it doesn't matter what slogans we shout,'' he said. ''The people will never respond.''

''The time for half-measures and compromises is over,'' he said. ''We are sitting on a critical mass, on the top of a volcano, and within a certain period of time, neither Gorbachev nor any other man may be able to lead.''

Frolov said a group of radical communists led by Yuri Afanasiev, Yeltsin and prominent legislators would decide Saturday whether to split off and form a new party.

Frolov confirmed to reporters that Yeltsin was the only member of the 249-member Central Commitee who voted against the reform document in a possible bid to distance himself from the communists and position himself for the leadership of the new party.

Frolov was asked whether saw the plenum's outcome as a major victory for Gorbachev. ''Yes, I do in general, although I share it without euphoria or excess optimism because life is so complex and contradictory that things can become unhinged at any moment.''

He noted that Afanasiev has already declared that Saturday the radical leftist block would meet to decide whether to create a new party, splitting the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, or CPSU. Afanasiev's radicals call their group CPSU Democratic Platform.

''If a new party is created on the basis of the CPSU Democratic Platform, it means there will be a split in the party,'' Frolov said. ''So how can one be optimistic?''

Afanasiev could not immediately be reached for comment, but an independent Moscow journalist with close ties to the new group confirmed that Afanasiev and other leaders of the new group would gather Saturday.

The radical group claims 55,000 members in more than 100 cities across the vast country, the journalist said. ''They think they represent one-third of the party,'' he said.

Although 55,000 communists would be a tiny share of the party's 18 million members, the splitting of the monolith that has enforced single-party rule for 72 years would send a powerful signal to other political movements burgeoning under Gorbachev's reforms.

The break would open the floodgates to a bewildering array of parties ranging from monarchists and anarchists to Christian and Social Democrats.

SRINAGAR, India (FEB. 9) UPI - Authorities reimposed daytime curfews Friday across strife-torn Kashmir, preventing worshipers from celebrating the holiest Islamic prayers of the week and prompting a senior cleric to urge the Moslem world to protest ''this un-Islamic act.''

''I call on all authorities in New Delhi and Srinagar to restore all religious and political rights to the people of Kashmir,'' said Moulvi Mirwaiz Farooq, head priest of the region's main mosque and a political opposition party leader.

In another development, a bomb planted by Moslem separatists exploded aboard an empty state-owned bus at about 8:30 a.m. outside the government-run Tourist Reception Center in the Civil Lines area of Srinagar, a police source said.

He said the bomb destroyed the vehicle but caused no injuries.

Despite the deployment of tens of thousands of troops and police across the Kashmir Valley, authorities have been unable to end near-daily arson, gun and bombing attacks by militants engineering an uprising for independence for the predominantly Moslem region in the western Himalayas.

The independence drive is supported by virtually all 3 million Kashmiri Moslems, who complain of years of neglect and broken political promises by the Hindu-dominated New Delhi government.

Since large-scale violence erupted Jan. 20, more than 100 people have been killed, most of them protesters shot by security forces, according to official sources. The government, which is trying to restrict news coverage of the crisis, puts fatalities in the 30s.

Following days that saw lengthy curfew relaxations, authorities reimposed at 11 a.m. the restrictions on Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state, and other major towns of the Kashmir Valley, with security forces ordered to shoot violators on sight.

A spokesman for the state administration called the curfews ''a precautionary measure.''

The move prevented most worshipers from going to mosques in an apparent bid by authorities to eliminate the possibility of unrest following Friday prayers, the most important of the week for Moslems.

Protests and violence often erupted in the past after Friday prayers as crowds left mosques, which also play crucial roles as separatist sanctuaries and meeting places. Curfews have been in effect in Kashmir every Friday for the past two months, stoking anger and resentment among the Moslem majority.

''I call on all Moslem leaders in the country and in the Islamic world to intervene, and they should raise unitedly their voices against this un-Islamic act, which is tantamount to a denial of the basic right of worship of the people of Kashmir,'' Farooq told United Press International.

''The struggle of the people for their just cause and their sacrifices will succeed,'' added Farooq, who has backed demands for Kashmiri self-determination since separatists in December threatened his life for his calls for moderation.

Despite the curfew, however, some residents of the tiny alleys and twisting streets of downtown Srinagar, 400 miles north of New Delhi, braved security force retribution to walk to local mosques to celebrate prayers.

''We shall force India to leave our lovely Kashmir very soon, God willing '' Abdul Rashid said as he left a small back-alley mosque in the city's Rajbagh area.

''We are risking our lives in reaching the local mosques,'' Mushtaq Ahmad said as he walked quickly through a deserted lane. ''The Indian security personnel will shoot me if they come to know that I am going to offer prayer. But we are ready to die now to achieve our goal of freedom.''

President Bush says he WON'T miss an opportunity for superpower arms control... but he says the United States will maintain a strong defense. Bush made the pledge as he returned to Washington from a three-day trip west to urge congressional passage of his military budget. He says the timing of his trip was good because it coincided with the latest reform in the Soviet system.

Bulgaria has a new all-communist cabinet. Bulgaria's new prime minister, Andrei Lukanov, presented the cabinet after opposition groups rejected his offer to include them in a broad-based national unity government. Lukanov says the communists will push for radical democratic reform... even if they have to do it alone.

Oil is washing up to California's exclusive Newport Beach... 10 miles south of where an oil tanker ruptured. About 300-thousand gallons of oil spilled from the ship. Double and triple booms were set out to protect wetlands. Oil skimmers also are being used. The Coast Guard ruled out the use of dispersants because the chemicals can be toxic and the spill is close to shore.

Senate leaders say they have NOT reached a workable compromise on clean air legislation, despite a week of intense negotiations with presidential aides. But the senators say they still hope to bring a consensus bill to the Senate floor later this month. The senators want a stricter bill than President Bush wants.

ANGELES, PHILIPPINES (FEB. 9) UPI - Police have recaptured a communist guerrilla who was snatched by his comrades in a daring escape last October after he attended a court hearing in connection with the slayings of three U.S. soldiers in 1987, authorities said Friday.

Police arrested Romeo Valencia Thursday night while he was on his way to visit his family in the liberty city of Angeles adjacent to the U.S. Clark

Air Base, 50 miles north of Manila, said Lt. Col. Julius Yarcia, metropolitan police district command chief.

Yarcia said Valencia confirmed intelligence reports the guerrillas operating in the Angeles area planned to resume a campaign to assassinate U.S. soldiers stationed at Clark, the headquarters of the 13th U.S. Air Force manned by some 10,000 servicemen.

''Valencia said local party elements were engaged in recruitment to revitalize combat support groups,'' Yarcia told reporters. He said reorganization of the rebel movement was in full swing in Angeles and the towns of Porac, Mabalacat and Magalang in the vicinity of Clark.

Valencia and another guerrilla, Fernando Suangco, were snatched last Oct. 20 by four guerrillas who shot and wounded their two police guards in a canteen after a hearing of murder charges against them in connection with the slayings of three U.S. soldiers on Oct. 28, 1987.

Killed in that attack were Sgt. Randy Davis, of Portland, Oregon, airman 1st class Steven Faust, of Pasadena, Texas, and Tech. Sgt. Herculana Manganta, a U.S. citizen of Filipino descent.

Valencia was the main suspect in the slaying of Faust, while Suangco was believed to have shot and killed Davis.

Guerrilla leaders have claimed responsibility for the killings, saying the slain U.S. soldiers were participants in the governments total war campaign against the 23,000-strong NPA, which has been battling the Manila government for two decades.

TOKYO (FEB. 9) UPI - Japan, which has reduced its killing of whales in response to international pressure, has more than doubled its consumption of a species of porpoise, a government official said Friday.

''The ban on the hunting of whales has raised the demand for porpoise meat and the catch has increased,'' a marine mammal expert at Japan's Fisheries Agency told United Press International.

In 1988, the year Japan agreed to a ban on commercial whaling, Japanese fishermen more than doubled the catch of Dall's porpoises, said the official said. The porpoises are sold for meat and eaten in the same way as whale meat, cooked or raw.

The Dall's porpoise catch numbered about 15,000 annually before 1988 but jumped to 39,000 in 1988, the official said.

The official, who requested to be unidentified, denied a report that the increased killing threatens to render the species extinct.

Robert Brownell of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service was quoted in Japan's top-selling newspaper on Friday as saying the porpoises are in danger of being wiped out. Continued hunting at the current rate could lead to the extinction of the Dall's porpoises, Brownell was quoted as saying.

''Despite that article, we don't think there is any reason to worry about extinction,'' said the Japanese official.

''According to our estimates there are 2.4 million Dall's porpoises worldwide and U.S. estimates put it at 2.15 million,'' he said. ''Considering those figures, I don't see what the problem is.''

After years of bucking international pressure, Japan agreed in 1988 to stop commercial whaling but angered environmentalists when it announced it would continue catching whales for research.

Last year, Japan's research whale hunt caught 241 Minke whales, or almost 1,000 tons - far below the 220,000 tons caught in the 1960s.

Environmentalists say the research can be done without killing the whales and have protested the sale of the meat from research whales. Japanese officials say the sale of the meat offsets the cost of the research and will continue.

Dolphins, porpoises and seals have been killed by the thousands in drift net fishing when fishermen drag nearly invisible, massive nets through the ocean, creating what environmentalists have dubbed a ''wall of death.''

The drift nets are designed to catch fish, but marine mammals get tangled in the netting and die.

Japan has been criticized for its widespread use of drift net fishing, but Japanese officials deny many mammals get caught in the nets.

SANTA CLARITA, CA (FEB. 9) UPI - Rock 'n' roll singer Del Shannon, who topped the charts in the early 1960s with ''Runaway,'' apparently shot and killed himself in his home, authorities said Friday.

Shannon, whose age is listed variously as 50 and 55, was found late Thursday in the den of his house with an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, Deputy Chris Wahla said. A .22-caliber rifle was on the floor next to Shannon.

The singer's wife, Bonnie, found Shannon at 11:25 p.m. Thursday.

Homicide detectives were investigating the circumstances of the shooting and an autopsy was planned.

Before taking the stage name Del Shannon, he was known as Charles Weeden Westover.

Shannon's trademark was his distinctive voice, with its falsetto sweeps, that punctuated the early 1960s just before the British invasion.

Shannon, who a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., began working around clubs in his home state after his discharge from the Army in 1959. His first record, ''Runaway,'' was his biggest. The song, which was No. 1 on the record charts for four weeks in 1961, featured Shannon's high-pitched, whining vocals and keyboards to match.

Although he never duplicated the gold record sales of ''Runaway,'' Shannon also had hits with ''Do You Want to Dance,'' ''Keep Searchin' (We'll Follow the Sun)'' and ''Hey Little Girl,'' all which made him a minor influence from his time.

Tom Petty cites ''Runaway'' in his current hit ''Running Down a Dream'' and Petty had produced Shannon's unsuccessful 1982 comeback attempt, the album ''Drop Down and Get Me.''

Other Shannon titles include ''Hats Off to Larry,'' ''Little Town Flirt'' and ''Handy Man.'' He also composed such songs as ''I Go to Pieces'' for the English duo Peter and Gordon, a hit in 1965.

Shannon performed in a host of revival shows in the early 1980s, said Jay Rose, a disc jockey on oldies station KODJ in Los Angeles.

''He was somebody who still had a lot of talent and a lot to contribute but apparently couldn't find an outlet for it,'' Rose said.

''He had just been here at the radio station three months ago and he picked up a guitar and just went for it. His voice sounded just like it always had. He still had his broad range he could still hit everything,'' Rose said.

Sheriff's investigators said Shannon's birthdate on his driver's license was Dec. 30, 1934, making him 55. But the rock 'n' roll reference book Top Pop Singles by Joel Whitburn says Shannon was born five years later, in 1939.

''It was common in that time for artists to use false ages to make them younger,'' Rose said.

Stanley Bronstrup, the former proprieter of The Way Station, a Santa Clarita coffee shop Shannon visited weekly, said the singer was a ''good friend'' who was working hard to keep his music alive.

''He was probably living back in the 50s,'' Bronstrup said. ''He just finished working at Disneyland and had a job in Australia. I think he was doing fine, financially. I'm very sad that he passed away. He was a great guy.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Wholesale prices surged by 1.8 percent in January in the biggest jump since the 1974 energy crisis, fueled again by a huge increase in oil and gas prices, the government said Friday.

The ''unusually large'' 13.6 percent increase in energy prices was the steepest since the government started tracking wholesale gas and oil prices in 1974, and the overall increase in the producer price index was the largest since 2 percent in November of that year, the Labor Department said.

A 2.1 percent jump in food prices also contributed to the January surge, following an overall 0.6 increase in the index in December, 0.1 percent increase in November, and 0.5 percent increase in October, the department said. Those numbers were revised to reflect updated data.

If the nation's wholesale prices - which influence prices consumers pay - continue to leap at the current rate, the producer price index would finish the year with a behemoth 24.1 percent increase, the Labor Department said.

Fuel oil prices zoomed 25.3 percent and gasoline prices jumped by 16.7 percent in January, accounting for most of the energy price surge.

Aside from the traditionally volatile energy and food prices, the index for other finished goods edged up by only 0.1 percent in January, following a 0.5 percent increase in December.

On food shelves, prices for vegetables broke a wholesale record in January - rocketing 58 percent, with the cost of cabbage, lettuce and tomatoes more than doubling, the department said.

''Prices also turned up after falling in the previous month for fish, soft drinks, fresh fruits and pork,'' the Labor Department said.

Otherwise the prices for passenger cars and light trucks declined as did the cost of tires. Tobacco costs were also down and wholesale prices ''slowed considerably for prescription drugs, soaps and detergents, cosmetics, periodicals, and household appliances,'' the department said.

But wholesale prices for children's cloths, alcoholic beverages and household glassware turned up after falling in December, the monthly report said.

(FEB. 9) UPI - A break-away party may be formed in the Soviet Union... Secretary of State Baker meets Soviet President Gorbachev today... President Bush is back from his western trip... and an oil spill reaches shore in southern California. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

A meeting coming up in the Soviet Union tomorrow could fracture the Soviet Communist Party.

The forecast came from Ivan Frolov, the influential chief of the official newspaper Pravda, who also is a Central Committee secretary. Frolov says a group of radical communists led by prominent legislators will decide whether to split off and form a new party.

An independent Moscow journalist with close party ties confirmed Frolov's statement that leaders of the party's left wing will gather tomorrow. He says the radicals think they total about one-third of the Communist Party.

The meeting is coming up just days before the party began relinquishing its monopoly on power.

The split would be the first rupture in Soviet Communist Party ranks since Vladimir Lenin outlawed factions in 1921. It would put the party on the same course as Lithuanian communists, who broke from Moscow seven weeks ago.

The break could open the floodgates to a bewildering array of parties ranging from monarchists and anarchists to Christian and Social Democrats.

Frolov also predicts a purge of party hard-liners before the 28th Party Congress in early summer... as Mikhail Gorbachev tries to stay ahead of the quickening pace of change in his country.

(FEB. 9) UPI - Secretary of State Baker will meet with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev today.

(FEB. 9) UPI - President Bush says he's glad his three-day trip to defend his military budget coincided with the radical changes taking place in the Soviet Union.

Bush says his tour... which ended yesterday... sent ''a clear message'' that the United States, though supportive of the changes, is still wary.

The president traveled to a war training center in Southern California... a nuclear weapons lab in the San Francisco Bay area... and the Strategic Air Command Center in Nebraska.

His comments come after receiving criticism about his visit to the military facilities while the Communist Party leadership surrendered its monopoly on power in the Soviet Union.

Bush says he woN'T miss an opportunity in arms control, but at the same time he'll keep a strong defense.

The president's fiscal 1991 defense budget includes BILLIONS of dollars for continuing a Reagan-era buildup of strategic nuclear weapons.

Cleanup crews in Newport Beach, California, were working through the night to mop up the first wave of oil to reach the shore from Wednesday's crude oil spill from a ruptured tanker.

The sticky oil globs and droplets are threatening a sensitive nearby wetland wildlife habitat.

Hundreds of local voluteers were working side-by-side with trained cleanup people hired by British Petroleum... which chartered the tanker American Trader to haul the oil.

280-thousand gallons of crude have spilled from the single-hull ship after it apparently hit its own anchor... slicing a three-foot hole in the bottom of its hull. The accident occurred as the American Trader attempted to dock at an offshore UNloading bunker a mile and a half off Huntington Beach.

The accident has prompted several state officials to call for federal legislation requiring that all oil tankers be built with double hulls.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (FEB. 9) UPI - The president of West Germany's powerful Bundesbank Friday endorsed proposals for the introduction of the deutschmark to East Germany and said it would be a major step toward reunification of the two countries.

Karl Otto Poehl told a news conference in Bonn the suggestion of a monetary union with East Germany is "of national importance, possibly even of historic importance."

Poehl earlier warned against rushing into such an agreement but said Friday he and the Bundesbank fully back West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl's suggestion for immediate negotiations with the East German authorities on the issue.

He admitted being taken by surprise by Kohl's offer to discuss a proposed monetary union that would entail the introduction of West Germany's currency and economic system into East Germany.

Poehl said it is impossible to set a timetable for such a move but warned that it could not be done overnight because many questions still remain open, including the technicalities of switching from the East German mark to the deutschmark.

He said East Germany would have to be "in a position and willing to carry out radical changes to its current economic structures. "In reality, we are talking of the creation of a unified monetary and economic area between the Federal Republic (West Germany) and the GDR (East Germany)," he said, adding that the plan was for the deutschmark to become the only legal tender in East Germany.

"That would be, if it comes about, a very important step toward the economic and political unification of both states," Poehl said. "The aim is practically to reach a confederation in economic and monetary areas," he said.

Presenting the proposals earlier this week, government officials admitted such a union would cause initial problems in East Germany, such as an increase in unemployment, but could lead to a second German economic miracle.

"All West German firms - large, medium size and small - are only waiting for the possibility to invest in East Germany," Poehl said. He dismissed fears that the proposed "economic reunification" would have inflationary effects and said the Bundesbank would not give up its "proven stability policy" if the new system is adopted.

He said the suggested union would not automatically stretch West German monetary resources or lead to higher interest rates. "We have an extremely manageable capital market, we have extremely high savings, so it is not at all necessary or compelling that a stronger demand on our capital market for this purpose should have a rate-increasing effect," he said.

Bundesbank officials said the amount of money circulating in East Germany is relatively low - experts put it at about about 15 billion East German marks, currently the equivalent of 5 billion deutschmark ($2.95 billion.)

Officials hope a monetary union will help stop a massive migration of East Germans to West Germany, which is further crippling East Germany's already ailing economy.

(FEB. 9) UPI - A break-away party may be formed in the Soviet Union... Secretary of State Baker meets Soviet President Gorbachev today... President Bush is back from his western trip... and an oil spill reaches shore in southern California. Those stories and more, next from U-P-I.

A meeting coming up in the Soviet Union tomorrow could fracture the Soviet Communist Party.

The forecast came from Ivan Frolov, the influential chief of the official newspaper Pravda, who also is a Central Committee secretary. Frolov says a group of radical communists led by prominent legislators will decide whether to split off and form a new party.

An independent Moscow journalist with close party ties confirmed Frolov's statement that leaders of the party's left wing will gather tomorrow. He says the radicals think they total about one-third of the Communist Party.

The meeting is coming up just days before the party began relinquishing its monopoly on power.

The split would be the first rupture in Soviet Communist Party ranks since Vladimir Lenin outlawed factions in 1921. It would put the party on the same course as Lithuanian communists, who broke from Moscow seven weeks ago.

The break could open the floodgates to a bewildering array of parties ranging from monarchists and anarchists to Christian and Social Democrats.

Frolov also predicts a purge of party hard-liners before the 28th Party Congress in early summer... as Mikhail Gorbachev tries to stay ahead of the quickening pace of change in his country.

(FEB. 9) UPI - Secretary of State Baker will meet with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev today.

U-S officials say Baker may receive responses to some of the American proposals on weapons control during the Kremlin session with Gorbachev. The U-S officials say initial Soviet reaction appears to be positive.

Baker met with Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze the last two days. Officials from both sides say they made progress on arms control issues and the future of Afghanistan.

The talks are meant to lay the groundwork for the next superpower summit, scheduled to take place in Washington in June.

U-S officials say Baker offered new ideas in moving the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks closer to completion. They say the Soviets offered a ''clarification'' that says they will sign a START treaty- even if there is continuing disagreement about the ''Star Wars'' program and its relationship to offensive arms control.

Baker also put forward new proposals for counting and limiting air-launched cruise missiles and ''non-deployed'' missiles... which are ready to use but are not stored with the launchers. In addition, officials say there is a new formula for making sure data from missile launches can be read by the other country's monitors.

On conventional forces, the United States offered proposals defining tanks and combat aircraft... a necessary step in deciding which ones will be scrapped and which will be permitted.

(FEB. 9) UPI - South African Foreign Minister Roelof ''Pik'' Botha made some conciliatory comments to what he called his ''black brothers'' last night.

Botha urged blacks to accept the white minority government's commitment to ''dismantle apartheid.'' Botha said South Africa's white leaders stand ready to help build a new South Africa.

American civil rights activist Jesse Jackson urged President Frederik de Klerk to ''go all the way'' and abolish more than four decades of apartheid rule.

Jackson issued the appeal as he toured the black satellite city of Soweto. He compared compared his years as a young black in the American South to living under apartheid.

The two-time presidential candidate said de Klerk's reform package is ''marvelous.'' But Jackson pointed out that black nationalist Nelson Mandela is still in prison and a 43-month-old state of emergency is still partially in effect.

Earlier yesterday, police broke up crowds of demonstrators in a black township and outside the British consulate.

Authorities in Manhasset, New York, will be at the bedside of a hospitalized man today for his arraignment on drug charges.

Jose Figueroa, of New York, is charged with drug possession and, if convicted, he could be sentenced to 25 years to life in prison.

Figueroa is an alleged drug ''mule'' who was carrying 102 condoms filled with cocaine inside his body when he was injured in the January 25th crash of a Colombian jetliner. The drugs were worth more than a quarter of a Million dollars.

Officials say Figueroa would have died if one of the condoms had burst while inside his stomach.

Figueroa... a Colombian national... is recuperating from two broken legs and internal injuries suffered in the crash which killed 73 people.

Police say another Colombian national who was among the 85 survivors is under arrest on a similar charge at a different hospital.

Antonio Zuluaga had 29 packets of cocaine inside his body.

HOUSTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Former University of Houston and Houston Rockets standout Elvin Hayes said he is planning a sale at his car dealership and a big bash for his friends and family to celebrate being named to the Hall of Fame.

Hayes, Dave Bing, Earl Monroe and the late Neil Johnston were elected Thursday to basketball's Hall of Fame. They will be inducted in ceremonies May 15, joining 168 individuals and four teams in the shrine.

''I am very, very, very elated,'' Hayes said. ''I knocked the first time and they opened up the door and said 'welcome and come on it.' It's just unreal.''

''I'm going in with Earl, who was the first Magic before Magic Johnson came along, and Dave Bing, who I played with at Washington,'' Hayes said. ''I'm only sorry that Neil Johnston isn't around to enjoy it.''

Hayes, the ''Big E,'' played 16 seasons and was one of the game's great offensive threats.

He was a three-time All-America at Houston and College Player of the Year in 1967-68. The Rockets made him the No. 1 draft choice in 1968.

Hayes was traded to Washington and played on the Bullets 1978 championship team. He returned to the Rockets and retired after the 1983-84 season. Hayes earned Rookie of the Year honors and played in 12 All-Star Games.

Hayes said the thrill of making the Hall of Fame rivaled the elation he experienced during his playing career.

He helped put UH in the national spotlight and played in front of one of the largest crowds in history to watch a college game when the Cougars met UCLA and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (then Lew Alcindor) at the Astrodome in 1968.

Rockets Coach Don Chaney said no player is more deserving of the honor.

''I was very happy to see the selection committee recognize a guy who has contributed significantly to the game,'' said Chaney, a teammate of Hayes at UH. ''Elvin is well deserving. It's good to retire knowing you are a Hall of Famer. And I think Elvin has to consider himself lucky.

''It's a rare case when somebody gets in on his first try. For most guys, it takes a while.''

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA (FEB. 9) UPI - Finance Minister Barend du Plessis criticized the economic policies of the African National Congress Friday as ''out of kilter with the rest of the world'' and warned its views could affect future negotiations with Pretoria.

''The way the ANC is spelling out its policies, it is not nationalization but theft,'' du Plessis said of the anti-apartheid organization's support for taking control of the country's mines, banks and monopoly industries.

''If the ANC have their feet on the ground they will find South Africans are used to a free economy and being property and home owners,'' du Plessis said.

President Frederik de Klerk last Friday lifted a 30-year ban on the ANC as part of a racial reform package aimed at beginning power-sharing talks with the country's voteless black majority.

''I think (the nationalization policies) will have a most important effect on negotiations. They will certainly be a major point of discussion,'' du Plessis said.

Du Plessis said international political events, notably those in Eastern Europe, played a greater role in accelerating change than sanctions.

''I don't think sanctions are effective as a measure to force a country into doing something. There are international circumstances that made it possible to do certain things politically that we couldn't do a year ago '' du Plessis said in an apparent reference to the world decline in communism and Pretoria's subsequent decision to lift its bans on the ANC and the South African Communist Party.

Trade sanctions did less damage to the economy than financial embargoes barring access to international banking facilities, as South Africa had replaced trade markets lost overnight within a few weeks, he said.

However, capital flight and denial of foreign loans cut the growth in Gross Domestic Product to about 2 percent, less than half of the 5 percent needed to generate wealth and keep pace with population expansion, du Plessis said.

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA (FEB. 9) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk accused right-wing whites of trying to plunge the country into civil war and vowed Friday to foil any attempts ''to set fire to this country.''

De Klerk, who put forward the boldest racial reforms in more than four decades of apartheid rule one week ago, lashed out at the right-wing Conservative Party during parliamentary debate over his program.

The Conservative Party has accused De Klerk of selling out the interests of Afrikaners in favor of the country's 28 million voteless black majority and vowed a campaign of active resistance to power-sharing negotiations.

''The National Party talks renewal and courage and they talk racism and aggression,'' De Klerk said. ''They will plunge this country into a racial war.

''The government and I will not allow anyone or any party to set fire to this country. The National Party is not frightened by intimidation and threats,'' he said. ''Circumstances demand a new strategy and the National Party had the courage to see this.''

The 53-year-old De Klerk lifted a 30-year ban on the African National Congress, pledged to free jailed black nationalist Nelson Mandela from life imprisonment, suspended judicial executions and lifted restrictions on more than 30 other anti-apartheid organizations and 374 activists.

The measures are intended to create a climate conducive to negotiations with black leaders on a new constitution that would end minority domination and settle the country's protracted racial conflict.

''All political organizations and parties will be involved in negotiation, if they commit themselves to peaceful solutions,'' De Klerk said. ''We are busy making this possible for them. If they still refuse then no one can accuse us of unfairness.''

De Klerk denied conservative charges that his National Party hoodwinked the white electorate in the September 1989 elections that returned it to power for another five years. He acknowledged ''particular steps were not spelled out. But no party does this.''

Amid continued speculation about the timing of Mandela's release, a delegation of 22 senior officials of the anti-apartheid United Democratic Front began talks with the black nationalist Friday at his suburban-style house at Victor Verster Prison, some 50 miles northwest of Cape Town in the wine-growing region of Paarl.

As gale winds swept across the Cape, UDF spokesman Murphy Morobe told reporters at the prison gates he was ''very hopeful that this could be the last meeting with Mr. Mandela in prison.''

Since recovering from tuberculosis in December 1988, Mandela has lived alone in a former warden's house on the prison farm, consulting on an increasingly frequent basis with various anti-apartheid organizations and government officials.

Friday's meeting represented the largest group yet to visit Mandela, who was captured in 1962 and sentenced two years later to life imprisonment on sabotage charges in connection with the underground activities of the ANC.

In another development Friday, the anti-apartheid National Sports Congress called on British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to order a boycott-breaking English cricket team to return home, warning of a ''collision'' between anti-tour demonstrators and security forces.

On Thursday, police fired tear gas into a crowd of 2,000 youths in the Johannesburg black township of Alexandra and charged protesters outside the British consulate demonstrating against the touring cricket players.

U.S. civil rights activist Jesse Jackson, on the third day of his 10-day tour, prepared to fly to Cape Town where he is scheduled to meet church leaders, anti-apartheid activists and government officials.

LONDON (FEB. 9) UPI - Britain expelled nine Iranians, reportedly for planning to kill author Salman Rushdie, and put airports on full alert Friday after U.S. warnings that terrorists may be planning violence to mark the 11th anniversary of the Iranian revolution.

The expulsions were swiftly followed by a renewed death threat from Tehran against the author.

The U.S. State Department reported a "high level of activity" by the Hezbollah Islamic extremist group and said Washington "is deeply concerned that terrorists may be planning an operation against U.S. interests in Western Europe."

A Home Office spokesman said the nine Iranians were deported from London to Tehran Thursday but refused to say if they were thrown out for plotting to kill Rushdie.

Independent radio stations in London reported Friday that the expulsions were due to the Iranians' connection to an alleged plot to kill Rushdie, who has been in hiding for the past year since the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called on Moslems worldwide to kill the Indian-born author.

''On Feb. 2, the home secretary gave them notice to depart,'' the official said. ''None of them were held in detention and all nine complied.

''We are still in the business of protecting individuals and that is all I can say.''

During morning prayers in Tehran, Iran's spiritual leader Ali Khamenei repeated Khomeini's call for all Moslems to try to kill Rushdie for writing ''The Satanic Verses,'' which fundamentalist Moslems consider insulting to their faith.

Rushdie is in hiding under police protection.

''Mercenaries who try by means of cultural and propaganda conspiracies such as writing the blasphemous book 'The Satanic Verses' are trying ... to weaken Islam,'' Tehran radio quoted Khamenei as saying.

''I approve of it entirely,'' Alim Siddiqui, director of the London-based Moslem Institute, said of the death order.

''There is no threat. There is a sentence of death, which will be executed by the political and judicial authorities of Islam, and not by private citizens,'' he said. ''I am sure it would have horrified people if Hitler had been tackled when he wrote 'Mein Kampf.'''

The call was deplored by British officials.

''It has been condemned by the prime minister, who said it is to be regretted that threats of this nature are made,'' said a spokeman at Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's 10 Downing Street office.

''If these reports are true, we deplore this renewed incitement to violence against British citizens,'' said a Foreign Office spokesman.

"We still condemn (the death sentence) in the strongest terms," said Bob Gregory, spokesman for Viking Penguin, Rushdie's publishers. "We are appalled." He added, however, that the renewed threat ''doesn't change anything."

Last week, in his first extensive public statement since he went into hiding last Feb. 14, Rushdie defended ''The Satanic Verses'' and said he had not committed blasphemy because he is not a Moslem.

In an essay published in Newsweek magazine and in the London newspaper The Independent, he called on Moslems worldwide to respect his right to freedom of the press and ignore the death call.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported the nine deported Iranians - six students and three government employees - had arrived in Tehran. IRNA said London's actions were ''unfounded and against international regulations and customs.''

Deportee Hussein Rahimi, a post-graduate student, called on Iran to react firmly against Britain, IRNA said.

Security officials braced for possible attacks after the U.S. alert, their caution still heightened after the bombing of a Boeing 747 jetliner over Scotland Dec. 21, 1988, that killed 270 people.

''All our U.K. airports have been informed about the alert and appropriate security is being enforced,'' said Civil Aviation Authority spokesman Paul McKie. ''The United States did not advise us of a threat against aviation but we are keeping in close touch with the U.S. authorities."

He described the security alert as being ''of a very high order,'' and said it involved stringent searches of hand luggage and increased deployments of personnel.

(FEB. 9) UPI - Prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange fell in thin trading Friday, with investors lacking incentives and expressing concern over the February 18 parliamentary elections.

The Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which was up 214.37 yen Thursday, dropped 228.10 yen to close at 37,288.14 yen. The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange index of all listed major stocks which shed 5.21 points Thursday, continued to fall, losing 10.98 points to end the day at 2,734.17.

Volume was a low 350 million shares, compared with 430.31 million shares Thursday. Losers strongly outpaced gainers 574 to 353.

Brokers said stocks fell across the board in early trading, marked by profit taking. Investors wanted to raise cash in view of expected higher interest rates.

Institutional investors stayed on the sidelines ahead of the market holiday Monday for National Foundation day. They were also cautiously awaiting the outcome of the Feb. 18 election for the lower house of parliament.

Losers included financial issues, along with housings, electricals, drugs, trading houses, textiles and minings. Some steels and machinery issues were among the gainers.

Elsewhere in Asia, stocks closed lower on profit taking on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange after four days of steady rise.

The Hang Seng Index lost 9.87 points in active trading to close at 2,893.90. The index had gained 58.88 Thursday.

Volume was around 1.5 billion, down from Thursday's 1.97 billion, the highest volume since June 12, 1989.

Brokers said they had expected the consolidation with traders focusing on profit taking after a total 200-point rise this week.

"There is still real buying support sustaining the market, and we are likely to see the index move up through the 3,000 level next week," a broker at the securities firm of County Natwest predicted.

Utilities were the best gainers, financial securities were down 5.39, so were industrial and properties stocks.

On the Singapore Stock Exchange, stocks closed lower in thin trading reflecting strong profit taking after a week of steady rise.

The Straits Times Industrial Index fell 7.26 points to close at 1,581.52. The index which rose 4.12 points Thursday, fell throughout the trading session. The narrower All Singapore Index shed 1.35 point to close at 438.82.

Volume was a low 153.1 million shares, compared with about 214.1 million shares Thursday.

Analysts said the market was overbought and predicted that a sharper correction was yet to come. But brokers showed some optimism based on what they described as an oversupply of liquidity, ready for new investments.

Among the losers were Overseas United Enterprises, Shangri-la, Singapore Airlines, Metro Holdings, Singapore Press, Parkway Holdings, and Far East Shipping.

Gainers included Overseas Chinese Banking Corp. (Foreign), ASEAN Fund, Cerebos, Ming Court, Singapore Land, Development Bank of Singapore.

In Australia, stocks drifted on the Sydney Sharemarket as investors feared another blow will be dealt to Australia's troubled corporate sector.

The All Ordinaries index dropped 18 points to 1630.6, wiping out a marginal gain of 2.8 points Thursday, in a week marked by downward sessions. Volume was 113.9 million shares, compared with 117.3 million Thursday. The gold index also was down and fell 12 points to 1,936.

Investors were cautiously watching developments involving Alan Bond, the Australian corporate magnate whose highly-leveraged empire has crumbled. Lawyers were attempting to save Bond Corp. from falling into receivership.

The market had been driven down Wednesday by the liquidation of Westmex, an investment firm. Traders were concerned about another business failure currently looming at Adelaide Steam, saddled with a $6 billion debt.

The Adsteam empire of corporate baron John Spalvin showed renewed signs of problems and its stock, which fell throughout the week, slipped further.

Losers were across the board, including Burns Philp, Lend Lease, and News Corp., CRA and Western Mining.

Reports about new oil finds in the Timor Sea where the oil company has drilling rights, failed to boost BHP's stock.

TOKYO (FEB. 9) UPI - Japan, which has reduced its killing of whales in response to international pressure, has more than doubled its consumption of a species of porpoise, a government official said Friday.

"The ban on the hunting of whales has raised the demand for porpoise meat and the catch has increased," a marine mammal expert at Japan's Fisheries Agency told United Press International.

In 1988, the year Japan agreed to a ban on commercial whaling, Japanese fishermen more than doubled the catch of Dall's porpoises, said the official said. The porpoises are sold for meat and eaten in the same way as whale meat, cooked or raw.

The Dall's porpoise catch numbered about 15,000 annually before 1988 but jumped to 39,000 in 1988, the official said. The official, who requested to be unidentified, denied a report that the increased killing threatens to render the species extinct.

Robert Brownell of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service was quoted in Japan's top-selling newspaper on Friday as saying the porpoises are in danger of being wiped out. Continued hunting at the current rate could lead to the extinction of the Dall's porpoises, Brownell was quoted as saying.

"Despite that article, we don't think there is any reason to worry about extinction," said the Japanese official. "According to our estimates there are 2.4 million Dall's porpoises worldwide and U.S. estimates put it at 2.15 million," he said. "Considering those figures, I don't see what the problem is."

After years of bucking international pressure, Japan agreed in 1988 to stop commercial whaling but angered environmentalists when it announced it would continue catching whales for research. Last year, Japan's research whale hunt caught 241 Minke whales, or almost 1,000 tons - far below the 220,000 tons caught in the 1960s.

Environmentalists say the research can be done without killing the whales and have protested the sale of the meat from research whales. Japanese officials say the sale of the meat offsets the cost of the research and will continue.

Dolphins, porpoises, and seals have been killed by the thousands in drift net fishing when fishermen drag nearly invisible, massive nets through the ocean, creating what environmentalists have dubbed a "wall of death."

The drift nets are designed to catch fish, but marine mammals get tangled in the netting and die. Japan has been criticized for its widespread use of drift net fishing, but Japanese officials deny many mammals get caught in the nets.

CORVALLIS, OR (FEB. 9) UPI - A new study appears to contradict claims that cutting down old forests and replacing them with younger trees will benefit Earth's atmosphere.

Researchers concluded that replacing older trees with young, fast-growing trees will not reduce atomospheric levels of carbon dioxide, a major contributor to the ''greenhouse effect'' that traps heat close to the Earth's surface.

Advocates of harvesting old-growth timber contend that logging the older trees and replacing them with younger ones is beneficial to the environment.

''The conventional wisdom was that since young trees remove carbon from the environment more actively than older trees, harvesting the old growth would actually reduce problems with the greenhouse effect,'' said Mark Harmon, an Oregon State University researcher and co-author of the study.

But the natural processes are not nearly that simple, Harmon said, and the old theories do not hold up.

''We've been concerned that decision-makers are going to be making important policies based on inaccurate, armchair technology,'' he said.

The study, published Friday in the journal Science, shows that during the past century, the harvesting of old-growth conifer forests in the Pacific Northwest ''has actually injected a disproportionally large amount'' of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere, compared to land use changes elsewhere in the world.

Carbon dioxide is considered a primary culprit in the global warming that many scientists believe will occur in the next few decades as heat-trapping ''greenhouse'' gases increase in the atmosphere.

The rise in carbon dioxide is mainly caused by the burning of fossil fuels but the cutting of the world's forests also is being cited for the increased atmospheric concentrations of the gas.

As trees grow, they remove carbon dioxide from the air and incorporate the carbon into their wood and leaves. As long as they live, the carbon stays locked up inside. But when trees die and decay, the carbon is released in the form of carbon dioxide.

Harmon said the notion that young forests can better fight the greenhouse effect ''has not been used much by scientists. It's been used a lot by industry.''

The scientists noted that old-growth forests include dead woody debris, dead roots, snags and other decayed material that can store as much or more carbon as the trees themselves. When the large trees are harvested, researchers said decaying material continues to release carbon into the atmosphere for decades.

Computer calculations indicate that after an area is logged, it would be at least 250 years before the original level of carbon storage and equilibrium was regained, researchers said.

(FEB. 9) - Economically, the decade of the 1980s was most dramatically marked by merger mania, junk bonds and the leveraged buy-out.

As the fever of corporate acquisition sometimes seemed to run amok, thoughtful people in the business and religious community began to raise ethical questions about the phenomenon and its impact on the social and economic welfare of the nation.

Those questions promoted the Woodstock Theological Center at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., to a host a series of sessions during 1988-89 bringing together business leaders, theologians and policy analysts to discuss corporate takeovers.

One result of the seminars is a small, 19-page report providing an overview of the sessions.

It found ''troubling ethical questions'' on two levels - first at the level of the process of corporate takeovers itself and, secondly, at the level of outcomes.

And it proposed a number of questions participants in takeovers should pose to themselves on both those levels, including questions on employment costs, social costs to communities, fairness issues and others.

But among the most interesting aspects of the report was the effort to put the leveraged buyout phenomenon into the context of changes over the past several decades.

The report began by noting that in recent years ''dramatic changes have taken place in the way the financial industry operates to mobilize capital for productive enterprises and in the way it rewards the entrepreneurs, institutions, and 'financial engineers' who direct the movement of capital.''

Participants said that the rapid shift in power and wealth, along with the breakdown of old institutional arrangements ''have aroused fears that the moral underpinnings of the financial sector of industrial economies may be weakening.''

In particular, they pointed to a sense of weakened loyalty, with employees no longer feeling committed to the organization for which they work, firms showing less loyalty and concern for their workers and changed ''client'' relationships as lenders, borrowers, agents and brokers ''move from deal to deal, seeking the best terms without regard to long-standing relationships.''

''Concern arises in some quarters from the fear that this weakening of loyalty, together with the increasing complexity and depersonalization of financial transactions, will undermine even more fundamental values of honesty, fairness and responsibility to society's larger purposes.''

The group suggested a number of core values relevant to the takeover climate, including a reaffirmation that ''business relationships should be based on honesty, loyalty and personal commitment.''

They also said a high value should be placed on innovation, creativity and freedom of enterprise, with new ideas given a chance to succeed and bad ideas should not be protected from failure.

While stressing that ''market tests'' - success in the free market - are good indicators of social benefits, the group also said corproations are ''social as well as private institutions'' and the charter to do business is a privelege with at responsibilities beyond just shareholders, including workers and the communities in which they operate.

Of all that was said, the most provocative issue is the notion of the social dimension of a corporation and that, ethically, ''they must be a constructive part of the larger society in which they operate.''

What that means - and how it could be implemented - remains a matter of fierce debate.

LONDON (FEB. 9) UPI - Stock prices were sharply lower at midday Friday on the London International Stock Exchange, with investors awaiting the release of the U.S. producer price index for January.

The Financial Times 100-stock index was down 21.3 points at 2,309.7, compared with 2,324.8 points during the same trading period Thursday. The FT-100 briefly rose to 2,326.9 points, its high in early trading.

The narrower top 30 industrial average was down 17.1 points at 1,828.2 points. Volume was about 318.6 million shares, up from 236.3 million shares at midday Thursday.

A dealer said bearish news from the price index could depress Wall Street and affect other markets in turn.

In Washington, the Labor Department said wholesale prices surged by 1.8 percent in January in the biggest jump since the 1974 energy crisis. The rate increase was fueled by sharply higher oil and gas prices.

The British bond market showed weakness and traders were concerned over the gap between equities and bonds.

Takeover speculations which had helped boost the stock of Royal Bank of Scotland were crushed when the bank announced the sale of some assets to Scottish Equitable Life Assurance Society. The bank lost 14 cents to $3.41.

U.S. sales of Bass stocks were echoed on the London market, where the brewing company lost 17 cents to $16.83.

EuroDisney lost 34 cents to $18.65 on profit taking after several days of strong advances.

Reports that Ranks Hovis McDougall PLC was about to sell its Singapore food manufacturing unit to a Japanese company drove the stock down five cents to $7.24.

BEIJING (FEB. 9) UPI - Indirect trade between China and Taiwan climbed by $1 billion to a total of $3.7 billion last year, Chinese trade officials said Friday.

Trade between the Nationalist Chinese-ruled island and the communist mainland has boomed in recent years as both sides have encouraged expanded economic relations. But nearly all the trade is indirect, with most conducted through Hong Kong.

Chinese officials, quoted by the official Xinhua news agency, said China-Taiwan trade climbed to $3.7 billion in 1989, from $2.7 billion the previous year.

Officials attributed the growth to increased exports of machinery, chemical fibers, electronics, and plastic materials from Taiwan to the mainland. Major exports from China to Taiwan are herbal medicine, coal, and mineral products.

But Zheng Hongye, president of the China Council for the Promotion of International Trade, cautioned that further negotiations are needed to promote trade. "It is not direct trade and, as such, it is not the best way to do it," Zheng said.

Officials said Taiwan business investment in China now totals $400 million in more than 500 projects, including areas such as textiles, electrical machine assembly and toys.

WARSAW, POLAND (FEB. 9) UPI - The Polish Parliament restored a gold crown Friday to the white eagle - a symbol of independent statehood for nearly nine centuries until its crown was removed by communist authorities after World War II.

The Parliament debate sparked a temporary controversy when communist deputies nearly walked out of the session because a Solidarity deputy said they had ''no moral right'' to take part in the vote.

Thevote in the Sejm, or lower house, was 316-3 with 52 abstentions.

The measure was proposed by President Wojciech Jaruzelski, the first piece of legislation offered by a Polish president in 50 years.

Piotr Nowina-Konopka, a Solidarity official in the president's office, told the deputies restoration of the emblem showed, ''Poles are able to defend what they are entitled to - what constitutes an element of their national and historic awareness.''

But when voting time came, Solidarity deputy Jan Lopuszanski declared deputies of the newly created Social Democracy Party - which last month replaced the Communist Party - had ''no moral right to vote for the emblem.'' His implication was that the communists were responsible for removing the crown and that during communist rule, Poland was merely a satellite of the Soviet Union and not independent.

As he spoke, ''Part of the left side of the deputy benches got up in order to leave the room,'' the official news agency PAP said.

Sejm speaker Mikolaj Kozakiewicz ordered a recess to bring the squabble under control. Eventually, nearly all of the communists present for the session either voted with the majority or abstained.

Some Roman Catholic deputies wanted the crown to have a cross. But Solidarity's Anna Hennelowa argued that would be against freedom of religion, which is guaranteed in the country.

The white eagle with a crown on a red background has been Poland's symbol since the 13th century. It was used on coins to denote the monarchy in the 12th century and was adopted as the personal crest of Poland's first dynasty, the Piasts, in 1222.

Piast ruler Przemysl II raised the white eagle to the rank of a symbol of state unity at his coronation in 1295. It was adopted by all subsequent rulers.

The present form of the eagle was designed in 1927 to symbolize the regaining of Polish independence after World War I.

After the communist takeover in 1945, the new authorities removed the crown, calling it a reactionary symbol. The eagle with a crown quickly became a symbol of opposition to the communist system.

Last December, Parliament voted to return to pre-war symbols of Poland, which also included changing its name from ''Peoples' Republic of Poland'' to ''Republic of Poland''.

U-S officials say Baker's two days of talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze were pleasant, but inconclusive... but they expect some firm answers from Gorbachev.

The Soviet president appeared to be in a good mood as he and Baker began their meeting. When asked by a reporter if he will stand as a communist in multi-party elections... Gorbachev smiled slightly and said ''Let's wait and see.''

HARTFORD, CT (FEB. 9) UPI - Textron Lycoming, already faced with a potential loss of more than 1,300 jobs under Defense Department plans to cut tank production, announced plans Friday to lay off 150 salaried workers.

The layoffs are in addition to the reduction of 600 jobs in 1989 and separate from the job losses that would occur if the Army goes through with plans to end production of the MI tank, said company spokesman William McDaniel.

"We have been undergoing an extensive evaluation of all of our operations over the past month with the objective of making us competitive for the 90s," McDaniel said.

Textron Lycoming, a subsidiary of Textron Inc. of Providence, R.I., produces the gas-turbine engines used in the MI tanks manufactured by General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis. Textron Inc. reported a 20 percent increase in earnings of $77 million and revenue of $2 billion for the fourth quarter of 1989.

The latest cutback is in addition to the approximately 600 jobs that were reduced through all of 1989 at the Stratford plant, including attrition and retirements, which reduced total employment to a current 4,300, McDaniel said.

McDaniel said Textron Lycoming's main plant in Stratford would bear the brunt of the layoffs, which will take effect by the end of the first quarter. The remainder of the cuts would be made at the firm's smaller facilities in Williamsport, Pa., and Greer, S.C., he said. The two plants have a combined employment of about 1,200 workers, McDaniel said.

Last month, when Defense Secretary Dick Cheney proposed budget cuts for fiscal year 1991 that would reduce and eventually halt production of the MI tank, Textron Lycoming warned it would result in a loss of 1,350 jobs.

The Army had planned to purchase 600 tanks that would have been worth $1.4 billion in contracts to Textron Lycoming through 1995. However, Cheney's proposal cut the number to 225 tanks.

Steven D. White, Textron Lycoming's vice president for military engine programs, said he felt the Army had "overreacted" to the fast moving political developments in Eastern Europe amid calls for arms and troop reductions.

He said the Army's final purchase of M1 tanks will be an improved version called the MIA2 and "it would be a mistake for the United States not to make the most advanced tank it can."

White said Textron Lycoming depends on tank engines for nearly 40 percent of its revenues and the proposed cuts, if approved by Congress, would surely result in a loss of 1,350 jobs.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Projected costs of building and putting a ''Star Wars'' missile-defense system in space has been cut 20 percent because of recent technological advancements, the Pentagon announced Friday.

''Technical progress and an evolving architecture for the space-based portion of Phase I now permit projected cost figures near $55 billion'' in fiscal 1988 dollars, said the Pentagon office for the Strategic Defense Initiative, the formal name of the ''Star Wars'' concept.

SDI officials in June 1988 estimated the cost of a Phase I missile-defense system to be $115 billion. The estimate was reduced to $69 billion in October 1988, based on ''significant technology advancements,'' the SDI office said.

The military's announcement of the new, lower estimate of $55 billion comes about two weeks after President Bush asked Congress to provide $4.5 billion for the SDI research and development program in fiscal 1991.

Bush's request is nearly $1 billion more than Congress appropriated for the program this year, and lawmakers are expected to balk at the new figure. Congress routinely has cut the SDI request by up to $1 billion a year.

Administration officials have argued that, despite better U.S.-Soviet relations, the system will be needed to protect the United States against ballistic missile attacks from Third World nations or from accidental launch.

The estimated $55 billion cost is for a missile-defense system that would employ hundreds of ''Brilliant Pebbles'' - a 3-foot-long, 10-pound device that would orbit the Earth and use a camera to spot the plume of an ascending ICBM.

Using a small super-computer, these same devices would identify the missile's path, target it, lock on, and fire a projectile to smash into the rocket in space.

Technological advancements have enabled U.S. scientists to make these devices smaller and less expensive to make, officials said.

A Defense Science Board study of ''Brilliant Pebbles'' completed last September identified ''several critical'' problems, but predicted that ''two years of continued research would resolve those issues,'' the SDI office said.

''The first flight of a Brilliant Pebble is scheduled by this summer, on a suborbital flight,'' the SDI office said. ''The Defense Department has ruled that the test complies with the (U.S.-Soviet) Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty of 1972, which bans anti-missile weapons in orbit.''

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL (FEB. 9) UPI - Two trains filled with passengers collided Friday in a Rio de Janeiro suburb, killing at least four people and injuring 60 more, a statement said.

According to a statement from the Brazilian Train Co., one of the trains slammed into the back of the other as it was stopped in the Osvaldo Cruz station in a residential neighborhood north of Rio de Janeiro.

Preliminary investigations blamed a faulty brake system for the accident.

Witnesses said the collision was so strong that it destroyed the four rear cars of the waiting train and part of the railway and threw one of the cars onto another track.

The injured were taken to nearby hospitals for treatment, the statement said.

Both trains were carrying more passengers than usual due to a bus drivers' strike that since Thursday has paralyzed the city's public transportation system.

BERN, SWITZERLAND (FEB. 9) UPI - Indian government and police investigators met Friday at the Justice Ministry to discuss how to obtain details of bank accounts linked to a bribery scandal involving the Swiss arms manufacturer Bofors, and Sweden has been asked for similar information.

Switzerland, at the request of New Delhi, on Jan. 26 ordered four banks in Zurich and Geneva to freeze all deposits held by officials named by the Indian government.

India charges that 14 government officials shared $40 million for awarding $1.3 billion in contracts to Bofors.

This week, the Swiss government agreed to a formal Indian request for legal help in obtaining disclosure of the appropriate banking transactions.

But bank disclosure procedures can take years in Switzerland because of strict banking secrecy laws. Both the Philippines and Haiti are still fighting to obtain disclosure of and return of hundreds of millions of dollars deposited by Ferdinand Marcos and Jean-Claude Duvalier. Both proceedings began in 1986.

Legal procedures were described to the Indian investigation delegation, Swiss Justice Ministry officials said.

Swedish authorities are still studying an Indian request for cooperation in determining the final recipient of return commissions on the $1.3 billion artillery contract.

''India has asked for legal aid from the Swedish government,'' Swedish War Material Inspector Magnus Roback said Friday.

''We are currently trying to sort out what kind of assistance we legally can give them and will then explain it to them so they understand what grounds they have to fulfill to receive legal aid in Sweden,'' Roback said.

He said the request was made several weeks ago, but declined to give details of the request or of Swedish government discussions on the issue.

''What they basically want is assistance in obtaining all kinds of information that may exist here in Sweden,'' Roback said.

''When a nation asks for legal aid it is usually because they want assistance of a coercive kind - either a court decision on seizure or interrogations,'' Roback said.

Sweden dropped its investigation of the affair in early 1988 and contends it cannot legally order Bofors to release company documents because it found no evidence of a crime.

Bofors maintains it did nothing illegal in the sale of 400 artillery pieces for the Indian army - the largest order ever issued by an Indian government.

In Bern, Swiss officials said an initial Indian request for legal help was returned to New Dehli because it was incomplete and lacked details, including names of individuals and banks.

While the new request was formally accepted, they said, it will only be transmitted to public prosecutors in Zurich and Geneva after thorough study by Justice Ministry experts to make sure it conforms with Swiss requirements.

Indian media reports have identified the banks as the Swiss Bank Corporation branch in Geneva and the Nordfinanz Bank in Zurich.

The two banks' refusal to comment is sanctioned by Swiss banking regulations.

MANCHESTER, MI (FEB. 9) UPI - A funeral mass will be held Monday for the Rev. Fr. Raymond Schlinkert, longtime pastor of St. Mary Church in Manchester and former host of the inspirational television program ''With This Ring.''

Schlinkert died Thursday at the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor of complications from injuries he suffered in a Jan. 16 traffic accident. He was 77.

A native of Detroit, Schlinkert attended Sacred Heart Seminary in Detroit and St. Mary Theological Seminary in Cincinnati. He was ordained a Roman Catholic priest on June 7, 1941.

Following his ordination, he served as associate pastor at St. Benedict in Highland Park, St. Philip Neri in Detroit, St. Anthony in Belleville, St. Gregory in Detroit, St. Edward in Detroit, Most Holy Trinity in Detroit and St. Patrick in Union Lake.

In 1963 he was appointed pastor of St. Mary Church in Manchester, where he remained until his death.

Schlinkert began the production of his television program in 1961. The 15-minute show, produced at the studios of WJBK in Detroit, at one time was seen in 45 markets across the country.

In ''With This Ring,'' one of the first religious TV programs in the country, Schlinkert concentrated on issues and concerns of people and only secondarily on religious doctrine.

A wake service will be held Sunday and a mass of Christian burial will be held Monday at St. Mary Church in Manchester.

NEWARK, NJ (FEB. 9) UPI - A federal judge issued an arrest warrant Friday for Eddie Antar, telling marshals to "spare no expense" to locate the founder of the Crazy Eddie chain so that he can explain his refusal to hand over $52 million in alleged illegal stock profits.

"I have given this man seven, 14, I believe 16, days to comply with this court's order to repatriate the money and to turn it over to a trustee-receiver," U.S. District Judge Nicholas Politan said, finding Antar in contempt. "I ask you to spare no expense, Mr. Marshall, I want this man found."

Antar's lawyers produced an affidavit signed Tuesday, in which he asserted his Fifth Amendment right to avoid testifying against himself. But the judge said the privilege could only be taken in person. "We're not in a paper chase here - we're in a human chase," Politan said.

The Securities and Exchange Commission charges that Antar, who resigned as chairman of Crazy Eddie Inc. in late 1986, masterminded a scheme to inflate the company's profits and then sold his own stock, knowing the true financial position was much worse than the published one.

Antar has also been notified that he is the target of a criminal investigation, and federal prosecutors in New Jersey have told his lawyers that their fees may be forfeit if he is convicted under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act.

The reclusive Antar, a former Manhattan resident, is reported to be in his native Brooklyn, N.Y. But lawyer Justin Feldman told the judge the last address he has is an apartment on the Upper East Side of Manhattan.

Politan found Jan. 24 that the SEC has a strong case against Antar in the civil complaint. He ordered that $52 million Antar transferred to the Bank Leumi in Israel in 1987 be returned to the United States.

On Wednesday, Politan set an afternoon deadline for repatriation of Antar's assets and scheduled a hearing the next morning to give him the opportunity to take the Fifth. The judge Thursday granted a 24-hour extension.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (FEB. 9) UPI - Hindu radical groups announced Friday the postponement of the construction of a temple at a religious site claimed by Hindus and Moslems, temporarily averting renewed tensions in a communal dispute that has already claimed more than 600 lives.

The World Hindu Association and the Rama Birthplace Liberation Society said they would delay for four months the construction of the temple in the town of Ayodhyu in northern Uttar Pradesh state, 325 miles southeast of New Delhi.

The decision comes as a major boon for the government of Prime Minister V.P. Singh, as any attempt to build the temple would have fueled tensions and almost certainly led to Hindu-Moslem clashes at a time when communal relations are being taxed by a bloody independence movement in predominantly Moslem Kashmir.

In addition, the National Front government has firmly opposed the construction of the temple even though the project is backed by a right-wing Hindu party that is keeping Singh's minority administration in power.

Hindu radicals claim that a 460-year-old mosque that occupies the Ayodhya site was built by the Mogul emperor Babar, after he destroyed a temple marking the birthplace of Lord Rama, one of the most important gods in the vast Hindu pantheon.

Radical groups have threatened to destroy the mosque unless it is moved to make way for the new temple to be dedicated to Lord Rama. Moslem leaders deny that a temple had ever existed at the site.

The leaders of the Hindu groups told a news conference that the decision to delay construction of the new temple followed pleas by the prime minister for time to find a peaceful solution to the problem.

''The prime minister appealed to us to postpone it for four months,'' said Mahant Ayaidyanath, president of the Rama Birthplace Liberation Society. ''We unanimously decided that we should consider it favorably because it is his first request.''

''They said, 'We are in the government only for two months and how can we immediately find a solution,''' said Ashok Singhal, the leader of the World Hindu Association. ''We are convinced with this argument.''

Tens of thousands of Hindus were to converge on Ayodhya Feb. 14 to begin the construction.

About 600 people died late last year in communal violence sparked in northern India by the temple-building plan. Most of the unrest ignited when Hindus paraded through Moslem areas carrying consecrated bricks bound for Ayodhya for a Nov. 9 foundation-laying ceremony.

The ceremony occurred at the height of campaigning for late November parliamentary elections, making the dispute a central issue in the polls.

The Ayodhya dispute has been smoldering since February 1986, when a court agreed to allow Hindus to worship in the mosque. The move led to communal riots in several cities. The building had been locked since 1949 and contains Hindu idols.

CAIRO, EGYPT (FEB. 9) UPI - Interior Minister Abdel-Halim Moussa said Friday he had ordered the release of 600 prisoners held on criminal charges since taking over as Egypt's top policeman Jan. 12.

Moussa also said a total of 751 political prisoners, including 694 Moslem fundamentalists, were still being detained, but gave no further details.

''The total number of political prisoners in the country is 751, including 694 (Moslem) extremists,'' Moussa said.

''About 600 other prisoners held on criminal charges have been released since I took over (last month),'' he said.

In a related development, police sources said authorities on Thursday released 80 Moslem fundamentalists out of a group of 150 arrested after renewed clashes last month with police in Asyut, a hotbed of Moslem extremism south of Cairo.

Authorities at the time said only 11 fundamentalists were arrested after police shot to death a Moslem leader while trying to disperse scores of demonstrators in the town, some 218 miles south of Cairo.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak's Western-oriented administration has kept up the 70-year-old ban on the Moslem Brotherhood. Moslem extremists were blamed for the assassination in 1981 of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Egyptian human rights groups have accused the Cairo government of torturing political prisoners, but the government has denied this.

NEW YORK (FEB. 9) UPI - Kathleen Sullivan has been dropped as co-anchor of ''CBS This Morning'' as the network struggles to regain a lead in the ratings race, her spokesman said Friday.

John Scanlon, spokesman for Sullivan, said the early morning anchorwoman had been told by the network she would lose her job on the show but was not informed when.

''She's obviously disappointed,'' Scanlon said. ''She has been very pleased with her contributions to the show but it's a change that management wanted to make at this time.''

''Kathleen will cooperate fully at any time, whenever they bring in the new person,'' he said. ''Conversations are beginning with CBS and we hope she will be able to remain there.''

No mention of Sullivan's departure was made during Friday's broadcast, in which Sullivan reported from Atlanta.

Neither Sullivan nor CBS officials were available for comment.

The report came as the CBS news division was embroiled in another controversy, suspending ''60 Minutes'' essayist Andy Rooney for three months following an interview in which he was quoted as saying black people ''watered down'' their genes because the less intelligent have the most children.

Rooney vehemenently denied he had said any such thing.

The New York Daily News said rumors were circulating that the network was negotiating with Paula Zahn, co-anchor of ABC's ''World News This Morning '' to replace Sullivan. ABC would not comment on the report.

Sullivan's contract runs out in September and Scanlon said her agent, Ron Kovecky, was looking for new assignments for her.

The newswoman has been at the center of two controversial incidents in the past year.

In September she referred to her employer over a microphone as the ''Cheap Broadcasting System,'' and, unbeknownst to her, the remarks were broadcast on the company's closed-cicruit TV system.

In October Sullivan appeared on the ''Donahue'' show and said, ''The ax is right there. If we don't get viewers, my days are numbered.''

However, after both remarks, CBS executives maintained they would stand behind Sullivan.

Sullivan's difficulties recalled NBC's decision last year to replace ''Today,'' show host Jane Pauley, a 13-year veteran, with newcomer Deborah Norville. The network promised Pauley a chance to host a prime-time magazine show when she stepped aside.

NEW YORK (FEB. 9) UPI - Avon Products Inc. is facing a proxy fight with an investor group led by oil heir Gordon Getty, the Fisher real estate family and executives of cosmetics rival Mary Kay Corp., according to a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The group, Chartwell Associates, disclosed Thursday that it has raised its stake in the company from 8.7 percent to 9.1 percent and will seek four seats on Avon's 11-member board.

Avon, whose board has maintained a desire to remain independent since takeover overtures were first sounded last year, declined to comment on Chartwell's actions.

According to the filing, Chartwell, which purchased 224,200 Avon shares between Jan. 12 and Feb. 6 for about $7.1 million, or $31.66 a share, will nominate two members of the Fisher family and two Mary Kay executives for positions on Avon's board.

Chartwell said the move was intended to push Avon's board to sell the company, noting that the current board is not amenable to such a proposal.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Consumer activists Friday praised a government move to cap an ''explosion'' of health claims on food products, but said even stronger steps should be taken to protect Americans from misleading messages.

The Food and Drug Administration proposed new regulations Friday that would sharply restrict food health claims to well documented links between diet and disease, such as low-fat foods reducing risk of heart disease.

The rules would replace a 1987 plan put forth by the Reagan administration allowing health claims for food products - an action that created an avalanche of labels and advertisements touting everything from cereals to margarine as disease preventers.

Before that, the FDA had barred companies for making claims linking a food to prevention or treatment of a particular disease.

''In hindsight, the 1987 proposal has proved to be too permissive,'' said Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan. ''An interim policy is needed to serve as a mid-course correction and provide guidance to industry on what health messages will and will not be allowed.''

''Only with such a consistent set of standards can Americans be sure of the meaning of health information on food labels,'' Sullivan said.

The new proposal would allow companies to make health claims only if they fall within a narrow range of messages on relationships between diet and health benefits. Recent nutritional studies by the U.S. surgeon general and the National Academy of Sciences would be used as the yardstick.

The FDA would consider claims in six areas: fats and heart disease, fiber and heart disease, salt and high blood pressure, fats and cancer, fiber and cancer and calcium and osteoporosis, or ''brittle bone'' disease.

''As science finds additional links between diet and health, these could also be included in our health messages policy,'' Sullivan said.

Charles Mitchell, a lawyer for Center for Science in the Public Interest, called the proposal ''definitely a step in the right direction.''

''It is a real improvement over the 1987 proposal, and if it is enforced well, it should stop some of the most grievous claims,'' Mitchell said.

The new rules probably would not allow claims like those trumpeting that vitamin B in cereal can boost energy and the vitamin A in butter can make skin smooth, he said.

One shortfall of the proposal is that it fails to cover general claims that a food is ''high-fiber'' or ''low cholesterol,'' but which do not mention a specific disease, Mitchell said.

''The explosion in health claims in the last few years has created a situation where a company doesn't even need to mention a disease to trade in on a general public perception, such as low cholesterol reducing risk for heart disease,'' he said.

Mitchell said new regulations must ensure that a food making a health claim is nutritionally sound overall. For example, he said cereals should not be allowed to make fiber-cancer health claims, if they contain high levels of fat or sodium, which boost the risk of other diseases.

Nearly 40 percent of foods introduced in the first half of 1989 bore health claims and one-third of the $3.6 billion spent on food advertising features health-related messages, the industry estimates.

The National Food Processors Association had no immediate comment on the government policy shift.

The FDA proposal would set up model labels for health claims, and require manufacturers to prepare scientific and consumer summaries explaining the reasoning behind their claims. Companies would not have to present test data to support specific health claims unless asked.

The proposal will be published in the Federal Register next week, and will be followed by a 60-day comment period.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Antonia Novello made her first appearance before the Senate committee considering her nomination as surgeon general Friday and was greeted warmly by panel members who avoided the touchy issue of abortion.

Novello, 45, a pediatrician born in Puerto Rico, would be the first woman and the first Hispanic to serve in the post. The Senate Labor and Resources Committee is tenatively scheduled to vote on her nomination Feb. 28.

In her appearance before the panel, she pledged to continue the crusades of her predecessor, C. Everett Koop, against smoking, AIDS, drugs and alcohol.

Novello's views and qualifications were both praised by senators including Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the committee, and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the ranking Republican member, on whose staff Novello served as an adviser.

No attention was paid to Novello's opposition to abortion, even though at the time of her nomination Nov. 1 the Bush administration came under attack for ruling out other possible candidates because of their views on the subject.

An aide to one of the Democrats on the committee said the issue was avoided because Novello has not been an outspoken opponent of abortion in the past and is not likely to play a major role on the issue in the future.

''We think she's a good person who we can work with and that (abortion) is something she has no discretion on,'' said the aide. ''She would have to be insane to get involved with it, so why beat up on her?''

Novello, an expert on kidney disease and AIDS in children, has served since 1986 as deputy director of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, one of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

''As a pediatrician, I have been the doctor of little people who have no voice in our society. As a public health physician I have dedicated myself to giving something back to a society that has given me so much,'' she told the panel.

''But I do not come before you as the surgeon general for Hispanics, or the surgeon general for women, or the surgeon general for children. I hope to be the surgeon general for all Americans,'' Novello said.

''My credo will be: good science and good sense.''

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (FEB. 9) UPI - The government wants to rid itself of the private train of former Yugoslav leader Josip Tito, considered one of the most luxurious in the world.

The ''Blue Train'' will be sold, rented or even given away because it has become too expensive to maintain, the official news agency Tanjug reported Friday.

The estimated value: $50 million.

About $146,000 is set aside in the Yugoslav budget annually for maintenance of the vehicle that has been guarded around the clock since the days Tito ruled Yugoslavia, Tanjug said.

The train has two engines and 20 cars, each lavishly furnished and meticulously maintained.

Tanjug, quoting the Belgrade newspaper Vecernje Novosti, said the train wes used by a few top officials after Tito's death in 1980 but has been idle for several years.

GENEVA (FEB. 9) UPI - A World Health Organization specialist said Friday there are about 50 children under 5 with AIDS in Romania and 550 others with the HIV virus that causes the disease.

Dr. David Heymann, an American epidemiologist at WHO headquarters in Geneva, spent four days in Romania this week with Dr. Alexander Gromyko, an AIDS specialist of the Soviet Union who works at the WHO European office in Copenhagen.

''What we found is very serious,'' Heymann told a news conference.

Romanian authorities offically reported 74 cases of AIDS as of January, of which 50 are children below 5 years, he said.

''There are also approximately 550 HIV-infected children,'' Heymann said.

The American specialist cautioned that all figures were approximate because of possible duplications with some children tested more than once.

Earlier this week, the French group Physicians of the World said 367 of 1,025 Romanian children tested carried the HIV virus and about 60 percent had symptoms of AIDS.

Many of the AIDS-stricken children were placed in orphanages and hospitals after being abandoned by mothers unable to feed them.

Heymann said the children may have contracted AIDS from blood transfusions given under government policy that they were necessary to prevent anemia caused by lack of food.

''Nowhere else in eastern or developed countries is there such a practice '' he said. The situation was made even worse in Romania because donated blood was not tested and because syringes often were used several times.

Dr. Jonathan Mann, head of the WHO Program Against AIDS, said the U.N. health agency and the Romanian government will draw up an emergency program to do everything possible to prevent a widening spread of the disease.

WHO will help Romanian authorities launch an immediate education program to warn people how the disease is caught and will help in training medical personnel.

At the WHO European Office in Copenhagen, Gromyko said the systematic testing of donated blood in Romania began only a month ago.

''Before then blood donors and blood were never systematically examined,'' the Soviet epidemiologist said.

''AIDS tests were conducted in only five out of 65 orphanages,'' Gromyko said. ''The situation is especially worrisome in Constanza, on the Black Sea, where we were told that 37 blood donors had been tested HIV positive.

''Responsibility lies with the Ceausescu regume which let the health system decay for years and failed to provide sufficient food,'' he said. ''That is how so many children received blood transfusions to give them proteins to save their lives.''

WHO European office director Jo Asvall said there may be many more cases of child AIDS in Romania.

''I fear that systematic testing could show that we so far have seen only the tip of the iceberg,'' he said.

BONN, WEST GERMANY (FEB. 9) UPI - East Germany's rapidly deteriorating economy and the question of German reunification will be the main topics at talks in Moscow between the West German and Soviet leaders this weekend a senior government source said Friday.

The source said the planned talks between Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and similar meetings with Western leaders were partly aimed at allaying fears about the planned reunification of the two German states.

Kohl was scheduled to travel for a two-day visit to Moscow Saturday.

''Kohl will stress he is not seeking any timetable for German unity and that this process will take place within a European framework,'' the government source said in Bonn.

A senior Soviet official said earlier that Moscow needed concrete guarantees that a unified Germany would never again pose a military threat to European security.

Valentin Falin, the Soviet Politburo's expert on German affairs, told East Berlin's Neues Deutschland daily that the security balance in Europe was the most important aspect of German reunification.

''It is decisive in how far this reunification - or unification - process is compatible with the security interests of all European nations, including the German nation itself,'' he said in the interview published Friday, on the eve of Kohl's visit to Moscow.

Falin reiterated that the Soviet Union was willing to pull out its military troops from East Germany and said the presence of foreign armed forces in Germany was a remnant of the Cold War.

The senior government source in Bonn, who asked not to be named, said Kohl and Gorbachev would also discuss European developments, including arms control and disarmament issues.

He said the talks would largely focus on what he termed ''the dramatic developments'' in East Germany and the German unification question, including Kohl's offer to introduce the West German currency into East Germany.

The source said that because of the rapidly deteriorating situation in East Germany, it was no longer certain that the East Berlin authorities would be able to hold elections as planned on March 18.

''What we are seeing is a drastic collapse of the state's authority and a grim picture of the economic situation. It could be that within days, East Germany will be insolvent,'' he said.

But in a statement issued after the East German authorities criticized the assessment, West German government spokesman Hans Klein said that was not the official view of the Bonn government.

The source said East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow himself had painted a similar picture of the country during recent talks with Kohl, held against the background of a continuing, economically-crippling migration of East Germans to West Germany.

The official said Kohl would discuss with Gorbachev a series of emergency measures he intended to present to Modrow when the East German premier visits Bonn next week.

He said Kohl hoped the Moscow meeting would be followed by further talks this year because he considered Gorbachev to have played a major role in the reform process in East Germany.

The source said the two leaders would also discuss bilateral relations, including West German aid to Moscow and the future of ethnic Germans in the Soviet Union.

Klein announced Friday the Bonn government was giving emergency aid totaling $130 million to the Soviet Union for the purchase of 142,000 tons of food from European Community countries.

At the end of the month, Kohl is due to travel to Camp David, Maryland, where he is expected to brief President Bush on his meetings with Gorbachev and Modrow.

SAN FRANCISCO (FEB. 9) UPI - Longshoremen who refused to unload two ships carrying coffee beans from El Salvador went back to work Friday after shipping officials reached a settlement with peace protesters.

Protesters took down their picket lines on the docks after officials for one of the shipping lines agreed not to unload the Salvadoran coffee in San Francisco.

The two ships were targeted as part of a boycott against Salvadoran coffee a principal source of income for that nation's government, Glen Schneider a protest organizer, said.

Members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, which has endorsed the boycott by several anti-war groups, refused to cross the picket lines, union local secretary Bill Watkins said.

Protesters first picketed the container ship Barcelona of the Ned Lloyd Lines, moored at Pier 80, on Thursday. Friday morning, they moved the picket lines to Pier 94, where the Ciudad de Buenaventura of Grandcolombiana Lines was moored.

After about 80 protesters tied up the congested dock area, the pier director said longshoremen would not be asked to unload Salvadoran coffee from the second ship.

The ship's next port of call is Vancouver, British Colombia. Protest organizers said they would try to set up a picket line there to prevent the coffee from being unloaded.

Longshoremen began unloading Salvadoan coffee from the Barcelona Friday because protesters had taken down their picket line. A protest organizer said they felt they had made their point by delaying the unloading and made a ''tactical'' decision to target the second ship.

The protesters began their boycott of Salvadoran coffee after the killing of six Jesuit priests last November, allegedly by members of the Salvadoran military.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Bank of Japan Governor Yasushi Mieno would reaffirm Tokyo's commitment to the stability of world exchange markets in his meetings with Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan and Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady Friday, Japanese sources said.

Mieno has come to Washington for talks with Greenspan on monetary problems ''including the reaffirmation of the G-7 coordination to stabilize foreign exchange markets,'' a Japanese central bank official said in Tokyo.

The Group of Seven leading industrial countries comprises the United States, Japan, West Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Canada. G-7 officials meet periodically to coordinate economic policies in order to maintain the stability of world financial markets.

A financial source said Mieno, a veteran of Japanese domestic policies but with not much experience in international affairs, wanted to become acquainted with his U.S. counterparts and become more familiar with G-7 procedures.

''He is not so familiar with these small groups, and it would not be good if he joined them without (previously) seeing various persons'' from the G-7, the source said.

Mieno planned to meet Greenspan, Brady and E. Gerald Corrigan, the president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, the most important bank in the Federal Reserve system, the financial source said.

''This is a courtesy visit, to get acquainted with U.S. counterparts,'' the source said. ''There are not going to be any official discussions or negotiations.''

Mieno succeeded Satoshi Sumita at the helm of the Japanese central bank Dec. 16.

Recently Japan and West Germany raised their interest rates, causing U.S. rates to firm.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (FEB. 9) UPI - The Vatican and Hungary resumed full diplomatic relations Friday after a lapse of 45 years, and both sides heralded a new era of cooperation in Hungary's more democratic environment.

Prime Minister Miklos Nemeth and Cardinal Agostina Casaroli, secretary of state for the Vatican, signed the agreement in a formal ceremony in the Parliament building.

Hungary became the second formerly communist-ruled country in Eastern Europe to re-establish full relations with the Vatican. Poland, the homeland of Pope John Paul II, re-established full relations July 17, 1989.

Non-aligned Yugoslavia is the only other communist-ruled country to have diplomatic relations with the Vatican, having re-estblished them in 1971.

''This puts an end to many decades of expectations and I am very happy today,'' said Casaroli, who signed the document in the presence of Hungarian Primate Cardinal Laszlo Paskai.

Nemeth termed it a ''historic moment'' that will only be superceded by the pope's visit in September 1991.

Later at a joint news conference, Casaroli sought to contrast the elaborate plans for Hungary with the pope's brief visit to Czechoslovakia scheduled this spring at the invitation of non-communist President Vaclav Havel.

The demand for the latter visit ''is great and pressing'' because Czechoslovakia's ties with the Holy See are much weaker, he said. The former communist leadership, which was deposed last November, refused to permit the appointment of several bishops and sanctioned wide-scale harassment of believers.

Nemeth asked that the Vatican also pay close attention to the developments in Romania, which has a large Hungarian Catholic population primarily in Transylvania.

''We would welcome if a Hungarian archbishop were to be appointed at Alba Iulia, Transylvania,'' he said.

The two also discussed the possibility of opening theology departments at Hungarian universities, the official Hungarian news agency MTI said.

The accord signed in Budapest is the result of steady improvement in bilateral relations during the past several years, culminating in a new law guaranteeing religious freedom adopted by the Hungarian parliament last month.

Casaroli, 70, has been the main architest of the Vatican's East European policy for 27 years. He first visited Hungary in 1963 to negotiate an agreement with communist Hungary that he still regards as one of his greatest achievements.

The agreement recognized the roman Catholic Church and lifted many state restrictions on its activities, including relinquishing state power over all church appointments and institutions.

The Roman Catholic Church has traditionally played a prominent political and social role in Hungary. Before World War II, it controlled half of the educational institutions and had close ties with political parties, charitable organizations and social groups and Catholic bishops were ex-officio members of parliament.

Following the communist takeover, authorities expelled the apostolic nuncio, confiscated church lands and schools and dissolved more than 4,000 Catholic associations.

The Hungarian primate, Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty, was arrested in December 1948, tortured and sentenced to life in prison for ''high treason.''

Mindszenty was freed during the 1956 revolution but when it was crushed by Soviet troops, he sought shelter in the U.S. legation where he stayed for several years. In 1971, on instructions from the Vatican, he moved to Vienna, Austria, where he died and was buried at Mariazell outside of the Austrian capital on May 6, 1975.

On Thursday, Casaroli officiated at a funeral mass rehabilitating Mindszenty on the 41st anniversary of his sentencing. The mass was held in the archbishopric seat of Estergom on the Danube 50 miles northwest of Budapest.

Acting President Matyas Szuros, who attended the mass said, ''The charges (brought against him) were lies.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - President Bush presented the fourth annual Flo Hyman award Friday to Chris Evert, saying the retired tennis star represented the game as well as ''your country with great sportsmanship and dignity.''

''We will all miss you on the professional tennis circuit. (Tennis rivals) Martina Navratilova and Pam Shriver may not miss you,'' Bush said, drawing laughter from a gathering of standout female athletes. ''But we will.''

The Flo Hyman award for courage and dedication is named for the Olympic volleyball star who died in 1986. It is sponsored by the Women's Sports Foundation.

Among those attending the White House ceremony were race car driver Lyn St. James, the foundation's president, golfer Carol Mann, basketball star Nancy Lieberman-Cline and Shriver.

Evert, 35, retired from professional tennis last year after winning 18 Grand Slam events.

''Chris, you long represented not just the game of tennis but your country with great sportsmanship and dignity,'' Bush said. ''You are a role model for our nation's young women.''

Evert thanked Bush for ''taking the time, juggling your schedule,'' to present her with the award, and suggested that while he pushes to upgrade America's schools, he also place additional emphasis on physical education for children.

''This would help make kids more alert,'' she said.

The president concurred and said this was a goal.

At the close of the ceremony, golfer Mann, active in anti-drug programs, wished Bush well at next week's drug summit in Cartagena, Colombia, where heavy security will be imposed in response to threats from cocaine cartels.

''It will be fine,'' Bush said. ''It will be fine.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Rates for 30-year fixed mortgages edged up by 0.04 percentage points this week while adjustable-rate mortgages rose by 0.01 percentage points, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said Friday.

The agency, which buys mortgages from lenders and packages them as securities for sale to investors, said interest on fixed-rate loans rose to 10.21 percent this week, from 10.17 percent the week before. Adjustable-rate mortgages averaged 8.46 percent, up from 8.45 percent last week.

The fixed-rate average is for a 30-year loan covering 80 percent of a home's cost. The average adjustable-rate mortgage also is for 30 years but for 75 percent of the home price.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Five senators from the Northeast and Midwest proposed legislation Friday aimed at heading off a repeat of the surge in home heating oil prices that occurred last December.

In an effort to prevent price gouging, the bill would make it a criminal offense to knowingly create a fuel shortage for the purpose of increasing oil prices, and it also seeks extra money to help poor Americans pay heating bills.

The proposal was put together by Sens. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., and Carl Levin, D-Mich., and also sponsored by Sens. William Cohen, R-Maine, Herbert Kohl, D-Wis., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I.

Oil industry officials have said the year-end price hikes were the obvious result of increased demand for heating oil during the coldest December on record. Adding to upward price pressures, they argued, was an explosion at a large Baton Rouge, La., refinery and some oil tankers' inability to navigate frozen waterways.

But during House and Senate hearings last month, members of Congress and consumer activists accused oil companies of manipulating supplies in order to jack up prices and called for a federal investigation into possible price gouging.

''Under this (proposed legislation), the attorney general would not have to prove collusion or conspiracy among companies,'' Levin said Friday. ''The act of one company individual or company would be enough.''

The Justice Department said it has begun reviewing oil company records concerning price increases and also is awaiting the results of a review by the Energy Department.

Lieberman said 25 senators have sent a letter to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh urging a rigorous investigation into alleged price gouging.

''Our response here today is to try and encourage, push the Justice Department to pursue a very aggressive investigation, not just to wait for information to come to them,'' he said.

Other provisions of the bill include an emergency supplemental appropriation of $300 million to the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program, which President Bush has proposed cutting by 25 percent in his new budget. It also would require the Energy Department to notify states when petroleum inventories fall below certain levels, and orders the Commodities Futures Trading Commission to look into heating oil prices.

Lieberman said the Senate leadership has not given commitments to passage of the $300 million request, but it has received ''some sympatheic responses.''

''We know that there will be a supplemental appropriations bill that will come along this fiscal year, and we hope and are committed to working to make sure that part of it adds more money to LIHEAP,'' Lieberman said.

Cohen said he expects the administration to oppose the supplemental request. ''Nonetheless,'' he said, ''I think that by raising this issue at least we can call upon the administration to come up with some other alternative.''

JERUSALEM (FEB. 9) UPI - Maverick Israeli activist Abie Natan was released from prison after serving four months for meeting with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat and vowed to press his personal campaign for peace.

In the Israeli-occupied West Bank, one Arab was killed by army gunfire, Palestinian sources said.

Natan, 63, was sentenced in October to six months in prison for violating a 1986 Israeli law forbidding contacts with terrorist organizations - the first Israeli imprisoned for violating the law.

His sentence was reduced to four months for good behavior. Natan met with Arafat and other senior officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Tunis, Tunisia, in September 1988.

''It is not possible that all over the world people are speaking to each other and we are not,'' Natan told Israel Radio after his release. ''All the enemies all over the world are speaking. There will be no other way to a solution.''

Natan, who operated the pirate radio station Voice of Peace, said he would continued his efforts even if it meant another prison term.

''If I were to spend all my life in prison, I would not hesitate,'' he told the radio, ''If I were to spend only one day in prison, I would not stop because the law that put me behind bars for 122 days is the worst kind of law that is possible. It is undemocratic.'' Natan, a bomber pilot in Israel' 1948 War of Independence, flew his 1927 biplane to Port Said, Egypt, a few weeks after a ceasefire halted the 1967 Arab-Israel war. He was imprisoned for 40 days for his unauthorized peace mission.

His latest peace efforts come amid a popular Palestinian revolt against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which erupted in December 1987 and diplomatic concessions by Arafat and the PLO.

In the occupied territories Friday, shops were closed and workers stayed home in observance of general strike called to mark the start of the 27th month of the uprising.

In the West Bank village of Kabatiya, Abdel Kader Iqmail, 20, was shot in the stomach during a stone-throwing incident. He was pronounced dead at Jenin Hospital, hospital officials said. Seven other villagers were wounded, Palestinian sources said.

In Gaza, Palestinian sources identified a man found stabbed to death Thursday in Gaza City as Mahmoud Ahmed Jalak, 38, who was suspected of collaborating with Israeli authorities.

Military sources said the army had received a report of an Arab killed and two wounded in Kabatiya and was investigating.

Since the start of the uprising, 638 Palestinians have been killed by Israelis and about 170 Arabs suspected of collaborating killed by other Arabs.

LISBON, PORTUGAL (FEB. 9) UPI - Brazil's president-elect, Fernando Collor de Mello, met Friday with Portuguese leaders to discuss bilateral relations and the possibility of Portugal serving as a door into Europe for Brazil.

Collor began his 24-hour private visit by meeting with President Mario Soares for 90 minutes at Belem Palace, the official residence.

Later, he was hosted at a working luncheon by Prime Minister Anibal Cavaco Silva at Sao Bento Palace and held talks with Parliament Speaker Vitor Crespo.

''Brazil sees in Portugal the great possibility of access to the European continent,'' Collor told reporters after meeting with Soares at the pink-stucco presidential palace overlooking the Tagus River estuary.

Soares, who was to host Collor at a gala dinner Friday night at the 19th-century hilltop Ajuda Palace, said Portugal ''is Brazil's door'' to the European Community. Soares accepted Collor's invitation to his March 15 presidential inauguration in Brasilia and said the two leaders had agreed to ''strengthen contacts'' through frequent telephone conversations.

A spokesman in the prime minister's office said the talks had been ''the warmest possible,'' centered on increasing cultural, trade and joint-venture ties between the two Portuguese-speaking countries.

Collor, who arrived from London Thursday night, was to fly to Madrid early Saturday on the last leg of a whirlwind world tour which also took him to the United States, Japan, the Soviet Union, West Germany, France and Italy.

In London Thursday, Collor met with officials, businessmen and royalty to discuss Brazil's debt and the growing international outcry over the destruction of Brazil's Amazon rain forests.

Collor, who was elected president Dec. 17, met Prince Charles and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher during his 24-hour visit to the British capital.

The 40-year-old Collor was the target of protests in Britain over the decimation of the Amazon rain forests and his nation's treatment of the 9,000 remaining members of the Yanomami tribe. They are threatened with extinction by advancing gold prospectors.

Collor, in a lunchtime speech delivered to leading businessmen, said, ''I am well aware of the far-reaching consequences of this ecological drama that is unfolding.

''This is a task for a generation, not a government ... I will endeavor to combat the political, ideological and even electoral exploitation of this issue,'' he said.

GAINESVILLE, FL (FEB. 9) UPI - Mankind has yet to find a bonafide aphrodisiac, but it's not for lack of trying, a University of Florida anthropologist said.

''Almost everything you can think of has been used as an aphrodisiac -including tree bark, shark's fin and hippopotamus snout,'' George Armelagos, chairman of UF's anthropology department and co-author of the book ''Consuming Passions,'' said Friday.

Apples, bananas, peaches, cucumbers and sweet potatoes are some of the more common foods that have been extolled for heightening sexual desire and potency, he said.

''The prune was thought to be such a strong aphrodisiac that the brothels in Elizabethan England would serve them to their customers,'' Armelagos said.

Then, when Ireland's population boomed, the English assumed the potato was responsible.

No food has ever been proven to be an aphrodisiac, although researchers are testing the bark of the Yohimbene tree, native to West Africa, to see if it stimulates erections by irritating the bladder and lower end of the spine, Armelagos said.

''The brain is the most important sexual organ,'' he said. ''If you think Saltines will work, then you've got a good, cheap aphrodisiac.''

Often foods that are perceived to enhance sexual desire may add to physical or mental well-being because they are good sources of protein, such as eggs, caviar and oysters, he said.

''Almost any food has the properties of an aphrodisiac because the very act of eating causes an increase in the pulse rate and the blood pressure, raising body temperature and sometimes even producing sweating - changes that occur with orgasm,'' he said.

Alcohol, especially champagne, is often thought to be an aphrodisiac.

''Although champagne is a noted ingredient in seduction scenes, whatever effectiveness it may have is probably due to the flattery of being offered an expensive commodity - as well as the titillation produced by the ejaculative pop as the bottle is opened,'' he said.

A popular Valentine Day's gift - chocolate - has a substance called phenylethelalanine that accumulates in the pleasure centers of the brain, mimicking what happens during sexual activity, he said.

MILTON, FL (FEB. 9) UPI - A jury was selected Friday after less than two days of questioning to hear testimony in the murder trial of a spiritual adviser accused of persuading a woman to starve her toddler to rid her of evil spirit.

Opening statements will be given Monday beginning at 9 a.m. CST in the trial of Mary Nicholson, 39, of Pace, Fla.. She is charged with first-degree murder and aggravated child abuse in the Feb. 8, 1988 death of a 4-year-old.

The prosecution has said it would not seek the death penalty.

Kimberly McZinc weighed only 25 pounds - about half the average weight for a child her age - when she was brought to a local hospital with bruises on her body. At the trial of the girl's mother, a pediatrician said the child was skin and bones.

Nicholson is accused of convincing the girl's mother, Darlene Jackson, 33, that her daughter was possessed by six demons. Nicholson, Jackson's spiritual adviser, is accused of ''torturing and maliciously punishing'' the child.

Jackson pleaded guilty last March to third-degree murder and child abuse while the jury was deliberating. She is now the chief prosecution witness against Nicholson.

Jackson and her daughter lived with the Nicholson family in a mobile home from July 1987 until the child's death. She claimed the evangelist cast a religious trance over her to persuade her the toddler was evil.

Raye, 73, recently suffered a stroke, one of the reasons veterans groups around the country are pushing to get her the medal. ''If her own days are dwindling down now to a precious few, she deserves that medal a thousands times over but she deserves far more,'' wrote O'Connor, who also serves as the military vicar for the nation's armed forces. ''She deserves the prayers of countless veterans and of those who loved them. She has mine.'' Raye received two Purple Hearts after being wounded helping medical personnel with injured soldiers. ''Raye didn't need the big showcases, the extravaganzas that played at big bases for thousands of troops,'' O'Connor said. ''She went into the jungle, into little caves and lean-tos, into the holes dug out of the sides of mountains.''

LONDON (FEB. 9) UPI - Stock prices closed lower Friday on the London International Stock Exchange, with investors cautiously awaiting a new round of corporate results next week.

The Financial Times 100-stock index dropped 17.4 points to close at 2,313.6, after staging a small recovery late in the session from a low of 2,308.5 points in early afternoon.

The narrower top 30 industrial average was down 14.6 points at 1,830.7 points.

Volume was about 521 million shares, up from 456 million shares traded Thursday.

Traders said they were concerned about inflationary pressure in Europe and the United States, and were waiting for direction from more corporate reports to be issued next week.

In Washington, the Labor Department reported that wholesale prices surged by 1.8 percent in January, in the biggest jump since the 1974 energy crisis. The rate increase was fueled by sharply higher oil and gas prices.

The report, however, did not significantly affect the market, dealers said.

Traders did not react strongly, either, to political developments between the two German states. Karl Otto Poehl, the president of West Germany's powerful Bundesbank, endorsed proposals for the introduction of the West German mark to East Germany, saying it would be a major step toward reunification of the two countries.

Takeover speculations which had helped boost the stock of Royal Bank of Scotland were crushed when the bank announced the sale of some assets to Scottish Equitable Life Assurance Society. The bank lost 17 cents to $3.38.

Bass lost 41 cents to $16.59.

EuroDisney lost 40 cents to $18.63 on profit taking after several days of strong advances.

Poor financial results including a $5.3 million loss drove Sock Shop down 15 cents to 80 cents, and Body Shop fell 34 cents to $9.52 in sympathy.

In the insurance sector, which briefly recovered Thursday after sustained worries over the impact of a storm over Britain, General Accident was down 20 cents to $19.34.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - A priest who was operating the largest of two temples aligned with the Rev. George Stallings' breakaway black church has left the fold and seeking a return to the Catholic Church.

The Rev. Bruce Greening, in a letter to the Archdiocese of Washington, said he does not want to follow Stallings into excommunication from the church.

Stallings last summer started the independent Imani Temple in Washington, claiming that black Catholics needed more freedom to celebrate their African heritage with their Catholic faith.

But last week he declared he was forming an entirely new denomination - the African-American Catholic Congregation - and recanted any link to Rome. He also declared his church will permit abortion, married priests and the ordination of women, all in direct contradiction to Catholic teaching.

The archdiocese said Stallings ''excommunicated himself'' by the move and said his followers are in danger of being excommunicated.

A spokesman for Stallings said he would likely issue a statement Friday afternoon.

Greening's letter said, ''We are Catholics who recognize the authority of the pope and we have no desire to follow the course of separation from the Catholic Church.''

He said he still seeks the ''an African-American rite within the Catholic Church,'' and said: ''We hope to pursue dialogue toward the institution of that rite.''

''Father Greening's letter was received and is being carefully studied,'' Eileen Marx, a spokeswoman for Cardinal James Hickey, archbishop of Washington, said Friday. ''Every avenue of reconciliation consistent with the faith and practice of the Catholic Church will be pursued.''

Stallings claims to have 2,500 parishoners at his Imani Temple, Greening's Umoja Temple and a third minor branch - the Kujichagulia Temple in Norfolk Va., which has about 50 parishoners.

But The Washington Post reported Friday that the 300 parishoners from Greening's Umoja Temple make up nearly 25 percent of the faithful and that virtually all of those 300 have broken with Stallings and w.ould remain with Greening in a separate church.

''As a black American Catholic, I still like the concept of an African-American Catholic Congregation,'' said a parishoner supporting Greening, who asked not to be named. ''We're serious about why we left in the first place. We still believe the church is racist. But we want to stay Catholic. We didn't buy on to be excommunicated. We just followed the wrong man.''

One parishoner said most of those remaining with Stallings are non-Catholics.

Stallings, 41, formed the Imani Temple in July, claiming the church was too slow in responding to the needs of blacks.

He initially said he hoped to speed changes within the Catholic Church and eventually return, and said he would not deviate from church teaching on critical issues such as abortion and celibacy for priests.

But Stallings continued to widen the rift, appearing on numerous talk shows and making combative statements against a ''white racist'' church.

In September, The Post ran a story alleging Stallings - a priest in the nation's capital for more than a dozen years - had a sexual relationship with a 16-year-old alter boy.

Stallings denied the charge, calling the newspaper ''racist.''

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Presidential anti-drug chief William Bennett disputed a senator's claim Friday that the federal government welched on a promise to help the District of Columbia fight its twin epidemics of drugs and violence.

To the contrary, Bennett and a top aide told the Senate Budget Committee that any bureaucratic foul-ups and ineptitute were on the part of the D.C. government, which failed to apply for some availble anti-drug funds despite repeated requests to do so from Bennett's office.

''We have done everything that we have committed to do,'' Bennett told budget panel Chairman Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., who questioned why the federal government wasn't doing more in the nation's capital.

''We're frankly getting tired of being flogged for a problem that is not our responsibility to solve,'' Bennett said. ''They (cities) have to heal themselves. ... Sooner or later, the responsibility is local. People have to save themselves.''

Bennett, who heads President Bush's Office of National Drug Control Policy announced shortly after taking office last year that the nation's capital would be designated for special anti-drug help from the federal government.

The district was targeted, Bennett told Sasser, because the nation's capital was ''bleeding to death.''

The disrict's murder rate led the nation last year, with most killings believed to have been drug-related. And the number of murders this year is far ahead of last year's record pace.

Bennett had earlier promised that the federal government would help relieve chronic prison overcrowding by transferring some prisoners to federal prisons. He also promised to help the district build a new detention facility and hospital and to provide other anti-drug aid.

But Sasser cited a long list of various types of anti-drug assistance, costing $102 million, that the city had requested from Bennett's office but had not received and asked Bennett about the discrepency.

Bruce Carnes, Bennett's director of planning, budget and administration, said the district request totaled $90 million and ''we have made those resources available.''

Some funds made available to the district, Carnes said, were not utilized because the city failed to apply for the money despite warnings that the funding availability would lapse if the application was not completed on time,

''It lapsed,'' Carnes said.

Sasser and other senators on the budget panel also said that officials in their states have complained that they have not yet received the additional money approved last year for for state and local government anti-drug efforts.

''Somehow those funds don't seem to be arriving,'' Sasser said.

''It is in the pipeline and it is coming,'' Carnes assured Sasser.

Bennett, in response to a question, also said he believes that drug use is less now nationwide than it was last year.

NEWPORT BEACH, CA (FEB. 9) UPI - A 2-inch wide band of light brown foam and thumb-sized oil globules washed up on Southern California beaches but a shift of winds Friday raised hopes that a 300,000-gallon slick spilled by a disabled tanker would drift away.

''The change in the winds is pushing it away from the shore again,'' said Coast Guard Petty Officer Elizabeth Neely, adding that a ''pretty calm'' sea also was helping in cleanup efforts.

Police Lt. Tim Newman said the city of Newport Beach, an upscale enclave dominated by multimillion-dollar homes, declared a state of emergency early Friday after the oily muck from the tanker American Trader drifted south from Huntington Beach and washed up along at least 5 miles of beach.

Some 250 people, including professional crews hired by British Petroleum, were involved in cleanup efforts along the sands, kneeling on the sands and using rags to mop up the mess in California's worst spill since 3.2 million gallons of crude fouled beaches in Santa Barbara in 1969.

Coast Guard Chief Warrant Rick Meidt described the oil washing ashore as ''very thin brownish granules'' carried in by high tide and leaving a 2-inch-wide band of muck.

The heaviest concentrations of the oil appeared near the Newport Beach and Huntington Beach piers, he said.

On Thursday, after hours of optimistic predictions that favorable winds conditions would keep the purplish slick offshore, the first waves of sheen, thumb-sized oil globs and droplets hit the sand at Newport Beach shortly before nightfall. The threat to sensitive wetlands nearby, however, apparently eased.

The oil, in some places as thick as honey, also washed up to the north, around the Huntington Beach Pier, polluting about a quarter-mile of the beach in that area.

Meidt said a decision was made Friday not to use chemical dispersants because of their toxicity to snails, halibut and other bottom-dwelling creatures of the sea. ''The disadvantages outweigh the benefits (of using dispersants),'' he said.

Offshore, meanwhile, efforts continued to contain the slick, which measured about 6 miles long and 3 miles wide. A total of 10 skimming boats including four from the Navy, was on the scene or arriving Friday.

With the flow of oil stemmed, crews on the 20-year-old ship Friday were continuing to pump out about 300,000 gallons of oil remaining in the damaged forward compartment, one of 15 on the ship. The effort was expected to be wrapped up by Friday evening.

Residents, who said they could smell the spill as far away as two miles inland, gathered on the beach once again Friday, some helping in the cleanup, others decrying the situation.

''It's unbelievable. It's simply awful. I can't understand what they (cleanup crews) can accomplish using just those towels,'' said Joni Sellinger. ''How many times does this kind of thing have to happen for them to do something about it?''

Another resident, Jan Probst, said, ''The people around here are very smug. They feel something like this couldn't happen here. Let's see some of them use some of their money to help clean it up.''

The tanker began spewing oil 1 1/2 miles off Huntington Beach Wednesday afternoon, apparently after bouncing on top of its own anchor and opening a 3-foot gash in the bottom of the single-hull ship.

The tanker - chartered by BP and carrying 23.5 million gallons of Alaskan North Slope crude, the same oil that gushed from the Exxon Valdez last March - was trying to dock at an offshore unloading bunker that drains oil from ships and pumps it to refineries ashore.

Divers discovered a second hole in the ship's No. 1 starboard hold, and the No. 2 tank was being monitored for leaks.

The offending oil slick was apparently broken up by winds up to 19 mph as the oil swirled in a circular pattern under the influence of an offshore eddy.

Officials said about 30 percent of the spill is expected to evaporate over the coming days, but no one has been able to estimate how long it would take to clean up. By Friday morning, roughly 5 percent of the spill was recovered.

The spill prompted several state officials to call for federal legislation to require that all tankers be built with double hulls.

Environmental damage seemed to have been kept to minimum, although at least 31 birds were found coated with oil by Friday. Eleven others were found dead.

WASHINGTON (FEB. 9) UPI - Potential settlement of the 10-month-old Pittston coal strike appeared closer Friday with the pending dissolution of all legal matters before the National Labor Relations Board stemming from the walkout.
